THE DOOM TRAIL

By ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH

"You say truth," applauded Joncaire. "Come your ways within, Jean, and you shall taste of the blood of La Belle France—although it be not our Provence vintage. By the way, do you know Provence?" "I cannot say so with honesty, monsieur," I fenced, "although I have been in Aries."

"In Aries!" He flung his arms around my neck. "Jean, I love you, my lad! I was born in St. Remi, which is but a short distance out in the diocese."

We were now in the entrance of the log house, and Joncaire opened wide the door. "Jean, you are a lad in a million!" he pronounced. "You shall drink deep. I have some wine which Elgon the intendant fetched out for a few of us—you will understand you must say not of it here-after it never paid duty. Aye, we shall make a fine night of it, and you shall tell me of all that has passed in Aries these many years."

He clapped his hands, and a soldier entered.

"Francois," announced Joncaire, "this is Jean Courbevoir, who will be my guest until he departs. He has been in Aries, Francois. Remember that. What he orders you will render to him. Now bring us the flagon of wine which Monsieur Elgon sent out this spring."

The soldier saluted me as if I were a marshal of France and brought in the flagon of the intendant's wine with the exquisite reverence which only a son of France could bestow upon the choicest pro-

"Another case of log fortification I suppose," remarked De Lery sarcastically in a dry, crackling voice. "You gentlemen will never learn."

"You must think we grow lous d'or instead of furs in Canada," growled Joncaire. "Be sure, we of the wilderness posts are the most anxious to have store walls around us. Well, what headway have you made?"

"I have traced out the lines of the central mass," replied De Lery, taking a gulp of the wine. "Tomorrow I shall mark out a surrounding work of four bastions to encompass it."

He rose from his seat. "Speaking for myself, I have had sufficient wine, and I shall retire. If the masons bring in the loads of stone we expect in the morning we shall be able to lay the first course by noon."

Joncaire twisted his face into a grimace as De Lery ascended a steep flight of ladder-stairs to an upper story. "What is the difficulty, monsieur?" I inquired sympathetically.

"Why, at least I have persuaded this stupid, timorous government of ours to build me a proper fort. 'Tis the only way we shall hold the sacre English in check. With a fort here we can control in some measure the intercourse betwixt the western tribes and the English. Al-that's how crisp!

duct of the soil of France.

"Pour it out, Francois," commanded Joncaire. "The soldier hesitated. 'And Monsieur de Lery?' he said. 'A thousand million curses!' exploded Joncaire. 'Am I to wait for him? Am I to sacrifice my choicest wine in his gullet?'"

"Who is Monsieur de Lery?" I asked as Francois filled a thick mug with the ruby juice. "What? You do not know him? This pompous whipper-snapper who sets out to teach Louis Thomas de Joncaire, sieur de Chabert, his duty, after thirty-five years on the frontier—pah! He is—"

"Monsieur de Lery enters," interposed Francois with a glance at the doorway. A slender, wiry little man in a wig several sizes too big for him strode into the room. He favored me with a curious glance, nodded to Joncaire and took a seat across the table from me.

My host made a wry smile and motioned Francois to bring a third mug. "Hola, Monsieur de Lery," he said. "This is a gallant young forest-runner, one Jean Courbevoir, who has come to tell me that charming idiot, Alphonse de Tonty, has been chased out of Le de Troit by the Messesagues. Jean, Monsieur de Lery is the king's engineer officer in Canada."

"Another case of log fortification I suppose," remarked De Lery sarcastically in a dry, crackling voice. "You gentlemen will never learn."

"You must think we grow lous d'or instead of furs in Canada," growled Joncaire. "Be sure, we of the wilderness posts are the most anxious to have store walls around us. Well, what headway have you made?"

"I have traced out the lines of the central mass," replied De Lery, taking a gulp of the wine. "Tomorrow I shall mark out a surrounding work of four bastions to encompass it."

He rose from his seat. "Speaking for myself, I have had sufficient wine, and I shall retire. If the masons bring in the loads of stone we expect in the morning we shall be able to lay the first course by noon."

Joncaire twisted his face into a grimace as De Lery ascended a steep flight of ladder-stairs to an upper story. "What is the difficulty, monsieur?" I inquired sympathetically.

