WINS VOTES

was proposed by Louis De Chapdelaine.

Attacks on France's present foreign policy were led by Paul Reynolds, moderate, and Leon Blum, Socialist.

Replying to their charges, the Premier said he had never forsaken League of Nations policy in drawing up the ill-fated Hoare-Laval peace plan. He declared he showed no conciliation to Italy.

He asserted his visits to Moscow and Rome, as well as any negotiations with Germany, were dictated by the sole interest of European peace under the aegis of Geneva.

A storm of applause broke over the packed Chamber as the vote of confidence was announced. Since the session began at nine a. m. France had awaited the outcome of the debate.

Among a number of hitherto unknown facts which Premier Laval divulged to the Chamber concerning France's relations with Germany, the Soviet Union, Britain and Italy were the following:

1. Political agreement was reached between France and Britain on Oct. 18. Conversations between the naval staffs of the two countries for collaboration in the Mediterranean began on that date.

2. The army and air staffs of the two countries entered into conversations on coordination of their respective forces against Italy on Dec. 9 and 10.

3. The Laval-Mussolini agreement of Jan. 7, 1935, did not, as has been commonly charged, Italy a free hand in Ethiopia. It was, Premier Laval said, "purely economic."

4. "As long as a Franco-German rapprochement is not realized, there exists no effective guarantee for peace in Europe. I do not conceive of any separate agreement with Germany but consider Franco-German relations only within the organization of collective European security."

5. Premier Laval confirmed that during his conversation with Sir Samuel Hoare on Dec. 6 the two statesman discussed steps to bring Germany back into the League of Nations.

6. The Franco-Soviet pact, said Premier Laval, is not to be regarded as a military alliance. "This pact was conceived according to the letter and spirit of the Covenant. This pact's purpose is to organize mutual assistance if one of the two powers is attacked. But one precaution was necessary—that this should never enter into contradiction with the Locarno Pact upon which the security of France directly rests."

7. Premier Laval said he and the representatives of Great Britain had always been in perfect agreement on the course to be pursued and that no difficulties had ever arisen between them.

Developing further the mutual aid negotiations with Britain, Premier Laval said the conversations on naval matters were extended to include the participation of the army and the air general staffs on Dec. 9 and 10. The Italian ambassador, he said, was kept fully in touch with these conversations.

France, he added, was the only one of the 54 members of the League which took steps and went so far in technical matters of this kind.

Women Not Accepted As Anglican Priests

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Archbishop's commission on the ministry of women in the Church of England, in a report published here, has recommended that women be admitted to the priesthood. The commission, however, claims recognition for the order of deaconesses.

The report said the commissioners "do not feel able, in view of the past history and existing conditions of the Church, to recommend the admission of women to the priesthood."

However, it urged the status and functions of the deaconess should be developed and that the work and training of lay women should be greatly extended.

Dr. Wener Matthews, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral and a member of the commission, dissented from that part of the report concerning ordination of women to the priesthood.

KIPPLING QUINTS READY TO GREET THE NEW YEAR

70 TODAY TO GREET THE NEW YEAR

Poet Lives Life of Seclusion in Sussex Home.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Rudyard Kipling, who has lived in virtual seclusion for the past two decades, tomorrow will be 70 years old.

His time nowadays is spent almost exclusively at his weather-worn Burwash, Sussex, home. There, behind a moat and an eight-foot hedge, he has sought peace from the world.

For years running on the eve of the publication of the New Year's or King's birthday honours list it was the fashion of newspaper prophets to announce that Kipling was about to receive the coveted and exclusive Order of Merit.

Other distinguished and exclusive writers who hold the Order of Merit are John Galsworthy, the poet laureate, Sir James Barrie, the historian George M. Trevelyan and Robert Bridges, the late poet laureate.

It was even predicted that Kipling would receive the Order of Merit upon the death of Alfred Austin in 1913.

The story goes that he gravely displeased Queen Victoria with his sonnet "The Widow at Windsor". Its opening lines were as follows:

"'ave you 'eard of the widow at Windsor,
'With a hairy gold crown on her head?
'She 'as ships on the foam, she 'as millions at 'om,
'And she 'ays us poor beggars in 'ed."

Against this may be cited his "Recessional", which he said gave him more trouble than anything else he ever wrote.

It can confidently be stated that whatever resentment may once have arisen in royal circles has long since evaporated. Kipling probably never had to handle to his name or initials following it save those bestowed in academic distinction.

Recurring stories that Kipling is in failing health are relieved by wags' descriptions. They say his step is brisk and his eye bright.

New Experiment On Guinea Pigs

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, Associated Press Science Editor) NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The little guinea pig used for medical experiments which have saved man untold suffering, was reported in a field today, giving its unborn young for medical experiments of a delicacy impossible by other methods.

