LONDON, Feb. 4—At the annual meeting of the Anglo-American telegraph company yesterday F. A. Bevan, who presided, admitted that there were difficulties in the way of concluding a provisional agreement with the Western union telegraph company. He said that the directors, however, hoped soon to surmount these obstacles. As to the companies remaining distinct he was not so sure at present that this would be the case but he gave assurance that no agreement would be carried out without the consent of the shareholders of the Anglo-American.

KILLED TRYING TO SAVE HIS SHOVEL

NEW YORK, Feb. 3—Michael Toat, of 146 Pine street, Jersey City, lost his life on the Jersey Central road at Roselle, N. J., Wednesday while trying to take a shovel from the rail in front of the Easton express bound for New York.

Toat was emuloyed in a track gang and had just been sent to Roselle. Hardly had he begun work when the workmen saw the train approaching and stepped aside. Seeing the shovel across the rail, he jumped back to pull it out of the way. The train was too near, and he was struck and instantly killed.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S VIEWS.

QUEBEC, Feb 7—In the legislature yesterday, Provincial Treasurer gave notice of a bill providing for the taxation of automobiles according to horsepower.

REDUCING WEIGHT.

This special dietary was arranged by the medical officer of the workhouse at Keighley, Yorkshire, to reduce the weight of two very heavy men: For breakfast, porridge, skim milk, stewed fruit, and watercress in season; dinner, bread, lean meat or fish, and vegetables; supper, bread, tea, stewed fruit, watercress and lettuce.

Not more that 20 ounces of solid food was allowed on week days and 22 ounces on Sunday. The patients between 60 and 70 years of age, strictly adhered to the diet prescribed, and between May and Christmas, 1909, their weights fell from 256 to 180 pounds and 248 to 188 pounds.

The health and bodily condition have so improved that they are able to walk about, leaving the chairs to which they had been confined for years.—Newark News.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Feb 7—In a disastrous explosion yesterday ten men met instant death at the plant of the Plute Power Co., on the outskirts of Ishpeming.

RECIPROCITY NOT POPULAR.

LONDON, Feb 7—The proposed reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States was denounced in unmeasured terms by Lord Lansdowne and Mr Balfour, leaders of Opposition, in the Lords and Commons.

The launching of this subject on the very day that Parliament assembled, suggests that the matter may have a conspicuous place in the deliberations of the present session.

DECADENCE IN SPELLING

In its astonishment and excitement over the discovery that its students are distressingly deficient in spelling, one college for girls has precipitately introduced the old-fashioned spelling book and an hour every day will be devoted to memorizing words—the way we all learned what correct spelling we know and the only way to learn.

It matters not so much after all, what knowledge the fair young feminine may have of the chemical qualities of a loaf of bread, and of other domestic "science," if she can make the bread—that required no great mental exertion; but good spelling is necessary for retaining one's place in the social world—at least retaining it with dignity.

Though spelling is in its "highest manifestations" a gift it is also an accomplishment and within the reach of all. It is not to be absorbed, but like the genders in German speech, must be seized and made prisoner by outright force of arms.

We disregard all rules and explanations. We refuse to answer any questions about our "coughs, bougs, choughs, soughs, cloughs (both ways) doughs, houghs (pronounced hocks), loughs, (pronounced lochs.)

If there is any possible way of twisting "ough" into another variation it would have been done in our splendid and incomparable language.

Variety is the spice of life and the very soul of our mother tongue. For this our affection for it shall never wane.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A DECIDEDLY MUSICAL TOWN.

LINDSBORG, Ks., is the land of the Swede and the home of music. Nearly fifty years ago a band of Swedish immigrants settled in the Smoky Valley. They prospered, built a town and a college. They loved music and they soon organized a choral society that has grown into a great oratorio society.

