Second Trial of Arbuckle Now on at Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—Taking testimony in the second manslaughter trial of Roscoe Arbuckle got well under way today, three witnesses being examined at the single session of the court held. The outstanding feature of today's proceedings was the submission to the court of a report prepared by three doctors. This report was used at the first trial of Arbuckle which resulted in a jury disagreement. The doctors examined prisms of Miss Rapp to determine if there was any evidence of weakness in them. The report said there was none and following its reading to the jury the doctors substantiated it with verbal testimony.

WEIRD SUPERSTITION HEARD IN FRANCE

PARIS, Jan. 18.—This curious instance of superstition is described in a recent number of the Paris Temps. The Police Commissioner of the village of Lavallols Perret received a visit some months ago from the Superintendent of the local cemetery, who laid upon his desk a small package wrapped in gray paper, with these words: "In that package is a heart which presents all the characteristics of a human heart. It was found by a young woman on the tomb of her mother, buried about ten inches below the surface of the ground when she was digging a hole to plant an orange bush there. She is inclined to think that this heart is that of her mother, who died after an operation recently, that it was left out of the coffin by mistake and secretly brought to the grave later on. What do you think?"

ASKS GIRLS LOOK PRETTY BUT WARM

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 19.—Dartmouth undergraduates like their girls to look good to the eye, but they are solicitous of their comfort and health. In extending invitations the college's Winter Carnival, 9 to 11, the Dartmouth boys added a plea to the young ladies to provide themselves with mittens, and socks, high cut boots, and warm tan shoes. "We saw you, at last," the message said, "stand in snow in pumps, silk socks, a fur coat. We were sorry you did not look as happy as tried to. So remember that will be now, that you will stand in it, and that it will cold. We wish you to look and warm, not expensive and cold."
