

WOMAN ASCENDS STEEP ALPINE PEAK

Madame Bayez Performs Feat Which Few Daring Men Have Accomplished.

READ TO BRACE NERVES

Visited Museums in Which Were Gruesome Relics of Alpine Disaster to Fortify Herself.

PARIS. Madame Bayez, of Paris, whose husband is noted for his mountain climbing exploits, has just arrived in Paris, having equaled the best of his accomplishments in a daring ascent of one of the most difficult and dangerous of Alpine peaks, Mont Cervin. The feat, in fact, is regarded as among the most remarkable accomplished by men in this line, much less women.

In her narrative of the performance, while she confesses to no feeling of lack of courage, she tested her nerve in the most strenuous manner. As a preparation she read Whymper's book on the Matterhorn, which vividly describes fearful gales, the precipitous and other terrors of that famous mountain. Furthermore, she went to the museum and inspected among other relics, rich and sad associations of disastrous climbs, the broken rods that told the tale of the fearful catastrophe of Lord Douglas and his companions in 1864.

As these reminders of a possible fate did not affect her determination, she made the needed arrangements of outfit and guides, and then set out to accompany her. It was hard, serious work, but she failed at nothing, her enthusiasm growing with every step of the ascent. Finally the top was reached after five hours' labor. The brave woman felt a double pride in her achievement. First, she had succeeded in her task, and also in showing that the ability to perform great feats in this line was not the exclusive privilege of the men.

BEGGARS AT BANQUET GIVEN BY THEIR "KING"

Notable Feast is Held in One of the Cemeteries of Russian Capital.

GRAVESTONES AS TABLES

ST. PETERSBURG. Ivan Stepanoff, the king of Russian beggars, has just celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of his sovereignty. Stepanoff is a tall, well-built man of 60, who had plied his "trade" for thirty-five years at the largest and most fashionable cemetery of St. Petersburg, where he solicits alms for his "poor" wife and "starving" children.

As a matter of fact, his wife wears valuable furs and diamonds, and his two sons are at college.

For his anniversary the king of beggars caused invitations to be sent broadcast to the beggars and most fashionable of St. Petersburg. The banquet hall was the cemetery, the home of his exploits.

The police raised no objection to the feasting in the cemetery, and the caterers wagons to unload huge piles of tables and great baskets filled to the brim with bottles of strong vodka.

On each gravestone was a sumptuous repast, and a dozen or more of the strange guests—who numbered 1000 in all—gathered round each grave, and there feasted.

Ivan himself presided at one of the central graves, a great mausoleum, the family vault of a prince. During the feast he also visited and drank toasts at others of the tombs.

This strange scene continued from noon throughout the evening, until the time came for the cemetery to be closed for the night.

Ivan Stepanoff announced early in the day, with much eclat, that in view of the festivities, he would abstain from importing strangers for alms for the first day of the feast in thirty-five years in which he had not attended to his business.

It is estimated that the celebration cost Ivan the king of beggars fully $500. But he is playing his trade more vigorously than ever, and may soon make up this.

SWISS POLICE ARREST AMERICAN TOURISTS

Two Young Men Subjected to Indignity on Charge of Which They Are Innocent.

GENEVA. Two young Americans have had a very unpleasant experience of the methods of the Swiss police.

They are staying at one of the leading hotels in Lucerne, and were given the other night a bad $50-note ($1250 note). They gave this to a shopkeeper, who handed it to the police when he discovered it to be a forgery, with the result that the Americans were promptly arrested and lodged in prison.

After they and their baggage had been searched they were found to be innocent of the charge and liberated.

The Americans left Lucerne at once for Zurich, but they had hardly arrived in an hotel there when they were again arrested on the same charge and taken to prison in spite of their protest. One of them was kept in Zurich, while the other was taken under police escort back to Lucerne for a new inquiry.

The American consuls in these towns protested, two bank managers assured the police that the prisoners were of good family and had practically unlimited credit in their banks at Lucerne also. The cantonal authorities at Lucerne also apologized profusely, and dismissed the detective who brought the false charge. It is stated that the Americans will claim a heavy indemnity.

