ALLAN BRONFMAN of Montreal, prominent Canadian industrialist and community leader, upon whom the French Government recently conferred the title of Chevalier of the Legion of Honour.

Sees Threat From Communists In French Indo-China

By J. M. Roberts Jr. Associated Press News Analyst Paul Reynaud, former premier of France, says that the advance of the Chinese Communist armies creates a "very dangerous" situation for French Indo-China and other Far Eastern countries.

He says Chinese Communists are pouring across the frontier to help rebellious natives in Indo-China and pose an ultimate threat to Siam, British Malaya, Burma, India and Indonesia.

French troops of which there are more than 100,000 in Indo-China have beaten off initial attacks, Reynaud adds, but the tone of his remarks indicates strongly that they cannot be expected to hold on forever.

Reports from Indo-China already showed that the French had attained no more than a precarious military balance.

Ho Chi Minh's Viet Nam Government has not been stamped out. Ho, although he acted in Moscow, is not a follower of the Cominform line. He wanted to keep his revolution private. But as the Communists offer him the only important outside support he has received, he will not refuse it.

France's efforts to re-establish the throne of Annam and Tonkin under former Emperor Bai Dai are not expected to prove fruitful. Bao Dai once worked with Ho, but later went into Riviera retirement and negotiations with the French.

Western observers say whatever influence he once had in northern Indo-China is now gone.

Observers have wondered for some time how long it would pay France to oppose the independence movement. Indo-China produces vast quantities of rice and cheap coal for export but hardly seems worth the $30,000,000 a month the armed occupation costs.

Any juncture between the Communists in this area and those in Malaya would present a serious problem for Britain. The Malayan Communists who, ironically enough, were mostly armed by British parachuting during the war against Japan, have mostly been driven back into the jungles. But to clean them out still represents a serious task, and reinforcement might make it an almost impossible one.

But, whether three more or less Communist groups are contending for power, already have given western observers a taste of what can happen throughout Southeast Asia.

In speaking of India, Reynaud is looking a considerable distance into the future. Moslem and Hindu religions present strong barriers against Communism there. The governments of India and Pakistan are brooking no Communist interference.

With China conquered, Communism will have spread over nearly 800,000,000 people. Territory which may be considered aligned in the Western camp embraces perhaps 650,000,000.

This leaves the opposing factions in the cold war to contend for the allegiance of nearly 1,000,000,000 Asiatics. The stakes in the Far East are rapidly assuming a value comparable to those in Europe.

Winters Comments On Chignecto Canal

SAINT JOHN, N. B., April 24 - (CP) - Reconstruction Minister Winters said in an interview recently he is aware that demand for a canal across the Isthmus of Chignecto is increasing in the Maritimes and also, he understood, in Newfoundland.

He said he is familiar with the proposal in its three aspects - as a ship waterway, a power development and a project for land reclamation.

"It would appear to me," Mr. Winters added, "that any Federal Government approach to the project would normally have to be based on the attitudes adopted by the governments of the interested provinces."

He said he was not in a position to comment further on the matter at present.

EAGER BEAVERS

Pyramid Clubs Are Flourishing In Montreal

MONTREAL, April 24 - (CP) - Police figuratively looked through a blind eye recently and said they couldn't see a pyramid club anywhere in town. The truth is they couldn't be more wrong.

It may be that pyramid-tumbling times will come in a week or 10 days. But right now the pyramids are being built at a frantic rate in various sections of town and the early starters have cashed in some sizeable winnings.

"I am not aware that any such clubs are in operation here at the moment," said Lieut. Romeo Jarry, head of the police morality squad.

It appeared he hadn't heard of the customer who went to his uptown Montreal bank last Thursday and tucked $1,000 away in the sock, much to the surprise of the teller who knew the depositor's usual weekly deposit.

The arrival of another depositor with $900 a few minutes later left the girl teller baffled until a third customer, a $30-a-week shopgirl handed in $900.

The teller remarked the girl looked "awfully tired."

Said the girl customer: "And you'd feel tired too if you had been up half the night to collect this money - this pyramid club business is tiresome but it sure pays."

So the secret was out even if Lieut. Jarry did say, "This is all news to me, but if any such clubs are discovered we will investigate and act on advice of our legal department."

Police attorney Antonio Lamer branded the clubs "absolutely illegal" and in contravention to article 236 of the Criminal Code governing lotteries.

Be that as it may the pyramid-clubbing which started on McGill campus three weeks ago has spread through Westmount, Notre Dame De Grace and Snowdon, to the town of Mount Royal and to Montreal's east end.

"I hope to get about $2,000 in a couple more nights," said Mrs. Pierre-Louis Gagnon of Mount Royal as she threw her door open last night and started to welcome her pyramid visitors. She admitted she was tired after nearly a week of tripping around town to various club-member's homes to keep her pyramid from falling.

"At best," she said, "I stand to lose only a dollar if the pyramid falls."

Another pyramid, Mrs. Lou Buck of Snowdon admitted she was somewhat jaded after several days of pyramid-building. But she was enthusiastic when she said:

"Twelve days after you get your pyramid card for joining a club for a $1 fee you should collect the $2-04 jackpot - if your pyramid doesn't fall; that is if everybody does what they're supposed to do in the way of getting new members.

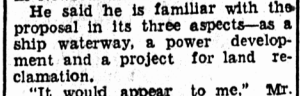

"But even if it does fall it's grand fun. You meet a lot of nice people you never knew before."

Report Discovery Of New Pair of Stars

MINNEAPOLIS, April 24 - (AP) - Dr. William J. Luyten, chairman of the astronomy department of the University of Minnesota, today announced discovery of a pair of stars believed to be nearer to the earth than any other star except one.

"The more discovery is in the constellation Cetus (the whale). Measurements made with the 36-inch reflector at the University of Arizona's observatory at Tucson revealed the two stars are probably less than six light-years away.
