THE CHOICE OF A HOME

When the choice of a dwelling is to be made, we may be reminded that it is the people who will live in it who will determine whether or not it is real home. Accepting such a statement without discussion we think it is also true that the type of dwelling will either hinder or help in the making of a home.

Development of body and mind requires certain physical conditions. Proper development demands fresh air, water, food, sleep, exercise and protection. It is a matter of common sense, then, to make these obtainable in the dwelling if the home is to give the children those surroundings favorable to healthy growth.

The best mother in the world cannot make fresh air and sunshine appear in a room without a window, any more than she can prepare a proper meal without some cooking facilities.

A baby may thrive for the first year or two in a flat or apartment. After that, he requires space to play in. He should have freedom and should not be restrained within narrow bounds. When there are children, the home should have a yard or, at least, to be near a park where the children may go regularly to play.

During the early years of life, it is much more important for the child that there be a place where he may play with other children than that the house have all the modern comforts and conveniences. In order to live we must have air.

If deprived of air for a few minutes, we cease to live. We require the oxygen in the air to maintain body functions. In addition to providing oxygen, the air in which we live has a tremendous influence a hot, close atmosphere, we are dull and listless, whereas in the fresh, cool air, we feel bright and active.

Everyone, including the children, should live in fresh, cool air. The best place to secure such air is out in the open. Children should spend a large part of their lives playing or sleeping out of doors. Indoors, we should keep the air of the home fresh by ventilation, using suitable doors and windows to keep the air cool and in gentle motion.

In choosing a home, bear in mind the need for playgrounds, and for windows to let in fresh air and sunshine.

"Wall Street" Vivid Drama

Wall street with all its intrigues, plots, counter-plots, its gains, its losses, its hopes and its despairs is vividly dramatized in "Columbia's Wall Street," the powerful all-talking drama of love and finance which opened at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday.

The plot centers about a captain of finance who started life as a humble steel worker. By overpowering energy and a policy of ruthless ness, he forces his way to the top of the financial world. The plan he lives by is to take everything you can get in the world and if it comes from an enemy it is so much the sweeter. Not until he is humbled to the dust by the woman he loves does he see light.

Ralph Ince and Aileen Pringle in the leading roles give outstanding performances.

"Canned Music Krazy Kat" novelty film and Harry Langdon in "The Shrimp" are added feature attractions of this excellent week end bill.

Old Folks' Coughs

Because Resisting Power is Weak Pneumonia Often Follows

Tells of a Never-failing Comfort for Colds, Coughs, Catarrh.

Mrs. M. E. Walford writes from East Sheffield: "For three years I suffered with a hard racking cough and bronchial irritation which annoyed me so much at night I couldn't sleep. I tried many remedies, catarrh tablets, sprays, syrups, etc., but they only helped for a short time. Catarrhose brought me wonderful comfort from the first. I inhaled its balsamic fumes every hour or two, and am now free from any trace of cold, bronchitis and catarrh. I can go out in all kinds of weather, and don't take cold."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhose, but being a good remedy it is limited. Beware of the substitute. Large Catarrhose tins last two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c and 50c. All reliable dealers.

LEADS FIELD BY THIRTEEN STROKES IN SOUTHEASTERN TOURNAMENT

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 2—With a gallery of more than 3,000 stampeding in his path, Robert Tyre Jones, National Open Champion from Atlanta, today shot two brilliant rounds of par-shattering golf and won the southeastern Open tournament here with an aggregate of 284 strokes. The Nation's leading amateur, who leaves late this month for England with the Walker Cup team, led the field of more than three score players by 13 strokes. In second place came Horton Smith, Oragston, N. Y., professional, with 297. Jones combined scores of 72-72-69-71 to produce his low total. The first two rounds were played over the hill course at the Country Club yesterday, while today's final 36 holes were shot on the Forest Hills-Ricker course. A stroke behind Smith in third place came Ed. Dudley, Wilmington, Del., professional, with 298, while Joe Turnesa, Elmford, N. Y., and Whiffy Cox, Brooklyn, both professionals had cards of 299.

The circle while his mate bears new snow blocks from the pile prepared nearby.

A second tier of blocks is placed, with great nicety, upon the foundation row, sloping somewhat more inward than the first. Just as carefully, a third tier is laid, with still greater inward inclination; row after row is added until the igloo's roof arches gracefully over the builder's head. Finally, only a small aperture at the top remains; into this is set the finishing keystone block, cut wedge-shaped and edged gently into position.