MARSEILLES STIRRED UP BY TRUNK MURDER HORROR

Confession of the Goolds That Husband Perpetrated the Terrible Crime Doubled, and Theory of Insanity Advanced

MARSEILLES. THE terrible murder of Mme. Emma Levin, and the finding of her dismembered body in a trunk at the railway station here continues to be the subject of almost universal discussion here and at Monte Carlo, where the tragedy occurred.

The gruesome confession made by the man Goold, now in custody for the crime, borne out as it was by the confession of his wife, who is also in custody, is not believed by the magistrate who examined him, and the theory of insanity finds a good deal of acceptance.

The Principals. Mr. Goold, a man of 54, is described as an amiable and clever, excellent company, with a hobby for amateur photography. He comes of a good Irish family, being the youngest brother of Sir James Goold, who succeeded his uncle in the title in 1891.

On the death of an intermediate brother, Frederick Goold, in 1900, he laid claim to the title, and has used it. It is said that he even went so far as to offer his elder brother, the real baronet, who is in Australia, $500 if he would waive his claim.

Mrs. Goold is the daughter of an iron-monger called Girodin, at La Baone, Iserre, and was born in 1850. She was brought up as a dressmaker. At here she is recognized as a woman of great energy, with complete authority over her husband.

Mme. Girodin, who lived with her father and mother, was first married to a young man of St. Marcellin, contrary to her parents' wishes. A week after the wedding the young woman left her new home with a little money, and took refuge in Geneva, where she worked for some time as a dressmaker, and then proceeded to London, where she met Goold.

It is sixteen years since she married Mr. Goold at St. Mary of the angels, Paddington. Soon afterward the business is believed to have decreased, and they went to Montreal in Canada, and established a large dressmaking business, catering for the best society. Three years ago they retired and went to Adelaide Terrace, Waterloo, Liverpool, where they adopted the title of Sir Vere and Lady Goold. There they lived in apparent affluence and appear to have been accepted by the social society as thorough gentlemen of high degree.

Mrs. Goold is described by one who knew her then as an accomplished, amiable and generous woman, a French lady with her finger tips. Much of their time was spent in travel. During the last three years they have occupied a charming suite on the first floor of the Villa Menestri in the Boulevard des Moulins, Monte Carlo, where they were accompanied by their niece, Mme. Girodin.

Mme. Emma Levin was the widow of a great Stockholm merchant, who died about eight years ago. She moved in good society, and was well-to-do. She was always smartly dressed, and was very intelligent.

Her mother still lives. During the last two months the victim of the tragedy was staying at the Hotel Bristol, Monte Carlo, where she made the acquaintance of the Goolds.

Mme. Levin had no children of her own. She adopted some years ago a little girl of poor parents who lived in Switzerland. She kept the child for several years, and became very much attached to her, but the parents ultimately insisted upon their daughter being restored to them.

Mme. Castellani, a Swedish lady, who knew Mme. Levin at Monte Carlo, spoke very highly of her to a representative of the Petit Parisien. Mme. Castellani said that the only fault to find with her was that she was too fond of jewelry, and took an ostentatious delight in wearing it. She possessed fine diamonds, her jewelry being estimated to be worth more than $10,000, and on Sunday evening she left the Hotel Bristol at Monte Carlo, where she was staying, wearing the greater part of them.

Last Seen Alive. On Sunday, August 4, at 8 o'clock, Mme. Levin entered the Villa Menestri and was not again seen alive. At the time it is said that she was wearing most of her valuable collection of jewels.

Whatever happened at the villa on Sunday night it is certain that Mme. Levin was murdered there. A servant girl states that she heard sounds of a struggle, and a voice cried out: "Let me alone!" But the next step in the drama was the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Goold at Marseilles on Tuesday. They had arrived with luggage from Monte Carlo that morning, and had left a large trunk at the station, with instructions to deposit it to London. They themselves drove to a hotel, where they used the name of Mr. and Mrs. Javanoux. A porter named Louis Pons noticed that blood was oozing from the trunk, and, in spite of Mr. Goold's assertion that it only contained poultry, informed the police. Mr. and Mrs. Goold were then brought back to the station, and the trunk was opened in their presence. It contained the butchered body of Mme. Levin.

