Aussie City Plans Subway

By JACK HOLDSWORTH

SYDNEY, Australia, May 10 — (CP) — Second largest white city in the empire and the largest in Australia, Sydney is to have an electric underground railway system which will rival those operating in other empire cities.

The underground system will be linked up with existing rail track to provide nearly all the metropolitan area with a comprehensive and fast service. About 20 miles of new track will be constructed at a cost of more than $90,000,000. There will also be 19 underground stations.

Experts estimate that the new track will provide a rail service for the 500,000 Sydneysiders living in the eastern, south-eastern and southern suburbs, who now are dependent on bus and tram transport.

They point out that it will do much to relieve the serious congestion of surface transport, particularly in areas near the city where the density of population is greater than that in central New York.

Construction of the system will begin before the end of this year, and is expected to be complete in seven years. It will be undertaken by the railway department, a state government concern, which already has plans laid for the survey work and land resumption required.

One section of the new service will provide train travel to sports grounds, beaches and a racecourse, which will relieve surface transport during carnivals at those places.

Claims Nazis, Japs Had No Agreement Prior To Pearl Hbr.

By TOM REEDY

NUERNBERG, May 13 — A defence witness testified before the International Military Tribunal today that the German naval command in the summer of 1941 "even ordered submarines withdrawn from American waters" for fear of an incident which might provoke the United States to war.

Admiral Gerhard Wagner, former chief of the German naval command staff, appearing as a witness for Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, former naval commander-in-chief, said he knew of no conference between the German high command and the Japanese on any mutual war aim before the Pacific war flared Dec. 7, 1941.

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, he testified, came as a "complete surprise" to the German navy. He said Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, then navy commander-in-chief, Admiral Doenitz, his successor, and all naval departments were ignorant of the Japanese plan.

Raeder is another of the 22 Nazi leaders being tried by the four-power tribunal. His case has been linked repeatedly with that of Doenitz although his defence has not been started. The tribunal expected to finish with the Doenitz defence and take up Raeder's case within a day or two.

"In 1940 and 1941 Raeder talked emphatically against war with Russia," Wagner asserted. "He considered a break with Russia not permissible, and also was convinced our entire strength should be concentrated against Britain. He also felt the United States fleet was very strong and he could not fight the United States and Britain simultaneously."

Mr. S. D. Irvine Passes Suddenly

Residents of the City and Province were shocked yesterday to learn of the sudden passing of Stuart D. Irvine, 47, of Charlottetown, Senior Livestock Fieldman of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Mr. Irvine was stricken on Friday while at his office and passed away in the P.E. Island Hospital Monday morning.

Mr. Irvine was the only son of Mrs. Irvine and the late Donald Irvine of Van Kleek Hill, Ontario. He was born at Breadalbane, Ont., and received his early education there. Later he attended Van Kleek Collegiate Institute and took his Bachelor of Science Degree in Agriculture at the Guelph Agricultural College. Later he also attended Toronto University.

He was for a time on the staff of the Ontario Government's Department of Agriculture, with headquarters at Belleville. Then for several years he was employed with the well-known packing firm of Wilsil's Limited. Finally he joined the staff of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. He was transferred from Alexandria, Ontario to Charlottetown in 1932 as senior livestock fieldman.

It was in this capacity that Mr. Irvine became well and favorably known throughout the Province. A specialist in his line and particularly well informed, his advice on livestock matters was eagerly sought. He was a most impressive and fluent speaker and made a great contribution to the programs of the various livestock field days and agricultural gatherings, not only in Prince Edward Island but throughout the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. Irvine was a devout and active member of the Charlottetown Baptist Church, a member of the Board of Deacons, Religious Education Committee, Men's Association and was formerly assistant superintendent and teacher of the Sunday School.

He leaves to mourn, his wife, formerly Nora MacGillivray, of East Ontario; one son, Donald, 18, a student at Prince of Wales College; and one daughter, Joyce, 12, a student at West Kent School.

A very large number attended a funeral service held last evening at the Baptist Church, with the pastor, Rev. I. Judson Levy officiating. Many floarl tributes and other expressions of sympathy testified to the high regard with which Mr. Irvine was held.

Mrs. Irvine and two children will accompany the remains this morning to Van Kleek Hill, Ont., where interment will take place in the family plot there.

