Mrs. MacInnis detected a smell of fire and notified the fire department. Before the fire was checked the attic was pretty well burned out and a large hole burned in the roof. What things were in the attic were lost but the remainder of the interior only suffered damage from water and smoke. A good bit of the stock was removed from the ground floor. The firemen were handicapped by the freezing water making it difficult to use their ladders. They also had trouble with the hydrant nearest to the scene of the fire, this with a heavy gale blowing at the time gave the fire a chance to make headway. But in a short time it was under control and all was well.

Will Inspect Inglis Plant

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, March 16—By a vote of 137 to 50 the House of Commons late today defeated a combined opposition attempt to stop the public accounts committee from inspecting the John Inglis Co. plant in Toronto where Bren machine guns are being made for the National Defence Department.

The motion defeated was to strike out a clause in the committee's report which asked approval for a trip to Toronto on Saturday. The motion, in form of an amendment to the committee report, was moved by Grant MacNeil (CCF Vancouver North).

Conservative Leader Manion described the expedition as futile and unnecessary because no member of the committee would be fitted to express technical opinions on process of manufacture. The plant they would see now was not the one in existence when the contract was let. It was a new plant built and equipped with government funds.

A Hacking, Racking Persistent Cough

The constant hacking, racking, persistent cough that sticks to you in spite of everything you do to get rid of it is the kind that is dangerous to neglect.

The longer the cough sticks, the more serious menace it becomes to your health.

But, there is a remedy to relieve coughs—coughs that won't let go. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is that remedy.

It has a healing and soothing action on the air passages, and acts as a disinfectant of the respiratory organs, destroying the germs that may produce serious complications.

New Assessment Bill Denounced As Confiscatory

FREDERICTON, March 16—(CP)—A bill promoted by the Saint John Real Estate Owners Association to amend the Saint John Assessment Act was described before the municipalities committee of the New Brunswick legislature today as the most "confiscatory" piece of legislation ever introduced in the province.

That was how it was summed up by F. C. Inches, K.C., who represented the owners of 800 lots of land.

On the other hand it was pictured by F. C. Poohey, youthful law student who is secretary of the Real Estate Owners Association, as an attempt to break the "iron hold" of a few estates which, he claimed, owned three-quarters of the land in Saint John, to the detriment of the development of that city. He represented a large group of lessees of leasehold property.

The bill, most contentious measure to be considered this session, was stood over to be debated in private by the committee after the proponents and opponents had been heard at morning and afternoon sittings.

Britain's Air Might Stressed

Impressive Defence Measures Reviewed By Admiralty Secretary In Commons

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON, March 16—Great Britain's first line of defence, her fleet, is strong enough to "accept a direct challenge in battle by any probable combination of foes," Geoffrey Shakespeare, financial secretary to the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today.

Mr. Shakespeare was presenting for approval naval estimates of £149,00,000 ($700,000,000) for the fiscal year 1939-40. The naval estimate for the preceding year was £126,000,000.

He said there were three possible threats to British supremacy —from an enemy fleet, from enemy submarines, and the danger of air attack.

Britain's revamped fleet is able to cope with the first threat, he said.

As for the submarine menace, "I believe our methods of detecting, hunting and killing submarines are more advanced than any other in the world." He pointed to the system of convoying troop and supply ships as the most effective measure of reducing the peril—as was shown in the Great War. Britain's supply of anti-submarine guns is large, he revealed, and on the outbreak of war a large number of ships will be taken over by the Royal Navy for anti-submarine operations.

Aircraft Defense

He said a similar method of defence would be used against the threat of aircraft attack—that of furnishing merchant ships with escort vessels specially equipped with anti-aircraft armament. "Closest cooperation with the Royal Air Force will be essential as such convoys approach our coasts," he added.

Of the £149,000,000 estimate, £61,000,000 will be spent on "shipbuilding and engineering work on vessels of the new construction programs for 1939 and the previous years, and repairs of the existing fleet," the secretary said.

