Residents of O'Leary are battling one of the fiercest and most destructive fires in the history of the Province. The fire was discovered at one o'clock and at time of going to press was reported to be still raging furiously. Flames have already taken toll of three warehouses, namely those of A. F. Bell, Kennedy and Kennedy, the latter Farmers' Warehouse, owned by Sanford Phillips, the latter building being the largest of the group. Three C. N. R. freight cars have also been destroyed while both new and old railroad stations and a string of cars are threatened with destruction. The residents of O'Leary have sent to Alberton for additional fire equipment and assistance to combat the blaze, while a locomotive has been ordered from Tignish to remove the freight cars out of danger.

Threatening to sweep the entire village and already causing damage hurriedly estimated between $60,000 and $75,000, flames consuming a number of warehouses in the heart of O'Leary village continued uncontrollable. Over two hundred residents are concentrating their efforts on preventing the flames from destroying two other warehouses, fire haying spread to another of the Kennedy owned buildings and that of H. A. Jelly. The warehouse owned by Sanford Phillips, a three storey structure, was partially covered by insurance, but the farmers of the district will bear the distinct loss of 30,000 bushels of potatoes stored in the building. It was not known at time of writing if the Bell and Kennedy owned properties, with farm contents, carried insurance.

Called away at the early age of thirty-five years, she will be greatly missed, not only by her many friends at Rollo Bay, but also by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances at East Point where she spent her girlhood days.

Residents of O'Leary are battling one of the fiercest and most destructive fires in the history of the Province. The fire was discovered at one o'clock and at time of going to press was reported to be still raging furiously. Flames have already taken toll of three warehouses, namely those of A. F. Bell, Kennedy and Kennedy, the latter Farmers' Warehouse, owned by Sanford Phillips, the latter building being the largest of the group. Three C. N. R. freight cars have also been destroyed while both new and old railroad stations and a string of cars are threatened with destruction. The residents of O'Leary have sent to Alberton for additional fire equipment and assistance to combat the blaze, while a locomotive has been ordered from Tignish to remove the freight cars out of danger.

Threatening to sweep the entire village and already causing damage hurriedly estimated between $60,000 and $75,000, flames consuming a number of warehouses in the heart of O'Leary village continued uncontrollable. Over two hundred residents are concentrating their efforts on preventing the flames from destroying two other warehouses, fire haying spread to another of the Kennedy owned buildings and that of H. A. Jelly. The warehouse owned by Sanford Phillips, a three storey structure, was partially covered by insurance, but the farmers of the district will bear the distinct loss of 30,000 bushels of potatoes stored in the building. It was not known at time of writing if the Bell and Kennedy owned properties, with farm contents, carried insurance.

In the passing of John R. Milligan on Oct. 18th Northern has lost one of its oldest and most outstanding residents. His early life was spent at Traveller's Rest where, in 1878, he married Della Milligan of that place. Fifty-four years ago he moved to Northern where he has since lived. At an early age he took up black-smithing, and soon became a master of his trade. He also possessed a wonderful knowledge of the diseases of animals, and in this connection, many will recall instances of his kindness at one hour of night or day, often without remuneration of any kind, he cheerfully accompanied owners of sick animals to their homes and gave of his skill and his medicines.