Police Career Tops For Gals Says Lady Cop

By ADELAIDE KERR

NEW YORK, May 13 — (AP) — The blond sat in the Hell's Kitchen police station on a bitter winter day in 1911, wrapped in sealskins and silence. Days of grilling had failed to shake her stony calm or extract a word of evidence concerning a dope smuggler's murder. The inspector, exasperated, strode out to the matron's desk.

"I wish you'd talk to that dame and see if you can't get something out of her," he said to Mary Agnes Sullivan, named for a nun, born a Sullivan, widow of a Sullivan and former travelling saleswoman, who became a police matron so that she could live in New York with her small daughter.

Mary Sullivan walked into the room, sat down beside the blond, talked to her woman to woman and gradually pulled from her the evidence that convicted the slayer. Thus—in a day when there were no New York police women—was born the career of America's best known policewoman, who retired in mid-April, after 36 years' service as Director of the New York Policewoman's Bureau of 195 lady cops.

"And may there be many more policewomen—not only in New York but all over the world," says 64-year-old Mollie Sullivan, who springs from a family of policemen and holds three honor medals for distinguished detective service. It's a fine career for a woman. Of course it's no job for anybody who's simply seeking excitement, because you have to work hard and always be on your toes. But you have the satisfaction of knowing you're adjusting homes and helping mend lives.

Good Detectives

A number of our policewomen are assigned to the missing persons or juvenile aid bureaus, the pickpocket, shoplifting or narcotic squads. Women make fine detectives because of their intuition, their understanding of human nature and their patience. They try to prevent crime as well as control it."

At the time she resigned her saleswoman job to become a policewoman, her old boss said in horror, "That's no job for a lady!" Since then Mary Sullivan has been in many a spot that was no place for a lady.

She had herself committed to jail on a false charge in order to scrape acquaintance with a suspected murderer and collect the circumstantial evidene on which she was later convicted. She lived for weeks with a gangster's opium-smoking moll to collect information on the murder of Herman Rosenthal, shot down in front of a New York hotel. She moved into the suite of a killer's wife to learn her peculiarities of speech — and later mimicked her on the telephone so well that she learned the killer's hideout, and thus brought about his arrest.

The most hair-raising of her experiences were the evenings she spent in a Harlem dive to collect evidence on a white slaver. Wearing mulatto makeup, decked in dime store jewelry and accompanied by a Negro "boy friend," she gave the signal that filled the house with detectives. So perfect was her makeup that, when she entered the station house later with the prisoners, the captain failed to recognize her and said, after one look at her gaudy array, "Stand over there, lady, and keep quiet."

After a life like that you might expect Mrs. Sullivan, now a grandmother, to stay "retired." Instead she is going back to work. This time on the radio, where she expects to appear in a crime series.

More Frozen Fish Reported In Storage

Storage holdings of frozen fresh fish totalled 15,628,733 pounds compared with 17,530,292 on April 1, and 14,562,746 May 1, 1945, while stocks of frozen smoked fish amounted to 1,443,251 pounds against 1,349,523 on April 1 and 1,176,833 last year.

FRIDAY NIGHTS

It is nice to keep Friday night for the children's pleasure while school is in force and other nights are devoted to home work and early retiring. The neighborhood movie may be a treat or just family games with special refreshments following. It keeps the family together as a group and fun will be had by all.

Stresses Need Of Youth Training

Unless we learn together harmoniously as families, cities, provinces and nations, the future of the world is dark indeed, said Mr. R. C. Young, secretary of the Maritime Religious Council, at Rotary yesterday.

The advent of atomic power caused Gen. McArthur to remark that the prevention of another war could no longer be entrusted to military men and scientists, it had become "essentially a theological problem". Mr. Young spoke of the millions of dollars, the great organizations, the skill and brains which had been employed in developing war machines and weapons of destruction, and appealed to his listeners to try to have even a small portion of these now turned to the number one priority—the training and development of our young people. The greatest influence upon the young men and women is the home and the second greatest influence is the "gang". More attention must be paid to our youth, said Mr. Young and he told of the work of his organization in the formation of boy's clubs, Tuxis Parliaments and camps. It is the responsibility of all of us to act as guides and councillors, and so to live ourselves that we may make lighter the burden of those coming after.

Mr. V. A. Ainsworth presided.

Stream Flow Report For April

Leftist Poles Organize Force

(By Larry Allen)

WARSAW, May 13—(AP)—Poland's feared secret police, officers of her army and militia, are teaching thousands of youths how to shoot as the time for the national referendum and general elections draws near.

