

STARTLING

"My! What a difference there is in cleansers! Now I can see why Old Dutch goes further and costs less to use."

"You're quite right. It is startling, isn't it, how different Old Dutch Cleanser is. As you see, its particles are flaky and flat-shaped. Because of that, they cover more surface and remove dirt quickly, easily and without scratching. Gritty particles, on the other hand, are irregular chunky shapes and merely scratch the surface with their hard, sharp points."

Get your money's worth. Use Old Dutch Cleanser. Ounce for ounce, it does more square yards of cleaning than anything else. In addition, it protects beautiful surfaces because it doesn't scratch; is kind to the hands; doesn't clog drains; is odorless and removes odors. Old Dutch is unsurpassed for all cleaning from porcelain and enamel to kitchen utensils, floors and woodwork. It's the only cleanser you need in your home.

CHAPTER 16
A NIGHT OFF

After the first few discouraging days, to Molly Benedict's intense delight, her new tea shop began to pick up a most encouraging amount of trade. Of course it was not yet on anything like a paying basis but even the sanguine Molly could not have expected that miracle. Slowly but surely, however, she was getting a fair-sized clientele.

The business itself was far from running smoothly as yet. Molly was learning more about marketing but was still bewildered by the intricacies of shopping on so large—and uncertain—a scale. She was getting setler accustomed to handling her shop but still was far from being an efficient executive. The art students who waited on table were an uncertain quantity. Some days they appeared promptly and did fairly well. Other days they made Molly want to shake them. She went to bed each night perplexed with her many problems and weary from the fray but not without realizing she was a far happier Molly than the listless idle little widow she had been a few weeks previous.

She finally moved her personal things to her new quarters over the tea shop, dubious about whether she could really afford two rooms she kept for her personal use but acutely happy to have them. They were furnished with extreme simplicity save for a beautiful old sofa and some arm chairs she had borrowed from her great aunt's attic. The tiny room at the side seemed to her hardly big enough for two girls and Molly she finally consented to rent it to Lilla Allerton and her friend, the big room at the front of the house had been taken by an elderly couple whose suddenness Molly demurely boasted to herself that he himself couldn't have found more irreproachable tenants for her. Jimmie, whose middle-aged point of view was more or less of a damper on Molly's youthful enthusiasm, was still frowning at the whole venture.

"You've been open less than a week and you're already fagged out with it," he grumbled.

"I am tired," the petite Molly was forced to admit, "but that's only from the worry of getting things ready. Jimmie had been so tactful in one respect, he hadn't appeared every night. He pretended it was because no self-respecting man-sized man could eat in tea rooms, but Molly gaily twitted him with the fact that she ate enormously when he did come, and that even though he ridiculed himself on being a connoisseur he couldn't honestly find fault with the delicious evening meal that she so cleverly advertised as "hot supper."

The cook, who was a treasure, had a score of artful culinary tricks. Her meat pies were toothsome pastries tucked full of many vegetables and much good gravy and plenty of meat. Her puddings were simply homemade kinds, delicately prepared.

But the "salaried girl" (who would never see fifty again) was her bitter enemy. Their feud was at once Molly's delight and despair.

If you could hear the terrible things they say to each other!" Molly confided to Jimmie. "It's a wonder the custards and the mayonnaise does not curdle!"

The shop was just opening for the evening. Jimmie had lingered near Molly's desk eager for a chat.

"But I don't want to hear the things they say," he was almost dangerously blunt. "You and your tea shop! I'm overjoyed to get up with it!" he grumbled. "You've not taken a minute off since the idea hit you—come on, run upstairs and put your best bib and tucker on while I go on my faithful tux—I'll be back in thirty-five minutes exactly, with Ronny Glidden's car and chauffeur—his out of town and loaned me the leisurely elegance—we'll go some jazzy spot and eat and dance and forget my troubles."

"Your troubles," Molly ejaculated. "Why, you haven't any and you know it."

"All right we'll forget yours—"

She sighed as she looked down at the grey linen frock that was fast becoming a uniform these days. Her brown hair was drawn smoothly back from her lovely forehead; she really looked remarkably fresh considering her hard day. But woman-like she protested.