The head and parts of the legs were missing. They were found in a small portmanteau, which Mr. Goold was holding. The woman had several wounds on the head, and she had been stabbed several times in the chest. Mr. and Mrs. Goold were then arrested.

The Goolds' first account of the tragedy admits the mutilations, but denies all responsibility for the murder. Mrs. Goold declares that when Mme. Levin visited her home a man rushed in with a knife in his hand and killed her. He shouted: "You wretch! You have ruined me! Now I am going to kill you!" Mr. Goold stated that the woman was killed by a man during the absence of himself and his wife, and that they decided to cut the body in pieces and put them in a trunk in order to avoid a scandal. An examination of the villa revealed that the walls of the dining room were splashed with blood. Two saws, a chopper, a knife and a dagger were also discovered.

REBELLIOUS MOORS PREACH A HOLY WAR. Sultan Urged to Lift the Standard and Drive Europeans From Country.

FOREIGNERS IN PANIC. TANGIER. According to the Lepeche Marocaine, the principal local newspaper, Fez is in a state of agitation, and the sultan is in danger. The natives are greatly excited by the news of the bombardment of Casablanca, and the more fanatical elements are demanding that the sultan should lead a holy war to sweep the foreigners into the sea.

SHOWER OF SILVER FOR DUBLIN NEWSBOYS

Mysterious Stranger Causes a Pleasant Sensation in the Irish Capital.

BOYS' FUTURE ASSURED. DUBLIN. There was a scene of great excitement in Abbey street yesterday, when a gentleman was seen in the midst of a crowd of newsboys near the Catholic Boys' Home distributing silver, chiefly florins and half-crowns. The boys scrambled over each other to share in the generosity of the mysterious and eccentric individual.

A couple of policemen endeavored to keep order, but without much success, until the benefactor's store had given out.

World's Greatest Dredger. LIVERPOOL. The Liverpool Journal of Commerce states that the Mersey Dock and Harbor Board yesterday accepted a tender for the construction of the largest sand pump 600 tons of sand by a process of seventy feet. It will be built by Messrs. Cammell, Laird & Co.

Explosion at Factory. Several hundredweights of gunpowder exploded at a factory in the commune of Sant Antonio, in the suburbs of Naples, killing three persons and inflicting fatal injuries on seven others. The explosion was so terrific as to set fire to a big storage of hemp nearly a mile away.

Explosion at Lecco. A large quantity of fireworks ready for a popular festival, exploded of late brothers, partners in the firm, who happened to be standing near, one was blown to pieces and the other two were horribly lacerated.

EXILED PRINCE IS PARDONED BY KAISER

Joachim Albrecht, Who Wed an Actress, to Return to German Court.

VIENNA. The New Free Press states that the Kaiser has pardoned Prince Joachim Albrecht, whom he recently banished to German Southwest Africa, to punish him for his love affair with the actress Marie Sulzer.

The prince is to return to Berlin in September. Immediately after the autumn maneuvers he will be reinstated as a major in the army.

The full details of the amazing love affair of Prince Joachim Albrecht with Marie Sulzer were published last November.

In order to make herself "noble" and fit partner for the Kaiser's cousin, she first married Baron von Liebenberg, a needy Austrian aristocrat, in a fictitious registry office. The Baron was received $750 for the marriage, and a further $750 when a divorce, which was arranged, had been obtained.

When the evidence against the Baron for a divorce had been obtained, a marriage broker, who had the business in hand, refused to pay the Baron. The Kaiser was very angry, and ordered Prince Joachim Albrecht to proceed to German Southwest Africa.

Evidence by Telescope. LONDON. The police made use of telescopes and field glasses to watch the operations of the men.

JEW ASSAILS JEW WHO ACTS AS CAD

Vulgarity and Ostentation of the Race in London is Vigorously Denounced.

