IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our Mother
MRS. JOHN R. CAMERON
who departed this life Oct. 31, 1935

The dearest mother and sweetest friend,
One of the best whom God could lend,
She was loving, gentle, thoughtful and true
Always willing a kind act to do.
It is not tears at the moment shed,
That tells how beloved is the soul that has fled
But tears through many a long night wept
And loving remembrance fondly kept.

Ever Remembered by the Family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear Mother,
MRS. JOHN R. CAMERON
who departed this life Oct. 31, 1935.

Today brings sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest
And those that think of her today
Are the ones that loved her the best

The blow was hard, the shock severe
To part with one we loved so dear
Though her smile has gone forever
And her voice we cannot hear
We shall never lose sweet memories,
Of the one we loved so dear.

Oft and oft our thoughts do wander
To a grave not far away
Where they laid our darling Mother
Eight years ago today.

Lovingly Remembered by Her Sons and Daughters.

In Memoriam

EDWARD W. MacFADYEN.

After several months illness, there passed to his rest, at his home in Augustine Cove, on Aug. 18th, 1943, Edward Wadman MacFadyen, son of the late Neil F. MacFadyen and his wife, the late Annie Gillis, in his sixty second year.

The late Mr. MacFadyen, a true Christian, much loved and highly respected, was a man daily living to the end of his being "To glorify God and to enjoy Him forever." His faith was strong and abiding and was truly founded in the Rock of Ages, which Rock, he knew, was cleft for him, to hide him and to shelter him, at all times, in salvation, in life, and in death. Like the psalmist, he could say, "Oh! how love I, thy law It is my meditation all the day;" Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." The example set by him, at home, in business, and in the Church he loved and faithfully served as an elder, is one honouring to his God. and held dear by those who knew him.

Besides a sorrowing widow, Priscilla Carruthers, formerly of Borden, he leaves to mourn five children, Wendall, Eileen, Gerald, Lorna and Alethea, also two sisters, Mrs. Frank Dixon of Tryon and Mrs. T.W. Bradshaw of Middleton, and one brother, Don of Augustine Cove.

The funeral which was largely attended, was held from his late home to Cape Traverse Church of Scotland cemetery. The services at the house and grave were conducted by Rev. J.H. Bishop, assisted by Rev. Wright of Tryon.

The pallbearers were: Neil, Wallace and Don Bradshaw, Lorne Carruthers, Cedric and Norman Campbell. 10-3011

Lesson V. October 31st.
WHAT THE "ADS" DO NOT SHOW

By Thomas B. McDormand

What do the liquor advertisements leave unsaid? Liquor and beer advertisers pretend to appeal to the best of people and the best in people. They talk of friendship, flowers, hospitality, health, relaxation, home and patriotism. They show well-dressed, happy-looking, prosperous people, fine homes, lovely ladies, luxurious automobiles and yachts. Why do they do this? The answer is plain. They want the public who read their advertisements to form the impression that liquor drinking is the accepted thing for people who are intelligent, successful, and popular. We have already seen that such advertisements are really dishonest propaganda, and a clever camouflaging of an evil thing. Here are some of the things the drink sellers do not show in their advertisements:

1. They do not show pictures of traffic accidents caused by drinking drivers. Think of this picture, for example. Two fine teen-age girls in a Western city lie in pools of blood on the sidewalk, both fatally injured—one of them an only child in her home. Just a few seconds earlier they stood on the curb waiting for a bus, one of them seeing her friend off after having had her as a guest for the evening. A car speeds down the boulevard driven by a young man who had drunk "only a little beer." He didn't see the curve in the street and his car mounted the curb and struck down to death two happy girls. The beer "ads" do not show such scenes as that! Yet liquor and beer drinking is estimated by some authorities to be responsible for over half the traffic accidents in

2. They do not show the interiors of the homes of certain working men who spend much of their hard-earned wages for booze, hoping that in some miraculous way their wives and children will escape starvation. Some of these homes are practically unfurnished, food scarce and poor, children scantily clad for the Canadian climate, wives pale from undernourishment and worry, fathers coming home ugly and sometimes violent. Liquor "ads" do not show homes like these —but social service workers and Salvation Army officers see them and can tell you of heartrending conditions caused by the use of liquor by fathers—and, sad to say, mothers.

3. The liquor "ads" show you the interiors of luxurious homes, with well-fed and pleasant-looking people sitting about. But they do not show you the interiors of the modernized saloon, or the faces of many of the customers—evil looking women, vulgar men, weak-faced youth, bleary-eyed and flabby-faced men. They don't advertise these scenes! They hide them from the public behind heavily screened or painted windows. It would not help their trade if the public saw some of the human products of the traffic!