"During the course of the current financial year," he stated, "60 warships have been added to the navy, and during the course of 1939 another 60 will have joined the fleet.

"We shall have in commission 10 cruisers of the Southampton class, each of 9,000 to 10,000 tons.

"The 1939 new building program includes two fast battleships of 40,000 tons displacement and with 16-inch gun armament."

Naval Armament

Speaking of the gunpower of the new battleships, Mr. Shakespeare said: "The Nelson's (33,500 tons, launched 1925) 16-inch guns can hurl projectiles each of the weight of a medium-sized motor car from the palace yard to St. Alban's, (approximately 25 miles) and hurl many of them each minute with amazing precision.

"The gun power of these two capital ships of the 1939 program, I need hardly say, is superior to the Nelson's.

"The 1939 program also includes four trade-protection cruisers of the Fiji type and a new large aircraft carrier. The special need for smaller vessels which parliament last year emphasized is met by the inclusion of two flotillas of destroyers and 20 escort vessels of a new type.

"These escort vessels will be of about 900 tons displacement, of high speed and with armament designed to meet submarine and aircraft attack. This type can and will be constructed in the shortest possible time. Delivery should have started by May, 1940. These 20 ships will be a welcome addition to those vessels specially designed or adapted for the protection of shipping.

"We have at present 35 escort and patrol vessels. To this total will be added 36 destroyers and 16 cruisers, conversion of which to anti-aircraft work is progressively proceeding.

"The immensity of our building progress can be realized if we add the 1939 program to those already in progress. Our dockyards and shipbuilding yards will be engaged in the course of the year in building some 200 vessels, or a total of 870,000 tons.

"In this total there will be included nine battleships, six aircraft carriers, 25 curisers, 43 destroyers, 19 submarines and a large number of small vessels. This is an achievement never approached in peacetime."

BLOW DEALT CHAMBERLAIN PEACE POLICY

Munich Pact Another "Scrap Of Paper" As Germans March Eastward.

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 16—Chancellor Hitler's destruction of democratic Czecho-Slovakia and his flagrant disavowal of the Munich Agreement has left the British public gaping open-mouthed at his ruthlessness, asking "is he determined to dominate the whole of Europe?"

The British public excused the Austrian anschluss on ethnological grounds and even excused Hitler's prior promise not to invade his homeland. The cession of Sudetenland in the Munich Agreement was accepted because war seemed the only alternative.

Going back still further, Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland, secret rearmament and repudiation of the Versailles Treaty found many apologists here.

But when Hitler planted his swastika flag in Prague he seems to have aroused the British public more than at any time since his Nazi Party swept into power in Germany.

SIGNATURE WORTHLESS

Two factors are responsible for this manifestation of distaste. First, Hitler's demonstration that his treaty signature is worthless. Second, his annexation of territory where millions of non-Germans reside, the first indication his racial theories are not responsible for his foreign policy.

Hitler apparently did something else when he sent troops into Czecho-Slovakia. He seems to have killed Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement policy, at least as far as giving Germany concessions or relying on Hitler's signature on a treaty. If he did not kill it, he dealt it a terrific blow, because the British public today is asking how Hitler can be appeased.

"Scrap of Paper"

In the eyes of many Government supporters Hitler has demonstrated his allegiance to a treaty is of transitory nature. The Prime Minister and his followers put their entire faith in the Munich Settlement as a practical demonstration to the world that democracies and dictators could get along together. But now the Munich Treaty is another "scrap of paper" and the German juggernaut is rolling through southeast Europe.

A vast majority of the British people accepted the Munich Agreement not only because it avoided war but on racial grounds as well. Hitler said the Sudetenland was his last territorial demand in Europe and not only Mr. Chamberlain but the British people believed him.

Now that Munich is a thing of the past there is clamor for intensification of rearmament and for political talks between British and French statesmen when the President of the French Republic, Albert Lebrun, makes a visit of state here next week.

Mr. Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons that Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, may be recalled to London to report on the events in central Europe. If he is recalled it would be still another manifestation of Britain's repugnance of Germany's actions.