And now they "do love music!" They sing in their homes and in the fields and teach the children to sing and to play. One morning I met a small "Gust" on the street and when I inquired of him a direction he took off his hat and stood with the sun on his flaxen head. He had a violin under his arm and told me he was going to practice with three other boys and girls a violin quartette for the children's Saturday concert.

"We will play three selections," he said in his clear but slow English. Minuet from E. major Symphonie, by Mozart; "Wiegenlied," from Schubert and the finale from Mozart's Quartet No. 43."

It fairly took my breath. Everywhere I saw children going or coming with music in their hands or instruments under their arms; all keenly interested in the coming concert. It is the great event of the year to these Swedish children, just as the grand "Messiah" concert rendered with a chorus of 900 voices is the event of the year for their elders and for thousands of visitors. Every boy and girl in town who can sing at all—and that scarcely leaves enough for a game of three-cornered cat—is in the chorus.

WIRING A WEAK AORTA.

To watch the surgeons coil thirty-two feet of wire into the walls of his aorta, was the remarkable experience of Robert Campbell, formerly an engineer on the Salt Lake Railroad. When brought to the hospital in October, the patient was told by the physicians that he could not live until Christmas, as he was suffering from an aneurism or weakening and rupture of the aorta, the large artery leading directly from the heart. In the hope of saving his life, this remarkable operation was performed, of inserting aluminum bronze wire in such a way that it would coil within the walls of the aorta. This feat was accomplished without the aid of anaesthetics, and the patient not only watched the four surgeons who attended him, but actually helped coil the thirty-two feet of wire which was inserted. The size of the wire when coiled like a spring was nearly as large as a small football, and the clotted blood forming around this coil was expected to develop into tissue.

KING GEORGE'S FIRST HOUSE MEMORABLE

It practically wipes out the power of the upper chamber to kill legislation from the commons by providing that all bills become law which the common has sent to the lords for their successive sessions "in a period of time not less than two years," and which has been three times rejected or not disposed of.

To insure the control of finance by the commons, and settle the issue which the lords raised when they rejected the Lloyd-George budget, the bill provides that any money bill which the upper chamber does not pass within one month after it is sent up from the lower house, shall, with the royal assent, become law.

The speaker of the commons is given final authority to decide whether any measure deals only with taxation, appropriations and loans, and is properly a money bill. The last, and not the least important provision, reduces the life of a parliament from seven years to five.

These provisions on the bill embody only part of the liberals' proposals regarding the lords. In the preamble is the statement:

"And, whereas, it is intended to substitute for the house of lords as it at present exists a second chamber constituted on a popular, instead of hereditary basis, but such substitution cannot be immediately brought into operation."

On the part of the labor and Irish members objections to the preamble have been brought forward. These extreme enemies of the lords are for a single chamber government, they oppose the reform of the upper house by changing it to an elective body and would have the liberal party drop the preamble from the bill.

There seems little doubt, however, that the government will introduce the bill as it stands, and that it will be passed after a comparatively short debate by the combined votes of liberal, labor and Irish members, and sent up to the lords for their action.

When the lords receive the bill the real struggle will begin. Their policy is not yet disclosed, nor even formulated. For their part the lords already have committed themselves to a different plan of reform. They adopted in the last parliament, after the question became an issue, a resolution framed by Lords Lansdowne and Rosebery. The former declared the lords prepared to forego their legislative right to reject or amend money bills, proposed the settlement by joint session of members of two houses of difference lasting through two sessions of a year's interval, and that difference on matters of great gravity be submitted to a popular referendum.

Lord Rosebery's resolution declared a strong and efficient chamber a necessity and that the possession of a peerage should not of itself give the right to a seat. His suggestion was that half the chamber be composed of lords elected by their own members, as the Scottish members are chosen, the other half, also chosen by the lords, to consist of eminent representatives of commerce, the professions, and those who have held positions in the colonial, military and other services.

Against plans of the peers, the liberals charge that these would enable them to retain a permanent conservative majority. The liberal battle cry is for an upper house, before which liberal members would stand as good a chance as conservatives.