Before the latter stages of the building have been finished, however, it is necessary for a hole to be cut in the side wall near the base. Through this aperture are slid the blocks which make up the upper tiers of the igloo, for at this stage the structure is too high for the worker on the outside to hand the snow-blocks conveniently to his companion.

A finished igloo dome is 8 to 10 feet high.

Inside the Eskimo residence a snow-block floor of about 2-1/2 feet in thickness is laid. It covers the entire floor with the exception of that portion adjacent to the aperture in the side wall, which is shaped in a quasi-Gothic arch about 3 feet high and two feet wide. A porch is constructed to shelter the door-way from the wind, and an 18-inch-square window of sliced-down ice is set into the wall.

With this the architecture of the igloo is completed and Mrs. Eskimo sets about furnishing the new apartment. She spreads willow mats on the floor, and places on them a bedding layer of deer-skin. It is also the lady of the family who mounts on the frame of the igloo and plugs with small wedges of snow the interstices between the blocks.

When whale-oil lamps are flickering within and a square of snow is pulled up in the doorway, an igloo is cozy spot even if winds are high and temperatures low.

ESKIMO IGLOOS VERY WARM, COSY

CAMBRIDGE BAY, Victoria Island CAMBRIDGE BAY, Victoria Island, April 3 Along the ice-bound northern shore of Canada live a race of men— the Eskimos — who have achieved a simplicity in architecture that ranks with the most radical in history. Dotted here and there within the Arctic circle are snow-houses, called igloos, whose first designer must have been a man of rare genius.

Architecturally, the Eskimos can point only to the igloo as an achievement, for virtually no other building is used by the dark-haired dark-skinned wanderers of the north.

Part of the year is passed in the tupuk or seal-skin tent, but this shelter is abandoned as soon as snow and wind have rendered the snow hard enough to be cut into building-blocks.

But the igloo, hemispherical little snow-hut, is an oddity that borders on the marvelous. It is probably the only sturdy structure — unless, perhaps in the tropics — that is constructed with a single tool from material available anywhere in the Arctic. The necessary implement is the snow-knife, about 18 inches long, and the material used is ordinary, every day northland snow.

Nomad nature of the Eskimo, no doubt, occasioned the simplicity of construction of the cozy little dwelling places. Just two men are need to build an igloo. From firm snow, wind-swept and frost-hardened, blocks are sliced with the snow-knife. The blocks measure some 2 1-2 feet by 15 inches, and are 10 inches thick.

Foundation-laying for an igloo comprises laying a series of blocks, inclined slightly inward, in a 12 or 13-foot circle. By skillful use of the snow-knife, the blocks are fitted closely together. Then one of the constructors tows his place within

Dear Mr. Webster and Family. We the members of Marie W. M. S. take this opportunity of conveying to you our deepest sympathy in your sad bereavement.

It seems hard to realize that your beloved wife and mother has left us—she, who was a regular attendant of our meetings, and took such an active part in Missionary work as well as in everything for the benefit of our own church and community.

Her influence will abide with us all, and her exemplary life and self-sacrificing spirit shall ever be a sacred memory to those who had the privilege of being associated with her in work for the Master.

Truly it might be said of her: "She hath done what she could." We earnestly pray that, the all-wise loving father who doeth all things well and knows what is best for all His beloved children only comfort and sustain you in this your time of sorrow, as He only can. Signed on behalf of Marie W. M. S. MRS. KEMBLE A. WEBSTER, Pres. MRS. FREEMAN BOWLEY, Secy. (Patriot Please Copy)

LONDON, April 3.—Official announcement was made at headquarters of the U. S. Delegation today that the British, U. S., and Japanese delegates are in complete accord. The U. S. and British delegates at a meeting with the Japanese at St. James Palace indicated acceptance of the Japanese reservations. The only points to be settled are details relating to Japanese reservations on the scrapping and replacing of ships in order to keep their dockyards working. It was said there would be no factor of difficulty in any of the Japanese reservations. Three statements in rapid succession from leaders of the American, French and Japanese delegations coupled with postponement of the plenary session, which has been scheduled for this afternoon, gave further optimism to the naval conference. First, was a statement by H. L. Stimson yesterday expressing belief that an agreement is nearer than ever, second, was the announcement by Foreign Minister Briand of France that negotiations for a security pact based on interpretation of the Locarno Treaty were proceeding satisfactorily, and third was a statement by the Japanese delegation indicating that whatever reservations have been made by the Japanese to the agreement proposed by the U. S. are so slight they will offer no obstacle to an agreement in the opinion of most observers. Postponement of the plenary session indicates that the big five are anxious to announce tangible results at the next public meeting and they are so close to an agreement that such a session at this time would be of little value.