4 The liquor "ads" display a lot of "red, white and blue", and advise people to buy war savings certificates (if they have any money left after paying for the liquor which the "ads" try to talk people into buying!). But the liquor makers do not tell the public the things they talk about among themselves. Listen to this— Sir Andrew Sanders, Director of the Brewers' Society of Britain, said to a group of fellow brewers, "We want new customers. We want to get the beer drinking habit instilled into thousands, almost millions, of young men who do not at present know the taste of beer". And the Brewers' Journal states, "Thousands of alcohol users die every year. With the rising generation and whether or not they take to alcohol rests the future of the trade."

Little wonder that this statement was issued four years ago to be read in 1,400 parish churches in the Province of Quebec:

"The magnates of beer and alcoholic liquors have endeavoured to multiply the number of their customers by all the media of publicity.

"This publicity is contrary to truth, contrary to morality, contrary to a sane political economy. In vain will it be affirmed that spirits and beer are nourishing, medicinal, appetizing or digestive elements, a source of joy for the individual, and prosperity for the State; true science and common sense in perfect accord with truth will always prove that all beverages containing alcohol are a danger to the physical, intellectual and moral life of the individual, to peace in the family and to the prosperity of a nation."

The Roman Catholic Church thus openly exposed the hypocrisy of liquor advertising.

What the liquor "ads" do not say about the liquor traffic in its effects upon human life and society is quite clear to all thinking people. Its evils are known by mothers and fathers. They are known by social reformers and by the police, and known by judges and jail wardens. They are known by employers and by insurance men. The liquor "ads" try with great cleverness to camouflage the facts. But murder will out, and already prominent Canadian and American statesmen are warning the liquor interests that too great a sale of alcoholic beverages will lead to such public anger as will endanger the liquor business.

Our studies have made us realize that liquor "ads" require close watching. When you read a liquor or beer "ad' ask yourselves these questions: "What does this 'ad' say? Why does it say it? Who pays for it? What does it want me to do?"

In closing this series of studies we give you this short true-false test. As each statement is read write the word "true" or "false" after the question number is plainly written.

(Note: Value of each question— For Intermediates, 1 mark; for Seniors, 2 marks.)

1. It is patriotic as a nation to spend more than double the money for liquor than is spent for education.
2. The liquor manufacturers are more interested in the characters of Canadian boys and girls than they are in profits.
3. Experience shows that the serving of liquor in homes is dangerous.
4. The use of liquor as a beverage is necessary for soldiers in time of war.
5. The use of beer and liquor makes a man less efficient in the doing of war work.
6. Alcoholic beverages have but little value as foods.
7. Liquor is involved in many traffic accidents.
8. Athletic coaches do not condemn the use of alcoholic drinks.
9. Most mothers would want others to treat their boys and girls to liquor.
10. Liquor advertisers deliberately cover up the truth about the evils of the drink habit.

Scene Five: October 31st.
(Junior)
TELEVISION PLAY
By Marion Brillinger

(N.B. Full directions given in Scene 1.)

Announcer: It is Saturday afternoon. Mr. Proctor has invited the boys in his group to his home to check their findings about alcohol, and plan a way of sharing their discoveries. It is this that they are discussing as our scene opens.

Bob: I think it would be fun to make a moviegraph about our discoveries.

Dan. How do you make a moviegraph?

Fred: Oh, I know. We made one at Vacation School. We'll need a large box with an opening at the front where the reel can show.

Bob: And we'll have to have a roll of paper for the reel.

Fred: We paste pictures on the reel and fasten it on rollers in the box so that it can be turned.

Conrad: Where can we get the pictures?

Fred: Oh, we'll have to make them or else cut them out of magazines and papers.

Mr. Proctor: Would you like to make a moviegraph?

All: Yes, let's!

Mr. Proctor: Suppose we plan our reel first. What pictures and information should we have, to record our discoveries?

Bob: I think I could draw a picture of the aircraft factory. We might write under it: "Alcohol makes workers less expert and careful."

Conrad: I saw a picture in a magazine at home of a workman using an electric drill. I could bring that.

Mr. Proctor: If you have your notebook handy, Conrad, you might write down the ideas suggested.

Dan: It will be easy to show what we learned from Mr. Warren, the hockey coach. I have some pictures of hockey stars.

Fred: We could print above them: A hockey star needs speed, strength, and — What was the other?

Conrad: Accuracy! A good aim, and a straight shot.

Fred: Then we could write underneath: Alcohol spoils these.

Mr. Proctor: How shall we report your visit to the hospital?

Bob: We should find a picture of a microscope.

Fred: And we could draw some red corpuscles—you remember, they looked like red buttons—and white corpuscles that hurry like ambulances to check disease germs.

Bob: We'd have to make a sign saying: Alcohol steals oxygen from the red corpuscles and slows up the white corpuscles.