The discovery was described to the Society for American Bacteriology by Oram Woolpert of Ohio State University. He was verified by five other scientists who told how they already have used the new technique.

Woolpert devised methods of inoculating disease germs directly into the unborn guinea pig young, before the ages of 25 and 65 days. During that period, he showed, the tiny animals are completely sterile, apparently uncomplicated by taints of disease even from their mothers.

These taints of other diseases present are one of the common obstacles to successful experiments with any animal after its birth. Woolpert said he had inoculated these young pigs with infantile paralysis, tuberculosis and diphtheria. Paralysis failed to take, the others were successful.

"It is believed," he reported, "that these experiments established the practicability of the technique and suggest a wide field of usefulness in bacteriological studies because of freedom from external contamination and greater susceptibility to certain infectious agents."

Using the same method I. S. Nieman, University of Chicago, reported results in studying human tuberculosis. Joseph Skirring and Paul Hudson, respectively of the University of Chicago and Ohio State, also reported on their experiments. They found the unborn pigs susceptible to the smallpox vaccine in a way rarely seen in adult pigs.

Floyd Markham and Hudson worked with a virus from the submaxillary glands of guinea pigs. They concluded from this experiment that the unborn pig is the "animal of choice for detection of virus and for securing tissues rich in virus."

Hon. Mr. Dunning

is good for the system." Mr. Dunning credited Senator Sinclair and Mr. A. E. MacLean, M. P., for successful efforts in obtaining, through him, the $2,000,000 placed in the Estimates to construct the present car ferry steamer during the regime of the first King Government.

He referred also to the Ducan Report. He would always be proud of having drafted the preamble to the Maritime Freight Rates Act which was drawn up in accord with the recommendation of the Ducan Commission. Questions relating to the Act are now before the Courts and are subjudice, but he could say, nevertheless, that he knew the same Government had in mind in drafting this legislation and he had no doubt as to the attitude which Parliament would adopt towards it.

The Finance Minister devoted some time to answering criticism that Liberalism in Canada stood for a "laissez faire" policy.

In all important things, he said, the interest of Prince Edward Island and the Maritime Provinces are in common with the interests of every other province.

He stressed the difficult problems in his own department. Canada's debt had now increased to a total of $3,383,000,000. During the last fiscal year there was an increase of $116,000,000 expenditure over revenue, and the figures had been about the same for the current fiscal year.

The individual provinces are in relatively as bad shape financially. Also, if it is any satisfaction to us, we may reflect that there are other countries in even worse position. It was up to Canadians to appreciate the load Canada is carrying, and co-operate in reducing it.

Dealing with matters discussed at the recent Dominion-Provincial conference at Ottawa, Mr. Dunning spoke in support of the need of amending the British North America Act without reference to Westminster. New Brunswick was the only province opposed to this suggestion. It was a step which must be taken with "the utmost care" but it was necessary that the situation be brought "more in harmony with the life of the people."

"I did not find any Province that was willing to give up anything to the Federal Government. Everyone was there" (at the Ottawa conference) "in the hope of getting something from me as Finance Minister."

There was no "birthday" celebration at the hospital today, but upon the weighing and measuring formalities. The five struggled and kicked when they felt protesting, while the nurses dangled new Christmas toys to keep them amused and Dr. Dafoe finished the job as fast as he could.

Mr. Dunning was hesitant about explaining "what a wonderful deal we made" in the reciprocity treaty, but he argued, his remarks would be placarded all through the United States and used as material for attacking the United States administration. This, he maintained, was what is being done in Canada. It illustrated "the need of one single commodity which is very rare, the quality of common sense; and I propose to display what little I have of common sense by telling you very frankly that I believe the Canada-American treaty is darn good business for both countries."

Mr. Dunning defended "big business" with which his name has been associated by arguing that because a thing is big it is not necessarily evil, and vice versa.

"What is of the greatest importance to build into our capital structure," he added, "is the sound principle of trusteeship." He instanced Canadian banking institutions as an example.

Canada, he concluded, had been very good to him. "My greatest ambition is to co-operate with you in again making this land of ours a land of opportunity for young men in their teens. By that I don't mean spoon-feeding them and mollycoddling them, but giving them a chance to work if they have got initiative enough to develop it. The highest wage I ever earned on the farm was a dollar a day, and I don't think I was worth it. But the opportunity was boundless. What use is any country unless it will give to its young people that kind of an opportunity to grow into self-sustaining citizens? Let's recreate that condition in this country. It can be done; it must be done." (Applause.)