The official explanation for organization of the so-called "strong-arm" squads—the "Ormo" or citizens reserve militia—is that they are to help regular law-enforcement agencies maintain order.

Sponsored and originally proposed by the Communist-backed Polish workers party and its close ally, the Polish Socialist Party, "Ormo" has grown like a mushroom.

The latest official figure puts their number at 3,000, but the total is reliably reported to be closer to 10,000.

All "Ormo" members wear armbands to designate them as members of the citizens reserve militia.

At least three, and usually four times weekly, "Ormo" members are instructed in the use of pistols, rifles, automatic weapons and grenades by secret police, regular army officers and militiamen.

Whatever the future of "Ormo" may be, it is clear that the provisional government will have at its command many thousands of young men who know how to shoot.

South Africans Seek Laborers For Gold Mines

CAPETOWN, May 13 — (CP) — Spurred by possibilities of the gold strike at Odendaalsrust in the Orange Free State, Minister of the Interior C.F. Clarkson has announced that the Union of South Africa will welcome large-scale immigration from Europe to provide whatever labor may be needed by the new mines.

Mr. Clarkson said there was no quota for immigration in South Africa and existing legislation allows as many immigrants as the country can absorb. It was not legislation but transport and accommodation that were lacking.

"The department of the interior is well aware of the necessity to bring in as many suitable immigrants as possible," said Mr. Clarkson. "Suitability is not judged on nationality or religion but simply on the applicant's ability to fit in with the Union's economic plan and become a useful citizen."

The government still required that prospect immigrants have assurance of employment of a financial guarantee.

Prime Minister Smuts has outlined the government's peacetime defence policy as including a permanent force of approximately 10,000 men, backed by a citizen army of young men similar to a force maintained before the war. Twenty thousand men have already enrolled in the citizen army.

A naval defence force will be developed on a large scale with specially-trained coastal garrisons. The South African air force will be maintained largely on a permanent basis and will include 16 squadrons of bombers and fighters.

Special emphasis will be laid on training and the army will be equipped with the most modern equipment.

The premier said the question of South Africa's contribution to the United Nations international army had not yet been discussed.

The Union's growing coal exports are to be regulated by the new South African Coal Co-ordinating Committee which will deal with allocations in co-operation with coal committees in Washington and London. Brig. J.D. White, former deputy general manager of the South African Railways, has been appointed the Union's representative with the London committee.

The Union is committed to supply about 360,000 tons of coal monthly for bunkering ships in West Africa and a number of Atlantic and Mediterranean bases, for Allied armies in Italy and for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in Greece.

A new company has been formed with legal sanction to attempt to recover treasure from the East Indiaman Grosvenor, which sank 150 miles off Durban in 1782 and is believed to hold a cargo of diamonds and specie. The company believes the ship contains a treasure more valuable than the million-pound haul recovered from another ship, the Egypt, 20 years ago.

C.N.R. Streamline Sleeping Cars

MONTREAL, Que., May 13 — Streamlined sleeping cars made up entirely of individual rooms and which can be formed into suites, and parlor cars with private rooms are some of the new features in store for Canadian travellers. These improvements were reported here today by the Canadian National Railways to be included in its post-war programme for the modernization of its passenger equipment.

One type of sleeper will have 18 "roomettes", the latest individual occupancy space. Another will include ten roomettes and six sections. Completely equipped, each room will have such up-to-date improvements as a bed which will fold into a recess in the wall, allowing more freedom for daytime travel comfort, a medicine cabinet with a mirror and a wardrobe. Beds will be of the latest pullman design.

A bedroom-buffet-lounge car will feature four double bedrooms, with specially constructed partitions, which can be made up into suites. A spacious lounge with a library, a solarium, and a modern buffet section will be other features in this type of car. Parlor cars will include completely equipped private rooms, having restful sofas and seats. These cars will seat 26 persons and will also have ladies lounges. Another type parlor car will aiso have a buffet service.

First class coaches will be longer and wider but will have fewer seats. A glass partition will divide the car into two sections, and seating 32 non-smokers and 38 smokers. Indirect lighting, wide double-plate, armoured glass windows, removable tables, a new design ladies lounge room and interior decorating of light color shades to give a highly pleasing, restful effect will be some of the comforts of these new cars. The seats will be of the "sleepy hollow" type.

