SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

platform, no pressing, inquisitive rabble gathered about the person of a contestant whose fame has been put in peril could be more alluring to the love of the sensational than is in us. The parallel passages in Matthew and Luke must be studied at the same time.

When affairs are at the crisis strong words and decisive actions come into evidence. They do not fail when Jesus is pressed by the circumstances which malignant opposition creates for Him. In His supreme and divinely dignified way He meets the occasion and routs His enemies. His logic is resistless. His purpose is steadfast. His spirit is filled with the loftiness of the holy and the loving, and the crowding throngs are left to marvel, saying, "What manner of man is this? And there is only one honest answer to the question. He is the Messiah.

It is not to be wondered at that men thought that Jesus was beside himself—mad. That was the horn of the dilemma they would take rather than confess themselves insane, for they could not consider their mental judgments to be on an equality. They chose to call Him queer, eccentric. That, they thought, was the charitable thing to do, and in their charity some thought to save Jesus from Himself.

But there were others who cut between and charged that Jesus had wilfully put Himself under the power of the prince of the devils. That attitude, which was begotten by the spirit of hatred, created an issue. The lesson tells how it was met.

Note, first, the passionless but resolute severity of the logic of Jesus. Abraham Lincoln made use of it, in the critical hour of United States politics in his never-to-be-forgotten speech called "The House-Divided-Against-Itself-Speech."

Note again: Jesus claims power and easy supremacy over the power of the devil. He can, and has, and will drive him forth from the possession of men. He can bind him and clean out the house he has occupied and live there himself. The spiritual implications of such a claim make it such that men who continue to live in sin are sinners, indeed. It means they suffer the domination of evil where Jesus is willing and has power to reign. The Castle of Man-soul should belong to Him.

The unpardonable sin: Many classes will doubtless spend unto wastefulness most of the precious time of the lesson in vain questionings over this portion of it. Certain facts will remain, viz: There is an unpardonable sin. It is possible to commit it. Doubtless many have. Those who care to know what it means have not. Every one should watch against hardness of heart. The work of grace, the uprooting of evil in a soul, or in a town, or in a nation, or wherever manifested, should be acclaimed as from God. Satan engages in no such business.

There is a way by which everyone can come into most sympathetic and tender relations with Jesus, relations as dear and close as those which under the precious names of blood-kindred. We can make choice by doing the will of God.

Rustico Rustico

Rustico is the spot to spend Dominion Day. Why? Because on the 1st of July the Tea-Party par excellence of 1912 will be held on the banks of the la "Riviere" "Louis" and under the shadow of St. Augustin's Church. There a magnificent scenery will delight your eyes, sweet music will be agreeable to your ears, fun and merriment will take up your attention, and your appetite, sharpened by the brime ocean breeze wafted over the blue waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, will find complete satisfaction in the delicious viands prepared for you by the good ladies of Rustico who are noted for their exquisite cuisine. You need an outing on Dominion Day, and where can you enjoy that luxury more fully than in Rustico, come and be happy amongst us, and you will on the following day, be better prepared and feel more courageous to face the struggle for life. Reserve the 1st of July for Rustico. Should weather prove unfavorable, then the tea will be held on the following Wednesday.
