MR AND MRN. HUBERT HOWARD, of South Wiltshire, leave in a few days for Sacramento, Cal., where they will spend about two years with friends there. Mrs. Howard, nee Miss McCallum, of Brackley Point, and her genial husband have many warm friends in this Island.

MR. WENDALL HARVIE has recently taken three different photographic views of the city. The point of view was from the highest part of the steeple on the steeple of new R.C. Cathedral—only a few feet from the top. One of the photographs gives a complete view of the eastern portion of the city showing the First Methodist Church, the Exhibition Buildings and Falconwood. Another shows the northern portion of the city while the third brings out clearly the wharves and shipping and the harbor.

We hear from a correspondent that two memorable marriages are just going on at Truchanur. In one case the bride is only a little child just a year old and hardly able to stand erect, and her would be husband is a boy of 10 or 11, and his eyesight is said to be defective, but the parents say that because Brahma wills that he should be the husband of the little baby there can be really no help for it. In the other case the bride is 4 years old, and the husband is ten times older. Our correspondent adds: "Such marriages have not altogether ceased in this country, and these clearly indicate the necessity for effective legislation. Let those who object to the introduction of the two recent bills with which the country is familiar and which follow the lines of the law now in force in the Mysore territory pause and think calmly over the deplorable state of things."—Advocate of India.

Lawson, is busily engaged in buying and shipping cats.—Little York has some very fine fat cattle. Butchers would do well to visit here before buying elsewhere.—We regret to learn that Mr. H. Lewis had a very fine heifer badly hurt the other day. While going into the stable she slipped and broke her leg.—Mr. W. H. Crockett has moved into his new house which is a beautiful structure and reflects credit on the builder, Mr. Chapell of Suffolk.—The annual prize shooting of No. 4. Company was held last Saturday, when some very good shooting was done.—Our school is progressing favourably under the management of Mr. V. Crockett.—Little York still continues to sustain its Temperance Principles as was shown on election day when all the voters except one turned out to give prohibition a reusing majority.

A MONTREAL VIEW.

Of the P. E. Island Tax on Commercial Travellers.

The attempt of the government of Prince Edward Island to make easier the collection of its extraordinary tax on commercial travellers by practically outlawing before the courts all who manage to evade the tax, is a matter in which more than Prince Edward Islanders are interested. As explained in another column, the local legislature passed recently a law which now lies on the desk of the minister of justice at Ottawa for allowance or disallowance, making it impossible for a merchant doing business outside of Prince Edward Island to collect in the provincial courts a debt from a citizen of that province contracted by selling him goods, unless it can be shown that the agent who sold the goods had paid the provincial tax on commercial travellers.

This is striking a blow at the basis of our commercial system. That a man is to be excused from paying a debt for any reason except actual bankruptcy, is to deliberately open the door to dishonesty; and that such a state of affairs should be created simply to facilitate the collection of a petty tax, would be an outrage on all decency. It would be an insult to declaring that burglars are free to enter and rob the premises of those who may be in arrears in their municipal tax, compelling every householder complaining of such an outrage before the courts to produce his receipted tax bill on pain of being told to go about his business and not worry an honest burglar.

If the province of Prince Edward Island chooses to tax commercial travellers, it is at all events now too late for the federal government to interfere, but it certainly ought not to be permitted to abrogate the fundamental law of every civilized community in order to make a little surer of collecting its tax. Burning a house down to roast a pig is a wise operation when contrasted with this. And as to the tax, surely our Prince Edward Island friends do not think that the commercial travellers really pay it in the last analysis. They might as well expect the "drummers," or the houses they represent, to pay their travelling expenses themselves, and never think of adding them to the prices of their goods. Undoubtedly the commercial men simply add this tax to their bill of expenses, and it is assessed on the goods sold to the people of Prince Edward Island, who thus must pay it, plus the interest on the money and the profit on the investment. It is only an indirect and expensive way of taxing themselves, and incidentally annoying the men who do business with them.

Hall Caine's New Line.

Arrangements have been made with Mr. Hall Caine, who came to the United States some weeks ago with the sole object of rehearsing and producing the play, "The Christian," which is now running with such great success in New York, to make a number of appearances on the platform during November. The entertainment he will present is not a lecture, but a story. He tells a story which occupies the entire evening, and may be called a spoken novel one which he has never written, and probably will not write. This novel entertainment was suggested to Mr. Caine ten years ago while travelling in the east on seeing the rapt interest of the crowds in the market place while listening to the stories of the eastern story-tellers. The story which Mr. Caine tells is named "Home, Sweet Home," and it is a very simple, tender, humorous fable, constructed on the lines of the large family stories which find such exquisite expression in Washington Irving's "Rip Van Winkle."