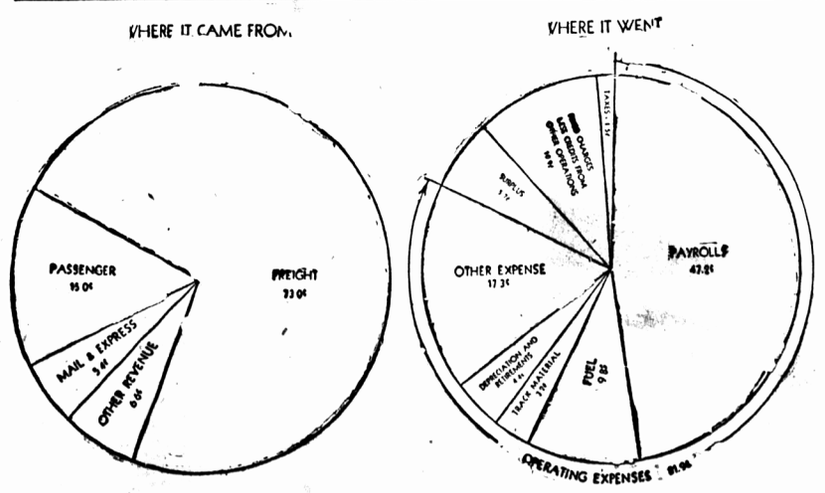
THE CANADIAN NATIONAL DOLLAR



In 1945 the operating revenues of the Canadian National Railways amounted to $433,773,393. Operating expenses were $355,294,048, leaving a net operating revenue of $78,479,345. After paying interest due the public and the government, a surplus of $24,756,130 was turned over to the federal treasury. This was an increase of $1,729,206 over the surplus for 1944.

The "pie charts" above, reproduced from the annual report of the railway, show where the Canadian National dollar came from last year and where it went. Nearly three-quarters of the railway's revenue—73 cents in every dollar earned—comes from freight. In 1945, the C.N.R. carried nearly 80,000,000 tons. Passengers account for 15 cents of every dollar taken in. The system carried 30,370,680 of them last year. The other 12 cents in the incoming dollar were provided by mail and express and other revenues.

Nearly 80 cents of every dollar went toward operating expenses, including payrolls, depreciation and retirements, track material and fuel. Out of every dollar a little more than 18 cents were available for fixed charges (less credits from other operations), taxes and surplus. By far the largest expense item was payrolls. Nearly half of every dollar—47.2 cents—was spent in salaries and wages. Fuel cost 9.8 cents.

According to other figures in the Canadian National report, recently tabled in the House of Commons, while freight and passenger rates in 1945 generally remained fixed at the pre-war level in accordance with the regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, higher wage rates and higher prices of materials added $69,391,000 to operating expenses as compared with 1939.

Time's story continued: "Yellowknifers were only mildly astonished. (at Arsenault's luck). Such things had happened with delightful frequency in the most exciting mine area in the Western Hemisphere."

Gold in small quantities was first discovered in Yellowknife in 1898 but it was not until 1934 that two prospectors found high grade ore on the shore of Yellowknife Bay. Then the rush was on but the war nipped it. Gold-mining was stopped but now it is being revived again.

which denoted and still denotes illegitimacy in terms of heraldry. What makes it worse is that the bar sinister is repeated four times, proclaiming quadruple illegitimacy. In all seriousness, Capada simply couldn't have a device of this kind on her national flag".

Speaking of the significance of the four bars or stripes which denote the four chief geographical divisions of Canada, Mr. Beddoe said that unfortunately they were suggestive not of unity but of separatism. "Of course, they're not as bad as the flags with nine stripes which want to split our Dominion into nine separate parts. But undeniably, they stand for separation."

Attacking the Prince Edward Island-designed flag from another quarter, the expert said that from a naval standpoint it was not a good signal; not a clear means of identification. "The diagonal blue and white lines across the flag militate against its sure identification whether on ship or on a building.

"These diagonal bars come very close to the diagonal stripes used on ships of all descriptions during the war as camouflage. Instead of this flag telling the observer as it should 'I am a Canadian ship', its effect would be to confuse and conceal the ship's identity.

"I don't like to attack any man's design," he concluded, "particularly when at close quarters it is such a bright and attractive design as Mr. Holmn's. But there are legal and constitutional aspects to this flag question. It's not like a beauty contest. It is governed by very definite and specific rules. I see little hope of the flag being supported by more than two or three members of the committee at most."
