READY FOR CHRISTMAS.—I am currently reported that a quantity of liquor variously estimated at between 40 and 80 cases, was "lifted" from a garage in the city where it was being housed temporarily. The identity of the lifter became known and the owner appealed to him for the immediate return of the goods under threat of legal action. The lifter, secure in the fact that possession is nine points of the law, invited him to proceed with his prosecution, intimating that in the meantime he needed the goods for Christmas and intended keeping them. The grade of the liquor is not mentioned and it is believed it has not been subjected to government inspection.

WERE NOT NEGLECTED.—According to an Express Company's representative the fowls referred to in yesterday's issue as having been left at the railway station for two days were not neglected but were fed every day. The birds would not be accepted by the buyers, conceivably they had all they could handle. The express people say they made every effort possible to get in touch with the owners as soon as possible and got orders yesterday to ship them back which was done.

Rain of Shells Near Brooklyn Caused Terror

Explosions of Six and Ten-Inch Projectiles on Lighten. Fight From Homes

New York, Dec. 8.—Hundreds of homes in the Fort Hamilton section of Brooklyn virtually were under heavy artillery bombardment this afternoon resulting from intense fire from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. A terrific explosion of six inch and ten inch shells on a steam lighter which caught fire while moored to the army reservation wharf. Guttering together their belongings in belief that the naval arsenal at Fort Lafayette, a small island near Fort Hamilton was ablaze terrified scores fled their homes to the safer zones, driven to frenzied haste by a series of demonstrations which were heard for miles around.

An official statement from Fort Hamilton tonight said no lives had been lost and that only four persons were injured slightly. One of the terrifying incidents of the barrage was the 400 yard flight of a ten inch shell clear over the reservation and into a house in Fort Hamilton Parkway. The heavy projectile tore a huge hole in the roof of the dwelling, passed through two floors and buried itself in the cellar. The house, which was occupied by August Colburn and several members of his family, all of whom escaped injury, was shaken with the violence of an earthquake.

The lighter which was laden with 900 shells for shipment to Boston was torn from its moorings by the violence of the first explosion at about 5:40 p. m. Two men were of time a naval tug reached the scene and in a desperate effort to prevent the flames spreading to the wharf the commanding officer deliberately headed his craft for the blazing lighter and its exploding cargo. He struck her nose against the side of the lighter and pushed her away to a sand bar in imminent peril of his own craft being blown from the water.

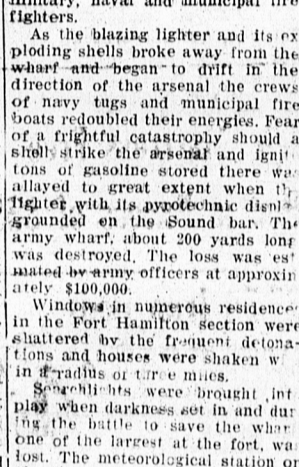

The naval tug scarcely had withdrawn when a heavy explosion occurred which tore the lighter apart. Two of those slightly injured were a man and a woman who had a miraculous escape from the wharf. They were muffled past the wharf opposite the lighter when the first explosion occurred. Fragments of shell peppered their automobile, but the occupants suffered only slight wounds and after receiving medical aid at the Bay Ridge naval hospital were able to go home.

The glare from the exploding ammunition and the flames from the burning wharf illuminated the low, arched harbor and attracted thousands to the Brooklyn and Staten Island waterfront. As explosion followed explosion and the danger to craft passing the narrow channel between Fort Hamilton and Fort Wadsworth grew menacing "blinker light" signals were flashed from the fortifications warning mariners to give the threatened area a wide berth.

Soldiers from Fort Hamilton were dispatched by their commanding officer into the residential section and aid those who were fleeing their homes and to ally paths. Police reserves summoned from adjacent precincts who endeavored to clear the danger zone were hampered in their work by great throngs of motorists and pedestrians who flocked to the scene unaware of the danger to which they were exposing themselves. Many even disregarded the frantic efforts
