Assisting in serving were Miss Bernice Wood, Miss Vera Vessey and Mrs. Edna Thompson. Many beautiful and valuable gifts were received by the young couple. Later in the evening, amid showers of confetti, the bride and groom left on their short honeymoon. On their return they will reside at York.

Thrill-Filled Film Coming To Capitol. One of the most spine-tingling mystery films ever to thrill an audience opens today at the Capitol Theatre, when Warner Bros. "The Hidden Hand" opens. It tells the story of an eccentric old woman who uses her insane brother to terrorize her household. The starring roles are played by Craig Stevens, Elisabeth Fraser and Julie Bishop. The eccentric old woman is played by Cecil Cunningham, while that of her insane brother is portrayed by Milton Parsons.

Parsons, who escape from an insane asylum and engineer by his sister, does more than just walk over his bounds and commits murder and attempted killings. But that isn't all. Another killer, even more cunning steps into the scene, the identity of whom will prove a surprise to the most ardent mystery fan. Willie Best lends a comic touch to the film as a secret agent.

Mr. Winkle Goes To War

Mr. Winkle and Mr. Tinker investigated the town together. It was an old-fashioned community, with red brick buildings, and a bewildering air of having for years gone about its quiet affairs and then suddenly found itself with thousands of soldiers on its hands. After a single turn up and down the main street, Mr. Tinker expressed his disgust. "This," he said, "is a grave or almost."

From the tone of his voice Mr. Winkle detected that Mr. Tinker had seen something he hadn't observed. He learned what this was when Mr. Tinker proposed that it was time for a rest. They went way into a bar they had twice visited. Here there was life, especially in the form of a number of young ladies seated at booths.

Mr. Tinker, at a distance, made friends in pantomime with two of them, while the other two, Mr. Winkle drank their beer at the bar. Rather cautiously, Mr. Tinker inquired of Mr. Winkle if he had time to make the acquaintance of the two young ladies.

Mr. Winkle refused as gracefully as he could. "I'm sorry," he said, "but I've offered broad-mindedly. Mr. Tinker regarded him querulously, as if to wonder what he had seen here, and he walked over to the ladies, who received him enthusiastically. They looked after Mr. Winkle curiously when he returned.

Mr. Winkle wandered about by himself. He passed a few rows of things of their own to do. In a gift shop he purchased a pincushion for Amy which had "Camp Squibs" written on it in gold letters. Then, aimlessly walking down a side street, he saw a small building with a sign on it. From there came the low pound of a juke box.

Thinking he might find companionship here, Mr. Winkle went in. Different kinds of young ladies from those Mr. Tinker had searched out were here, dancing with a mob of soldiers. He saw Jack, and they waved to each other.

Mr. Winkle sat in an empty chair at the door. He had no more than occupied it when a pretty young girl came up to him, involuntarily, her eyes widened a little when she saw him, but this didn't prevent her from asking, "Don't you want to dance?"

Mr. Winkle was so startled that he forgot to be polite and get to his feet. He stared at the girl. She could hardly be expected to say "No," he said, "I'll just watch."

"Can I get you something to drink or eat?" she asked. "No, thank you," he said, "but he wasn't thirsty or hungry." "Can't we do anything for you?" she asked. "I know," she said at once. "Well, play checkers."

PLANS FOR PEACE IN SIERRA LEONE

FREETOWN, Dec. 14.—(CP)—Sierra Leone is going ahead with plans for the development of secondary industries. A sub-committee has been set up and it is hoped that means of employment will be established that will be complementary to the scheme for land reclamation and settlement already in hand. The proposed industries include soap-making, boat-building, fish canning, brick making, the production of improved products from local tobacco, furniture making and the making of chocolate for local consumption.

marked on it erased as far as he could see them. He was so hot when he squeezed the trigger that his glasses became clouded and he might as well have been blind. The gun jumped, spitting out a hail of bullets. The vibration was in his hands. It felt like a series of sharp electric shocks. He let go hurriedly. Except for the chatter of other guns down the line, there was silence. Alphonse filled it. "You've told me plenty of ground," he told Mr. Winkle. "Now see what you can do to the target." (To Be Continued)

PISQUID WEST INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of December was held at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Jay with eleven members and three visitors in attendance. The meeting opened with the Institute Ode and recitation of the Creed, followed by the reading and reporting of the minutes. The call was answered by the exchange of Christmas gifts. The reports of the committees were heard and new ones appointed. Sick committee reported visiting the sick and taking care of the sick. Mrs. Kenneth Jay and Mrs. John Ostridge, Program—Mrs. Fred Jay, and Mrs. John Ostridge. School committee reported visiting the school and scrubbing it. School—Mrs. Daniel Birt and Mrs. John D.
