FOR SALE

Shropshire Registered Ram, also ram lambs. A Registered ram does parties no more than a scrub ram now, who never used a Registered Ram before owing to the liberal grant of the Live Stock Branch. Many of these rams are prize winners at our Exhibitions. The value of a pure bred sire has been demonstrated many times by experiments conducted at various Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations. To quote one: in 1915 the Missouri Agricultural Experimental Station conducted a test to show the value of a good ram. Seventeen ewes were bred to an inferior scrub ram and seventeen to a fairly good registered ram. The lambs sired by the pure bred ram made 26.6 per cent. more daily gain than those sired by the scrub. The lambs from the pure bred ram sold for $7.35 per 100 pounds and the scrubs for $4.50 per 100 pounds. For further particulars apply at the Corraville Registered Sheep Ranch, Limited.

A HUSBAND TO MARCIA

By CAROLYN BEECHER

Chapter LXI.

"You are sure I can't have that rug, John? It is only two days until the club meets here."

"Quite sure, Marcia."

To his surprise she said no more. Had he not been reading his paper the set lips, the lowered eyelids might have warned him, but only too glad to finish the matter so quickly he went on reading.

The new curtains had arrived, and before he retired he hung them for Marcia:

"They wanted to send a man, but I knew you would be willing to do it and save that money. I am always thinking of how to save," she chatted as he balanced himself on the ricketty stepladder. "Aren't they lovely! They make the rest of the room look absolutely shabby," she sighed. "That's the thing, it calls for a lot more, when if you refurnish all at once everything corresponds. Oh, well, maybe some day I can have a house of my own and furnish it as I should like to." This time it was John who sighed.

"I'm afraid we will be too old to care for a house before I can buy one," he said as he came down from the ladder. "Are they all right?" meaning the curtains.

"They are perfectly lovely! And you have hung them as well as any decorator could. I always tell everyone that you are just wonderful, that there is nothing you can't do. I love to tell them how nice you are. Most women talk about themselves all the time, but I am always telling my friends how lucky I am in having such an indulgent, clever husband. Nell French declares I do it to make them jealous."

"Perhaps you do," quizzically.

"Now you are teasing, but I'll forgive you."

John left Marcia admiring the curtains. When she was ready to retire he had gone to sleep. His vest had fallen to the floor. She picked it up and his check book dropped out of his pocket. With it in her hand she quietly returned to the living room and switched on the light. She would see how much he had, what his balance was. If there was enough to get the rug she would make him get it for her instead of doing as she had intended.

Her brows met in a frown as she saw the small balance left after the caterers check had been drawn. Idly she turned the leaves. Suddenly she frowned again. Who was Muriel Doran and what was John sending her money for? She commenced all over, examining each stub carefully. Another to Muriel Doran, she never had heard the name. Strange that John never had mentioned having business with such a person. Not a thought of anything but business entered her mind in that connection. But why hadn't he told her about it? Some of his extra work, perhaps. But a woman—it was queer.

She laid the check book on the table. She would give it to him in the morning, tell him she had looked at it, and ask about Muriel Doran. She had no delicacy about acknowledging she had looked the book through. Was she not his wife? Did she not have a right to know all about his money matters?

But she slept uneasily. She dreamed of a woman named Muriel to whom her husband was sending money while denying her a rug.

"I found your vest on the floor last night," she said at breakfast, "and when I picked it up your check book fell out. I'll get it. I left it on the table in the living room. Ah, here it is! Of course I looked through it, John. I knew you wouldn't object, and I see you have sent money to a Muriel Doran. Who is she?"

Under his breath John damned himself for his carelessness in putting Muriel's name on the stub. But he replied as nonchalantly as possible:

"She is a woman who has done things for me."

"What things? Strange you never mentioned her. And you paid her money. So you couldn't have been doing work for her, as I first thought when I looked at the stubs."

"It is a private affair, Marcia."

"You mean you are not going to tell me?"

"I should prefer not to."

"But you must! Why, I never deceived you." she blushed as she remembered the number of times she had deceived him about her losses at cards. "I mean about anything that counts about any man." Then: "You must tell me, John. I'll never rest until you do."

GOLF

Quite a large number of the members turned out Saturday for the annual presentation of prizes at the Golf Links and the wind up of what the President termed one of the most successful seasons.

In spite of the penetrating wind the Links were largely used during the afternoon, and the Ladies played a single match for a prize donated by Mr. J. A. S. Bayer.

Before presenting the prizes the President, Dr. Goodwill expressed a wish to see the younger members taking golf more seriously, with a greater determination to improve and in the matches, play to improve their game and not to please a partner. The doctor then presented the prizes as follows.

May 28: Pres.' team defeats Vice Pres.' team. Lieut. Mack of H M C. S. Valerian winning with the best score on the President's team and Mr. A. W. Weeks, best score on loosing team.

In the Ladies' match, Miss Edith Rogers turned in the lowest score.

June 4: Mixes foursome, handicap, 15 holes. Mr. H W. Weeks and Miss M. Hegan.

Approaching Ladies; 1 Miss E. Nicholson; 2 Mrs. Dr. Goodwill.

Oct. 8: Mixed foursome; 1, D. B. Stewart and Mrs. B. McKinnon.

Oct. 15: Mixed foursome 15 holes, handicap; 1 P. Pope and Miss H. Grant.

Oct. 29: Ladies Singles won by Mrs. Dr. Goodwill.

Golf ball donated by Secretary to man making greatest reduction in his handicap during the season won by Prof. F. T. Watkis (at the time the prizes were presented the Professor was continuing on toward scratch).

The Club is indebted to the President Mr. C. L. Miles; the Vice Presidents, Messrs D. B. Stewart, J. A. Bayer and the Secretary for precial prizes. The President mentioned that any member is at liberty to offer prizes competition during the season.

Three rousing cheers and a tiger proposed by Mr. Percy Pope were given as an expression of the appreciation of the Club of the guidance and many services rendered by the President during the season. Three cheers and a tigress for the Ladies' House Committee, proposed by Mr. A. W. Weeks and seconded by every body were duly delivered. "God Save the King" brought to a close a very pleasant afternoon.

While this is, in a sense, the official close of the golfing seahon, many days of splendid golf are still in store for the ardent player, and with some moderation in the weather, it is hoped to have an all day programme on Thanksgiving. The Green's Committees, Men and Ladies, may have a later announcement to make.

"I was just a year ago that on the advice of a friend, I began taking Tanlac and in two months from the first dose I was as well and strong as I had ever been in my life. I have been in the very best of health ever since and I think Tanlac is the most wonderful medicine in the world".