HON. MR. MICHAUD

Introduced by Senator Sinclair, who expressed satisfaction at the Fisheries portfolio having gone to a man of his ability, Hon. J. E. Michaud, Minister of Fisheries, visited pleasure at the opportunity of revisiting the Province after twenty-five years' absence. He intended visiting the fishing centres next season. He wished to reassure the audience that Mr. Dunning was "not a Westerner or a representative of the mentality of the Middle Provinces, but a real and true Canadian."

He wished also to thank the Conservatives of Queens County for not offering opposition to the Fisheries election. In that connection he expressed his appreciation of the problems facing the government of Canada at the present time.

The Fisheries Department, he said, would receive his full attention and he would be pleased to receive representations from those concerned in the industry at any time. It is intended to use the organization of the department to increase the sport fisheries and thereby develop the tourist industry. At the forthcoming fishery conference this Province would be worthily represented by Professor Cyrus Macmillan. Co-operation was emphasized as the great need in dealing with the fishery and other problems of the Maritimes.

MOVES NOMINATION

Moving Mr. Dunning's nomination Dr. I. J. Yeo said he did so with a sense of satisfaction and a feeling of joy and pride. He recalled the brilliant career of the late Sir Louis Davies. Today marked an auspicious event, Mr. Dunning being "a double future Prime Minister of Canada" as well as an able and experienced statesman in whose achievement every Canadian must be proud.

"All honour to the Conservative party in realizing Mr. Dunning's position in the government, and in generously and wisely deciding to contest the seat against him," he concluded.

Mr. Watson Shea, Iona, in seconding the motion, commended Mr. Dunning's past record as Finance Minister.

Mrs. J. A. Lawson, President of the Women's Liberal Club of Charlottetown, said the Island was specially honoured in having Mr. Dunning as a representative. Of Mr. Dunning's "generous gesture" in vacating the seat she said: "It takes a big man to recognize a bigger man."

CELEBRATE "OLYMPIC NEW YEAR"

MUNICH.—(C.P.)—The Olympic Games are to mark new year's celebrations in the "party capital." Huge displays of fireworks with the Olympic signs will "greet the Olympic year" after the period of preparation. Garmisch-Partenkirchen, where the Olympic winter games will open Feb. 6, is situated in the neighbourhood of Munich.

NEVER MIND THE RAIN

SYDNEY, Australia.—(C.P.)—Despite soaking rain cricketers at Sealelake played their match to a finish. The fieldsmen wore overcoats. Being nearly all farmers, they did not mind the conditions, for they were consoled by the knowledge that the rain was benefitting their crops.

SOMETHING TO WORK ON

Inventive Geniuses Attention.

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—There are no strings to this contest which is open to Canadians from coast to coast and for which not only the Dominion but the whole world is anxious to pay prize money.

A patent solicitor who has registered many an invention in world-wide use reveals there are several much-needed gadgets, jiggers and what-nots man's inventive genius has not yet succeeded in bequeathing to posterity.

The list, put forward by manufacturers and scientists, includes:

A pastels wallpaper which can be put into position dry.

An apparatus to record incoming telephone messages in the absence of the person called or, alternatively, a device which will record the telephone number of the person making the call.

Buttons for under clothing made from resilient rubber which will be put through the stringing machine without danger of breaking.

A safety razor holder which automatically dries itself after use without needing to be dismantled.

A kitchen utensil for shelling peas quickly.

A cigarette that does not drop the ash (wives ask husbands to work on this one).

A method of freezing gasoline so it can be carried with safety by airplanes, a small portion only being released as used.

A system of announcing the names of stations clearly and distinctly before the train arrives, at each station by loudspeakers in each coach.

A motor car windshield which will remain clear and give a large field of vision without using a mechanical wiper or any other device moving across the line of vision.

A kettle which will automatically lower the gas or electricity immediately the water is boiling.

A lipstick case that can be manipulated with one hand only, thus making it possible to raise or lower the pencil with one hand while the other—left hand holding the bag; Pencil case, for important documents, bank notes and cheques. The folding qualities and durability of the paper should not be affected.

Boston Police Probe Tale Of Spurned Wealth

BOSTON, Dec. 29.—A poor, old man, once a fish cutter, who fell dead on a busy street yesterday, was being investigated tonight by Boston police who heard strange tales of his having turned down a $75,000 share in a Nova Scotia estate just before his death.

The man, James Logan, 70, for the past year or two had done odd jobs for Fred Thede, basket manufacturer, to eke out a living.

Not long ago, police said, a woman, believed by them to be his estranged wife, had tried to get him to sign a legal paper whereby she would have brought him a $75,000 share in a Nova Scotia estate.

Boston police tonight were searching the South End, trying to discover the woman who holds the key to the tale of his spurned wealth.

They did not even know if she was his wife although earlier Patrolman Otis Wynn reported he knew Logan and told the story of the apparently unclaimed wealth.