"I've nothing to wear and I'm tired and it's too late."

"It's not half past nine," Jimmie informed her almost crossly.

She agreed most reluctantly. Upstairs, as she donned her one evening dress, a model black lace affair, she wished she hadn't let herself be persuaded. She sighed ruefully as she put on her dancing slippers, shabby things, but all she had. She couldn't possibly afford

Scout News and Notices

KIRK TROOP

The members of this troop are meeting regularly every Friday and are making good progress. A hike was scheduled for one night, but as it turned out to be well below zero it was postponed. The troop is looking forward to another opportunity at an early date. The Kirk Cubs are a promising bunch, and meet regularly every Wednesday night. They are making good progress and promotions will soon be the order.

7TH CHOTOWN TROOP

This troop meets at St. Paul's Parish Hall, each Monday at 7 p. m. The programme is always full and varied, new games being introduced frequently.

Ralph Smith, a former member of another troop, has recently joined the 7th Chotown. He is of great assistance to the troop, being a First Class Scout, and well qualified to show the appreciation of him by electing him Troop Leader.

The Chief Scout, Lord Baden-Powell, will not pay his visit here until a year from now. It has been decided he will make his World Tour via east to west instead of west to east as at first planned. If the regular programme had been adhered to the Chief would have been here in August, now it will be May or June of next year.

Lady Baden-Powell is Chief Guide, and accompanies her husband, as well as two daughters, Beatrice and Betty. Miss Maudie Wilson, leader of the Girl Guides in this Province has been in regular correspondence with Miss Warren, Toronto, Leader of the Girl Guides in Canada on the prospective visit, being in conjunction with Provincial Boy Scout Commissioner Warren here has been making provisional arrangements for the reception of the two Chiefs.

MANY MEN LIVING PERMANENT WAVES

OMAHA, Neb., March 7.—Male customers are flocking to the beauty parlors for their permanents, Miss Marie Callahan of Chicago, editor of a beauty trade magazine, today told delegates to the fifth annual Trans-Mississippi beauty at a convention.

The situation of 10 years ago when the influx of women into the men's barber shops constituted a worry to the barbers is now being reversed. Beauticians are now worrying about how they can take care of their regular women customers along with the increasing numbers of male customers.

"The once cow punchers wend their way to the beauty shops and salons every spring and fall, just before the roundups."

Hollywood—not Paris—is the hair style centre of the world, Miss Callahan added.

ENDS PAIN OF STOMACH TROUBLE

With English Specialist's Formula

"My first doses," writes an English sufferer from stomach trouble, "absolutely sent away all the pain and bitterness which I had been suffering from for years."

In many English hospitals remarkable success is attending the use of a scientific formula developed by a great London, England, Stomach Specialist for the relief of Acidity, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Flatulence and Gout.

This formula, under the name of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, has attained tremendous sales in England, and it is rapidly proving its efficacy here in Canada.

Every sufferer from stomach trouble should try this Maclean Brand Powder. It stops pain and distress quickly.

Get Maclean Brand Stomach Powder from your druggist in bottles (powder or tablets) at 75c. It is never sold loose—only in packages clearly marked with the signature, "Alex. C. Maclean." Look for the signature. Sole Canadian distributors, Higo Agencies, Toronto.

DRESS MUST HARMONIZE WITH HAIR STYLE

If you wear a Victorian outfit style, a special type of clothes and a new line of thought as to cosmetics are necessary. If you're going to cut bangs and do your hair in a simple manner, you'll have to consider your whole get-up from a Victorian viewpoint.

A fringe is quaint and old-fashioned and you'll mar the effect of it if your hair is applied too hastily or if clothes don't harmonize.

One smart debutante arranges her hair this way, wears no rouge at all, applies a touch of eye shadow to her lids and uses lipstick generously.

To see her with a little turban-effect, fur-trimmed hat and a diminutive muff to match the fur on the hat is a treat.

You don't have to "go" completely mid-Victorian in order to wear your hair that way. There's no reason why a modern woman should look incongruous wearing that culture on a warm southern beach.