Conrad: Do you remember what Dr. Barnes said about alcohol causing accidents? I'll draw a picture of that.

Dan: I think it will be most fun making pictures about the Arctic explorers. Could we use those clippings you had, Mr. Proctor, to copy Henry Larsen's boat—

Mr. Proctor: Why certainly. I'll look them up for you.

Conrad: I can draw Admiral Byrd's plane—the one he flew when he went over the North Pole.

Bob: Could we print the list of foods that he took with him, and show that he didn't take alcohol?

Mr. Proctor: Perhaps we should give the reason—

Fred: Because alcohol lets the warm blood rush to the skin and waste its heat—like opening up the doors in winter.

Mr. Proctor: Your suggestions should make an interesting movie, but from what you have planned those who see it will think that alcohol has no good uses, but only harmful ones.

Bob: I know what we could. We could make a sign saying: Helpful uses of Alcohol and draw pictures to show some of them.

Mr. Proctor: Can you think of any?

Dan: Liniment and iodine.

Conrad: Dr. Barnes said it was used to preserve specimens — you know those things in bottles that have to be kept for study.

Fred: He told us it was used for bathing sick people, and toughening their skin when they have to lie in bed for a long time.

Bob: I know another use: paint and aeroplane dope.

Mr. Proctor: Would you like to go on a treasure hunt and find some other things around the house in the manufacture of which alcohol has had a part? Here is a list of them. Now when I say "Go" you may begin your hunt. Bring them here, and we can make a collection on the table.

Ready.....Go!

Bob: I found a hat. Does alcohol help make hats?

Mr. Proctor: Yes, it does—both felt and straw ones.

Dan: Here is a hairbrush.

Mr. Proctor: Alcohol help to make that too.

Conrad: Silverware is on the list, so here is a spoon.

Fred: And here is a bottle of lotion.

Bob: What shall we do about this one—furniture?

Mr. Proctor: Let's include the table that you are placing the things on.

Fred: Have you any shoe polish?

Mr. Proctor: Look out on the back porch.

Conrad: We need an electric light bulb. Does Alcohol help make them too?"

Mr. Proctor: It does. If you are careful you may unscrew the bulb out of the lamp on top of the radio.

Dan: Here is some soap. I found it in the kitchen.

Bob: May I bring the artificial flowers from the dining-room table?

Mr. Proctor: Yes, and you may ask Mrs. Proctor to help you with the last three—rayon silk, perfume, and jewelry. She will have some upstairs.

Fred: May I go?

Mr. Proctor: Yes, Fred. Now let us sit down again, and think how we should complete our movie.

Dan: We could each draw the things we found on the list. I didn't think alcohol had so many good uses!

Mr. Proctor: There are more than three hundred commercial uses, so we might gather many more still! It certainly is useful— in its place.

Conrad: Perhaps we should make a sign saying: Alcohol is helpful outside the body but it is harmful inside.

Mr. Proctor: If you had to vote on the part of the body which is harmed most by alcohol, what would you say?

Bob: The heart?

Dan: The nerves?

Conrad: The muscles?

Mr. Proctor: It does harm to all of these, but you have not guessed the most important.

Conrad: The brain.

Mr. Proctor: Right! The reason is that the brain is the most delicate and sensitive part of the whole body, and the most easily affected by alcohol. Like the steering wheel of a car, it governs all our actions. We think with our brain. We decide right from wrong. We listen to God guiding us.

Bob: Animals can't do that—can they? They can't think, or decide right from wrong, or listen to God.

Mr. Proctor: Have you ever seen a car whose steering wheel is out of order?

Dan: It gets out of control.

Mr. Proctor: When a person's brain is dulled by alcohol his body is out of control. Then what happens?

Conrad: He does things that are wrong—

Bob: And says stupid, silly things—

Dan: And spoils other people's happiness.

Mr. Proctor: God has given us very wonderful bodies and minds. What does he expect us to do with them?

Dan: Keep them in good order—

Bob: Use them the way we should—

Conrad: And help people.

Mr. Proctor: It is through men and women and boys and girls who will do these things that God can make a better and a happier world.

QUESTIONS

1. Name ten things in which alcohol has had a part in the making. (Value 10 marks).
2. Why is it so important for the brain to be protected from alcohol? (Value 10 marks).

HALLOWE'EN

The spirit of Hallowe'en invaded the galleys of the Royal Canadian Navy and the cooks and stewards had themselves a field day with a mess of pumpkins. Here's the result —a coy little Wren with cucumber legs and a parsley skirt who has absolutely knocked that big sailor for a loop. Enjoying the vegetable creations are Wren Marie King, officer's steward, of Toronto, and Chief Petty Officer J. J. Moran, R. C. N. R., of Montreal. The Navy is looking for Wrens stewards and cooks right now.
