BELGIAN CAPITAL A FINE OLD CITY

Brussels Has Many Beautiful Buildings and Has Experienced Many Sieges

Brussels, the capital of Belgium, which was occupied by the Germans, is rich in history and noted the world over for its industry and beauty. The city, which has a population of about 750,000, is 50 miles from the sea, situated on the banks of the River Senne. Lying partly on a hill and partly on a plain, it presents a remarkable contrast. The upper town, inhabited by the French and better classes, is healthful and delightful, while the lower town, inhabited by the Flemings and trades people, and is the older section, is damp. The streets of the upper town are handsome and there are many shops and cafes similar to those in Paris. In the old town the streets are narrow and sombre, but with many fine old buildings of Gothic architecture. Some of the streets are so steep that steps are necessary for pedestrians.

Probably the most interesting of the many fine Brussels buildings is the Palais de Justice. The Hotel de Ville, Brood Huls (bread house) and guild houses are unique ornaments of the picturesque old market place. Continental travellers do not soon forget St. Gudul's Cathedral, with its numerous statues, famous stained glass windows and beautifully carved pulpits. The cathedral was built in the 12th century in the Gothic style, while later two towers at either end were built. These rise to a height of 264 feet.

The 17-acre park of the upper town has at its north end the Ministries of State and the Belgian Houses of Parliament, while at the southern end, and fronting the park is the Royal Palace and palace presented to William III in 1829 by the nation, and now used by the academies of science, fine arts, and medicine. East of the park is the aristocratic French quarter of Leopold, and still farther east are the Royal museum of the industrial and decorative arts, museum of education, museum of natural history, and the Wiertz museum.

The Belgian capital is a handsome city, with a bevy of large industrial suburbs, separated by a grid of wide boulevards. Formerly the city was walled, but these were torn down some time ago. Lace is the principal article of manufacture, and high prices are obtainable for the lace woven in the dark rooms of Brussels. Other important articles of manufacture are furniture, bronzes, woollens, fine cottons and vehicles of all kinds. Carpets are also made there, but most of the "Brussels carpets" are made at Tournai. The growth of the city and its trade may be gathered from the fact that in 1824 the population was but 84,000; in 1876 it was 183,000; in 1883, 289,000; in 1900, 547,000, while now it is about 750,000.

Brussels is said to date from the 6th century, when a priest put up a small church there. His pioussness, together with the favorable location selected, soon attracted other settlers who were taught by him. In the 11th century Brussels was chosen by the Duke of Lower Burgandy as his capital, and the city was walled. In 1477 it became the capital of the Austrian Netherlands.

In 1706, during the Spanish War, the old town was bombarded by Marshal Villeroi, of France, and 4,000 buildings destroyed. In 1746 the French besieged the city under Marshal Saxe, and, after three weeks it was obliged to surrender. In 1792 it fell into the hands of General Duinowicz, but he was forced to retire after being defeated at Louvain, but he again occupied the city in 1794. From then on until 1814 it was in the possession of the French.

On the fall of Napoleon, Belgium and Holland united into one kingdom and Brussels was the seat of the government, alternately with The Hague. Finally in 1830, after a four days' conflict, the Belgians declared their independence and offered the crown to Leopold of Saxe-Cobourg, who reigned from 1831 to 1865, and did much for the upbuilding of Belgium.

Kitchener Fought Prussians
Few people are aware that the first man to fall in the Franco-German war of '70 was an English officer of aristocratic birth who was serving with the German Uhlans against France. Large numbers of English officers fought on both sides. Lord Kitchener fought for France in that war as a volunteer.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

COMMON SENSE ADVICE BY A DISTINGUISHED SPECIALIST
"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and should always be kept handy.

FIELD GUNS AND GUNNERS

The field gun has improved wonderfully since the last war in which Germany was vitally interested, 1870-71, and while Germany has been a close student and has experimented liberally, except in some small wars its field pieces have not been thoroughly tested. In field artillery Germany, France and Britain have been working closely on the same lines. It is aimed to produce a gun that is powerful, accurate and yet light enough to be handled quickly and moved smartly from one point to another.

The Germans have the lightest gun and the British the heaviest. The load consists of the gun with its carriage and shield, the limber with ammunition and entrenching tools and the gunners. The total weight of the British gun is 4,480 pounds, of the Russian gun 4,312 pounds, Austrian 4,200 pounds, French 4,184 pounds, Belgian, 3,864 pounds and German 3,852 pounds. It is necessary with these quick firing guns to have an ammunition wagon accompanying them, and often instead of carrying all the gunners on the gun carriage some are on this wagon and thus the weights are better distributed.

Five men and a sergeant is the usual number of men necessary to handle one of these field guns, although with some armies six men are used. In the British artillery the sergeant rides on his horse, two gunners are carried on the gun limber, two on the wagon body. Three wagons usually accompany each gun, on two of which are spare gunners—who keep some distance behind the gun under cover.

WARNING TO NON-COMBATANTS

Do not think that only in war are serious injuries sustained. That chronic sore you suffer from, that skin disease which is destroying your comfort, that eruption which is disfiguring your children—each may lead to serious consequences. Do not delay. Apply Zam-Buk, the greatest healer known to modern science—purely herbal, and at the same time healing, soothing and anti-septic. All druggists and stores. Price will not be raised during the war.

Five pairs of 1914 Silver Black Foxes, selected from the highest grade of class A Stock. Particular care was taken by the promoters in securing foxes having prolific parents, some of which were among the season's earliest litters. This Company guarantees that in the event of more foxes being added they will be from Island foxes of class A. The number already secured are of the Rayner, Tuplin and Oulton strain.

Ranching

The Directors have entered into a contract with the Maritime Silver Black Fox Co., of Central Bedeque to ranch their foxes for a term of five years at the low cost of seven and one half per cent of the yearly increase. This includes all incidental expenses.

The care-taker of the Maritime Co Mr. John A. Dawson has this year shown that he is most capable rancher and cannot be excelled in caring for foxes. Investors will feel satisfied that it is under his care and management, the foxes of the United Silver Black Fox Co., are to be ranched. If no increase it costs the Company nothing for keep.

Probable Profits
