SUCCESSFUL SHORT COURSES —One of the most successful agricultural short courses held since the series began was that at Rollo Bay, which began Monday evening and closed Wednesday evening. All the meetings were well attended averaging from 80 to 150 each session. The course was opened by Messrs W. Boulter and F. T. Morrow of the Department of Agriculture and while dairying was the chief feature emphasized a strong plea was made by Mr. Boulter for improved conditions in the rural schools and the giving of a more practical education to the boys and girls remaining on the farm. On Tuesday afternoon the work of the Poultry Division was clearly outlined by Mr. A. Curran who gave much valuable information with regard to the industry. He was followed by Mr. Thompson of the Sheep and Goat Division, Ottawa. who outlined the method of preparing and shipping wool to the grading stations and showed the great advantage to the producer from co-operative marketing. In the evening these gentlemen used slides to illustrate their addresses as did Mr. Anderson of Campbellford, Ont., who spoke on the horse industry and who on Wednesday afternoon gave a practical judging demonstration. Most of the time on Wednesday afternoon and evening was taken up by Mr. Shaw of the Department who dealt with the dairy type of cow and the care and feeding of sheep and swine, and by Mr. Peppin, Plant Pathologist, Experimental Farm, who spoke on the benefits of spraying and of the potato industry in general. These same speakers are conducting the same course at Elmira, which opened on Wednesday afternoon and will continue until Friday evening and in which much interest is being shown.

MR. ROBERT MESSERVY INTERVIEWED.—The Toronto Daily Star of Feb. 3 says. Rather in the public eye at present owing to his chivalrous defense of his late opponent, Liman Von Sanders, the German general who commanded the Turks at Gallipoli, General Ian Hamilton is tremendously popular with all the troops who have served under him or who have come into contact with him at any of his numerous entertainments which he held every week in London after his return from Gallipoli. Mr. Robert Messervy, lately a lieutenant in the R. G. A. and now living at 21 Grenville street, gave to The Star many instances of his courtesy and kind consideration to Colonials who were totally unknown to him before the war. He made it a practice to hold an entertainment in his home every Thursday afternoon, the best professional talent always being present. At these little intimate affairs, there would often be as many as 250 men from the various London hospitals present, all of them friendless Imperial or Colonial troops. Mr. Messervy is very proud of the autographed photo which Sir Ian gave him, and treasures the numerous letters he has at various times received from his distinguished correspondent.

SHIPPING NEWS

THE ICE BOUND MONTCALM

A despatch received yesterday by Captain Taylor of the Marine Department, stating that the steamer Montcalm was twenty two miles north west of East Point and about sixteen miles off Cape Breton.

It also stated that the steamer is jammed in heavy rafted ice from which there is little hope of getting clear until a change of wind.

THE ROYAL WILLIAM

The first complete passage between America and the British Islands by steam was made in 1835 by the Royal William—a ship that was built at Quebec. For years this fact was disputed by the United States who claimed that the Savannah was the pioneer in the task, but it is established now that the American vessel used sails more than steam.

The Royal William was built in the yards of Campbell and Black during 1830 and 1831. The designer of the vessel was James Goudie, who died in Quebec in 1892. With elaborate ceremonies the vessel was launched in the spring of 1831 and later towed to Montreal to receive her machinery and fittings. When complete she loaded a cargo for Halifax and then traded for a short time between Quebec, Halifax and Boston. In fact she was the first British ship of the steam type to enter the port of Boston. She was 176 feet in length, three mast schooner rigged, of 1370 tons, and with accommodation for about sixty passengers. She left Quebec for London on August 5, 1833, and called at Pictou for coal and some repairs She sailed again on August 18 with seven passengers. A terrific gale was encountered on the Banks and one of her engines was disabled so that the passage from Pictou to London took twenty-five days. Ten days after she reached her port she was chartered by the Portuguese to enter the service of Dom. Pedro and the next year she was sold to the Spaniards who converted the craft into a war ship calling her the Isabel Segunda. On June 28, 1894, a tablet was unveiled in the Canadian Parliament Buildings at Ottawa commemorating the great voyage and the inauguration of a new era in transatlantic voyaging.

STEAMSHIP SERVICE FROM ST. JOHN TO WEST AFRICA

St. John will have a steamship service to the West Coast of Africa next winter, according to a St. John man. The Elder-Dempster Company propose to open a new service from Montreal to West Africa next summer, and if it proves a success will be continued from St. John in the winter months. The Elder-Dempster Company now operate a service between Canada and South Africa, which has led to considerable trade development, while they operate a big fleet of boats from England to practically all the ports on the West Coast of Africa.

In this connection it is worth noting that the Bank of Montreal has announced that it has concluded a working agreement with the Colonial Bank of London, and through it with Barclay's Bank, one of the five strongest monetary institutions in the whole world, and having wide ramifications all over Africa and South America. As a consequence of this agreement the Bank of Montreal is now advertising that it offers unexcelled facilities for the transaction of business with Africa.

The Elder-Dempster shipping company are associated with the biggest trade companies on the West Coast of Africa, and are in a position to make the proposed new service a success.

The Germans formerly did a big trade with West Africa, and since the war the United States has developed an important trade there, Any of the products this country purchases from the States are manufactured from raw materials procured from West Africa, and their products coming from a British colony are loaded with American profits. This business may be diverted to Canada, and lead to the creation of new manufacturing industries. The West African colonies are rich in raw products, such as palm oil, palm kernals, cocoa, hides, rubber, ivory, mahogany, coffee, ground nuts, ginger, etc. and these commodities are in greater demand now than before the war. The Gold Coast alone exports about $20,000,000 worth of cocoa, competing with Brazil.

The West African colonies have been undergoing a considerable development, and afford a large market for a wide variety of Canadian products, such as flour, lumber, canned goods of all kinds, cotton goods, tobacco, sugar, wearing apparel, machinery, motor vehicles, hardware, soap, etc. Building materials, railway equipment and steel products are in ever increasing demand, and in these, commodities Canada with a direct steamship service should be able to compete with other countries. With railway development the West Coast of Africa will become a market of ever increasing importance.

It is probable that the boats which the Elder-Dempster Company operate from Canada will only touch at one or a few ports on the west coast, but they will bring Canada in contact with the whole coast, as the company now operates a large fleet of intercolonial coasting and river boats. Transhipment is made from the ocean boats to smaller ocean craft.
