INUENDO MAN UNFORGIVABLE.

Of all society disturbers and reputation wreckers the most artful and the most successful is the inuendo man—the vile creature who adopts the policy of the broad hint. He is the malicious insinuator. The thorough-going slanderer is bad enough, but at least he leaves us a loophole of escape. His lie is likely to find him out some time or other. His charge, too, is something definite, something that we can put our finger upon and not indelicately disprove. We can bring him to bay and force him to make good or confess himself the liar he is. But inuendo with the other fellow—the artful insinuator—there is no such means of redress. There is nothing really tangible to lay hold of. He avoids specific accusation, hints but vaguely, and if put so it can easily wriggle out of the difficulty.

When found out, in fact, the malicious hint often does vastly more harm than the full disclosure. It has about it an air of mystery which hangs over a train of imaginings and begets groundless suspicions which would quickly melt into thin air were the whole truth known. More especially is this the case when the evil hint is blended with honest commendation. "He is an honest and a capable man," "but" &c., "Oh, yes, really, hypocritical little "but" that has severed so many friendships and befouled so many a fair name! Where so much of good is spoken and the mean little "but" uttered with a careful eye to the open looking city in the rear, it is like decking out and garlanding the victim for sacrifice. The inuendo is used only as a means of attaining a dastardly purpose. With colors fairer painting the still finer inuendo man. He at least is no hunter. He is a real tactician, a genuine strategist. He is verily the refinement of cruelty.

While we are about the subject it may be in order to recall that it is not only the deliberate, designing insinuator who succeeds in ruining reputations. The best of us sometimes accomplish the same deplorable result without at all intending it. "Evil is wrought by want of thought as well as want of heart." Our good name is like the lily whose whiteness and purity are sullied by the one foul touch. It is so easy, in an unguarded moment, by careless words and hints dropped in the course of a conversation, to inflict a damage which years of effort may be unable to repair. The thoughtless and hair-brained talker may work as much havoc as the malevolent, scoundrelly insinuator. As some one puts it:—Many a shaft at random sent. Finds mark the archer little meant. And many a word at random spoken May hurt or heal a heart nigh broken. It may not be very good poetry, but it is certainly good common sense. There are a few lines from Pope that might be remembered with profit in connection with our theme:—"Speak clearly if you speak at all; carve every word before you let it fall." They lead directly on the matter in hand and afford an excellent model for the best plan is not to speak at all of the evil we see in our fellowmen. But if we must speak, then let us at least be fair and square, just and honest. The whole truth or nothing.

The Guardian has received from Peter McDonald, Crapaud, a stalk of rye that was picked on his farm yesterday. It measured six feet three inches.

F. H. Prefontaine, Inspector of Weights and Measures for the Province of Quebec arrived in the city yesterday morning from Magdalen Islands, and is stopping at the Queen. He is accompanied by Mrs. Prefontaine.

John Mayhew, son of James Mayhew, Summerside, met with a serious accident at his home in North Carlton yesterday as a result of which he now lies in a very precarious condition. Mr Mayhew was endeavoring to catch a horse in the stable which had broken loose from its stall when the animal suddenly kicked with both hind feet striking him on the face, fracturing his jaw bone, breaking his nose and otherwise cutting and disfiguring him.

If your hair is thin, brittle or poorly nourished, apply BEARINE (made from Canadian bear grease). It saves hair. 50c. a jar.

Better far the plain, downright truth than the mean, miserable, malicious hint. Concerning the second point of the poet's advice, it seems to ask a little too much. We scarcely have time to carve every word before letting it fall. But at any rate a little sober reflection on the serious evils—the vast amount of misery, hate and injustice—wrought by careless, imprudent speech might make us very much more guarded and cautious in touching upon the character, conduct, and motives of our neighbors.

We should consider ourselves to blame if we occasioned another's material loss or physical injury, not only by positive acts, but also by gross negligence or carelessness, and his good name is of more concern to him than his material and physical well-being. As for the racially inuendo man, he deserves no mercy of consideration, and should meet with none.