CONCEIT AND IGNORANCE

Action of These Men and Women Bringing Discredit on Jews in City.

LONDON. A remarkable attack on the vulgar and ostentatious type of Jew is made by a member of the Jewish community in a letter published in the current issue of the Jewish Chronicle. This objectionable type, the writer says, is responsible for most, if not all, the anti-Jewish feeling which exists in this country.

The following are extracts from the letter: "All respectable members of the Jewish community should be grateful to 'Anarsius' for so straightforwardly opening a discussion on the vulgarity and ostentation exhibited by a large section of our people—qualities to which most, if not all, of the anti-Jewish feeling that exists in this country is due. Whatever be the cause of these characteristics—whether racial or otherwise—they are certainly most objectionable.

"Look around certain districts of the East End—notably Whitechapel and Aldgate—and see hordes of Jews with their gaudy and hideous costumes, their enormous and gruesome hats, their plentiful supply of most jewelry—to see them is to be overcome by a sense of nausea. This type is not confined to the districts named, but is to be found also in the suburbs and West End—in the latter case real jewelry being substituted for imitation.

"Now, for the Jewish young man. Who doesn't know the type which will only wear the very latest style in clothes, the latest shaped hat, the latest tie, the latest cane—the creature that wears the gaudiest of colored waistcoats, who walks with bows stuck out ostentatiously puffing a fat cigar, occupying as much of the pavement as he can, and speaking as loudly as possible, with the thickest voice and the most objectionable, slovely and vulgar pronunciation.

"This type of Jew is, unfortunately, plentiful. He pervades and disgraces all classes of the community. He is quite as much an evidence in Throckmorton street as in Aldgate and Whitechapel. You will find him playing the latter part in Belgrave—I should say, apply the vulgarities of the aristocrat, for the vulgarities alone attract him."

STRIKE-BREAKERS RAID PANTRIES OF SHIP

Drink Contents of Thirty-Two Barrels of Beer and Get Full.

ANTWERP. Shortly before 11 o'clock last night, the captain of the steamer Cambroman, on which the English strike-breakers are quartered, sent an urgent message for police assistance. It appears that the Englishmen, apparently with the intention of taking part in yesterday's local celebrations, taking possession of sixteen beer barrels and a number of razors. When the police arrived they found the strikers lying about the deck, the majority of them overcome by drink. Thirty policemen remained all night on the ship with drawn revolvers. This morning the Englishmen posted up notices in their quarters demanding an increase of a shilling in their pay from tomorrow.

The number of strike-breakers at work today is very small, only fifty men having gone to the ships on which they are engaged from the Cambroman, whose companions are still under the influence of liquor. At 11 o'clock a telephone message was sent to the police declaring that the men absolutely refused to go on board the tug, and that they were dancing and singing. The captain was ultimately obliged to put several of them in irons. The police are still on board.

FIREWORKS DISASTERS IN ITALIAN FACTORIES

These Become So Frequent That Workers Appeal for Protective Legislation.

HUNDREDS ARE KILLED. ROME. Fatal accidents in fireworks factories are so alarmingly on the increase in Italy that politicians are being invited with petitions from all quarters to devise special preventive legislation. As is generally known, Italy has an enormous inland trade in fireworks, and in the southern provinces and Sicily pyrotechnic displays form an indispensable item in every sort of public rejoicing.

During last month alone five terrible explosions were recorded through carelessness in the process of manufacture, causing in each case the lives of from one to five persons. Now, within the last twenty-four hours two further mishaps have swelled the list of victims.

Several hundredweights of gunpowder exploded at a factory in the commune of Sant Antonio, in the suburbs of Naples, killing three persons and inflicting fatal injuries on seven others. The explosion was so terrific as to set fire to a big storage of hemp nearly a mile away.

The other disaster occurred at Lecco where a large quantity of fireworks ready for a popular festival, exploded of late brothers, partners in the firm, who happened to be standing near, one was blown to pieces and the other two were horribly lacerated.