"Why, at least I have persuaded this stupid, timorous government of ours to build me a proper fort. 'Tis the only way we shall hold the sacre English in check. With a fort here we can control in some measure the intercourse betwixt the western tribes and the English. Also, we shall have a constant threat here to keep the Iroquois at peace.

"Well, I worked up Vaudreuil to approve it, obtained the grants from Paris, secured the necessary mechanics—and then they sent this pop-intry to supervise the work. I had pitched on this site here. He would have none of it. No, he must overturn all my plans and put the new works several miles down the river where it runs into the lake. He is conceited with himself because he has been charged with all the works of fortification in Canada."

"Are there others, then, monsieur?" I asked casually, burying my nose in the wine mug. "Aye, to be sure. He is to build a wall around Montreal, and to strengthen the enciente of Quebec."

"But we are at peace with these sacre English," I objected. Joncaire, now thoroughly convivial, winked at me over the rim of his mug.

"For the present, yes. But how long, Jean? Every year that passes the English grow in strength, and we become weaker; I speak now in matters of trade; for, after all, lad, the country which obtains the mastery in trade must be the military master of any contending nation. I may be only a simple soldier but so much I have learned."

"We are a colony of soldiers and traders, well armed and disciplined. They are an infinitely larger group of colonies with only a few soldiers traders, but many handmen. Give them time, and they will obtain such a grip on the soil of the wilderness that they cannot be pried loose. But if we use our temporary advantage, and keep them from winning supremacy in the trade with the savages, then, my Jean, we may force a war upon them at an early day, and we shall win."

He sat back triumphantly. "Surely we have that supremacy now!" He winked at me again, and drew from a drawer in the table a heavy book such as accounts are kept in.

"Jean," he said, "I am about to disclose to you a secret—which is not a secret, because every trader who works for himself is acquainted with it."

Allis-Chalmers' "United" A Sensational New Farm Tractor Greater Power—Modern Design—Lighter Weight

THE "UNITED" TRACTOR brings you those many practical improvements in design and construction for which you have been waiting—features that mean lower power costs, greater dependability and all-around usefulness. These are the distinct advantages "United" make available.

A PURULATOR THOROUGHLY CLEANS THE ENGINE OIL once every four minutes. This device adds years to the useful life of a Tractor, and gives maximum lubrication with fewer oil changes.

THE "UNITED" ENGINE IS ABSOLUTELY SEALED against dust and grit by an efficient double-action air-cleaner. Air entering the carburetor is cleaned by centrifugal action and then filtered through an oil-soaked mattress of steel wool.

RAPID WATER CIRCULATION and positive cooling of the Engine is assured by a centrifugal pump, with a speed of 1200 R. P. M. The pump is gear-driven and always on the job.

THE THREE-BEARING CRANKSHAFT IS OF DROP FORGED STEEL, 2 1/2 inches in diameter. Pressure lubrication is provided for all Bearings through drilled oil lead in the Crankshaft. The camshaft is also a drop forging, case hardened and ground.

A LIVE REAR AXLE OF EXCEPTIONAL STRENGTH AND RUGGEDNESS transmits the driving power to the rear Wheels. The axle shafts are made of chrome nickel steel and are 3 inches in diameter. The Shafts are Mounted in "Hyatt" Roller Bearings.

THE DIFFERENTIAL IS OF THE FOUR PINION TYPE, mounted in Timken Roller Bearings, and contained within the large ring gear. Pinions and gears are of the highest grade alloy steel.

EXCEPTIONALLY EASY STEERING, comfortable seating and convenient location of all controls provide operating ease comparable to that of an automobile. A comfortable seat places the operator in easy reach of the controls and affords a clear view for all kinds of work.

FRONT AXLE SPINDLES, AS WELL AS THE FRONT AXLE, ARE STEEL DROP FORGINGS. Spindles are fitted with Timken Roller Bearings and are pressure lubricated through Alemite-Zerk fittings. Felt retainers prevent entrance of dirt and loss of grease.

THE "UNITED" TRACTOR IS BUILT FOR THE FROST & WOOD COMPANY LIMITED, by the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company—world famous builders of Farm Tractors and Power Machinery.
