GERMAN AIRPLANES GREATLY OUTMATCHED

Germans Adopted New Tactics in Air Advancing in Large Squadrons. They Have Been Met and Outclassed by British. Several Thrilling Episodes in Air Fighting Related.

(Canadian Press Despatch.) BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE.— Having been virtually driven from the air during the battle of Messines, the German air forces have been attempting to reassert themselves during the past week by adopting the familiar old Teutonic tactics of mass formation. British pilots report that they set out to meet the Germans now in squadrons of less than fifteen machines while occasionally they encountered a nemesis aerial army consisting of from forty to sixty airplanes. None of these great formations has yet been able to cross the British lines for the new tactics have found the royal flying corps prepared and numbers have been met with numbers. Some of the battles of the past few days have found as many as from seventy to eighty machines involved. All these engagements have occurred well inside German territory and have been barely visible, from the British line. The pilots engaged found the fighting so heavy that they had no time to reckon the losses inflicted upon the retreating Germans. Later, however, British machines flew low over the ground counting machines which had been burned or wrecked. After one of these general melees ten enemy airplanes were seen smashed while only two British fliers had been compelled to quit the fight, one of these being able to land within his own lines.

(Canadian Press Despatch.) INTERMITTENT FIGHTING ON FRENCH FRONT.— PARIS.— Intermittent cannonade occurred at various points on the front last night, says today's official statement. BRITISH ABANDON SOME ADVANCED POSITIONS.— LONDON.— The British have fallen back from some of their advanced positions in Northern France, captured on June 14th, according to an official statement. RUSSIAN PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT WINS OVER ANARCHISTS

PETROGRAD.— The forces in the army at the front which are loyal to the provisional government have had the first test of strength with disloyal pacifists, and have won a notable victory. Two days ago Lieut. General St. Cherbacheff, commander on the Roumanian front, gave an order to disband one infantry, one tirailleur and one Siberian tirailleur regiment. Three regiments of another division were ordered to take up a new position, but refused to do so, and thereupon received an order to disband. The soldiers openly mutined. The men of one of the regiments arrested the commander and seven officers, tore their badges from their uniforms, and beat two officers, leaving one insensible on the road. A regimental committee resolved that the regiment should not move; thereupon a loyal committee of soldiers of the whole army, after deliberating with the army staff, pronounced for stern measures against the mutineers the ringleader of whom was named Philippoff.

A resolute general was chosen, having under his command two divisions of loyal cavalry, two battalions of infantry, one light battery, armed motor cars and aeroplanes, and undertook the task of suppressing the revolt. When the loyalist general had occupied positions against the mutineers he sent an ultimatum to them, demanding the surrender of the ringleaders; that they take up positions as ordered, and that they undertake to serve faithfully in the future. The mutinous soldiers seeing that they were surrounded attempted to negotiate, but at the last moment Philippoff incited them to new resistance. The loyalist general immediately ordered his guns into action, whereupon the rebels unconditionally accepted the ultimatum and surrendered Philippoff and others, who were transported to prison in an automobile. The loyalist reserve troops became enraged and fired on the automobile, but their commander, in order to save the prisoners' lives, jumped into the machine, whereupon the firing ceased. There is great rejoicing in Government circles tonight over the first success in the inevitable struggle against the forces of anarchy.

BRITISH CONTROLLER HAS AMPLE POWERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.) LONDON.— Invited to make a statement as to his intended policy as Food Controller Baron Rhonda, President of the local government board, yesterday told the press that it would be obviously premature to enter into details but he could say that the government had given him ample powers.

The British lost but one machine.

Splendid Exhibit of Art and Needlework

The annual exhibition of paintings and drawings and of needlework and crocheting at Notre Dame Academy—the work of the pupils of the Institution—has been greatly admired by all who have been privileged during the past few days to see it. It is unquestionably the finest display of the kind in the history of the Academy. The examples of art work shown are a revelation and it seems almost incredible to think that within the short space of one year the pupils can achieve such a stage of advancement. The work comprises crayon, pastels and oil and the great bulk of it is from the pupils and that of the most advanced makes a very interesting comparison and it is all creditable. Those who have not had the opportunity of seeing the exhibit have missed something worth while, indeed. It will be brought to a conclusion this forenoon. The exhibit of plain and fancy sewing and crocheting is equally fine. The children are taught the work before taking up less necessary tasks and it is really wonderful the perfection they achieve in various kinds of needlecraft and the making of useful articles of apparel.

Costly Experiment in Intoxicants

ST. JOHN.— A little speculation in spirits by members of the crew of a steamer now in port has proved a costly matter for the owners of a vessel. The steamer runs from southern ports, where prohibition is not in effect and stimulants are easy to procure. Some of the crew decided to take advantage of the plentiful supply in the south and the heavy demand in the north and laid in a stock for purposes of sale and barter. Their indiscreet methods in making their sales led to their detection, however, and the vessel was raided by customs officers, with the result that more than 100 bottles of liquor were discovered and seized. Under the law the steamer is responsible in cases of this kind, and it was necessary for the agents to pay a fine of $400 before the matter was settled.
