WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.—The Columbian Society of St. Dunstan's University held their Annual banquet, Feb. 22nd, at the Cafe Paul. There were thirteen members present this year and the affair was unusually successful. Rev. F. Mullaly, the Reverend Moderator of the Society, assured the members that he was much pleased to see the spirit of love of country being kept up by the commemoration of Washington's birthday. He spoke of his past knowledge of the society in his day at St. Dunstan's, and said that he had always found the students from the United States worthy young men. The Society was also addressed by its worthy advisor, Mr. J. J. R. H. Fleming, B. A., who brought out the fact that the man leaving college could by no means be a neutral factor in the matter of government, but that he ought to take an active part, that he ought, so to speak, to become a power in the political machinery of his country. The members wish both the Reverend Moderator and his advisor to feel that they are deeply grateful for the way in which they entered into the spirit of the occasion.

Happenings of the Week

Advance models for the coming spring show two distinct styles. The fashionably dressed woman will have to make her choice between simplicity to a point of rural demureness or extreme ornateness in fabric and in trimmings. The demure style is mostly for afternoon and morning wear. Frocks are straight cut with rounded necks, the materials dull-surfaced and in pastel shades of green, blue and mauve. Suits are in dull brown and greens, cut on simple lines, and worn with close-fitting hats, like the bell-shape of last season, but wider in the brim and crown. The ornate style hints that its creators have gone to the cavaliers of the 18th century for inspiration. Wraps are wide sleeved, with little ruffled cuffs of lace peeping underneath, and row upon row of wide tucks or ruchings.

Mrs. William Beckett of Calgary Alberta arrived in the city on a visit to friends here.

Hats imitate the tri-colored headwear that courtiers used to don. Some models have high plumes in the centre; others an embroidered ribbon or a waterfall of lace hanging over the left side. Cinnamon and rich golden colours predominate. Skirts are to be much shorter.

The Seventh Annual Meeting of the Queen Mary Needlework Guild was held at the home of the President Friday the 22nd. The year 1923 has been most successful. It is the intention of the Guild to continue working for the Protestant Orphanage. A letter from Her Majesty The Queen was read, in which she acknowledged with grateful thanks, the infants clothing sent for the Queen Mary's Maternity Hospital. The election of Officers for the coming year resulted as follows:—Honorary President—Mrs. J. L. Jenkins (re-elected); President—Mrs. A. A. Bartlett (re-elected); Vice-President—Mrs. J. P. Gordon (re-elected); Secretary—Mrs. J. O. Hyndman (re-elected); Treasurer—Mrs. F. E. Smallwood (re-elected); Mrs. James Patton and Mrs. H. R. Hillson were re-elected on the Executive with the addition of Mrs. Robert Harris. Arrangements were made for the first sewing to be held at the home of the President on Wednesday afternoon, the 12th of March.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—Rev. Ewen MacDougall is confined to his home with a cold and will be unable to fill the appointment for next Sabbath, Feb. 24th.

DUNDAS SERVICES.—Service will be held in the school house at Forest Hill, Sunday, Feb. 24th at 11 a.m.; at Dundas at 2.30 p.m. and at Annandale at 7 p.m.

OF INTEREST TO POTATO GROWERS.—Messrs. Peppin and Boulter will address a meeting in the interest of potato growers at St. Peter's, Monday evening, Feb. 25th.—21.

AFTON HALL.—The address on "Community Welfare" by Hon. C. G. Duffy on Monday night will be highly entertaining as well as beneficial for those who have the good fortune to hear it. The other numbers on the bill are equally as good.—11.

CHILDREN'S SERVICE AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH.—Sunday morning Rev. R. C. Eaton will speak particularly to the boys and girls of the Sunday School. All members of the school, with their teachers, are asked to attend in their usual classes. The sermon will be "God's call to the Children."

SUCCESSFUL OPERATION.—It is pleasing to learn that Mrs. James P. McGee, Montague is somewhat improved after undergoing an operation in the City Hospital. The operation was successfully performed by Drs. McMillan and Jenkins. Her many friends in the city wish her a speedy recovery.

CALLED HOME.—Mrs. Frederick Larter, Hampshire, who was spending a well earned holiday with her brother, Mr. John Hyde, Kinkora, was called home on account of the sudden sickness of her husband, Mr. Frederick Larter. His friends are anxiously waiting for his speedy recovery as Fred is a general favourite with all.

NORTH WILTSHIRE TELEPHONE.—Complaints have been made for some time past over alleged interference by private holders with the service. As a result of these complaints a charge has been laid and an investigation is to be held on Tuesday next by the president and directors. Owing to the complaints being general the shareholders are demanding that the investigation be held publicly in the hall at North Wiltshire in order that all grievances be ventilated and a better service secured.

FELL ON ICE.—Mr. William Bowman, a highly respectable gentleman of North Wiltshire while attending to his farm chores a few days ago fell on the ice fracturing a number of ribs and receiving other painful injuries. By last reports was doing as well as could be expected under the skillful hand of Mrs. Matheson of Brookfield. The sad feature of the case was that his son and daughter-in-law were on the sick list, all three at the same time.

WEDDING BELLS.—A quiet wedding took place at the Methodist Parsonage Wednesday, Feb. 13th, when Miriam J., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Curtis, became the bride of Harold J. Proudson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Proudson, New Wiltshire, the Rev. Christopher Graham officiating. The bride looked very winsome in a dress of navy blue silk crepe-de-chene trimmed with paisley silk. Immediately after the ceremony they drove to the bride's home where with a number of invited guests they sat down to a delicious supper. The remainder of the evening was spent in music and games also receiving the congratulations who arrived in all kinds of sizes, shapes and colors, making the night merry with their bells, horns and tin pans. The happy couple left for their home in the wee small hours with the good wishes of all.

A ROYAL DOLL'S HOUSE

The Queen's Dolls House is to be Shown for the First Time in the Palace of Arts at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley.

(From a Special Correspondent.)

In the Palace of Arts at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley is to be shown for the first time the Queen's Doll's House, the making of which several hundred artists have given their best work. Our special, who has had the privilege of seeing the Doll's House under the personal guidance of Her Highness Princess Marie Louise, describes some of its wonderful contents.

"What's in a name? That which men call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet."

It is well to bear these lines in mind when thinking of the Queen's Doll's House which is presently to be seen in the Palace of Arts at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, and, after being at home to the world and his wife from April to October, will be transferred to a permanent site in Windsor Castle.

Doll's House, yes, but how much else! A miniature palace, called into being in the first instance by the happy thought of Her Highness Princess Marie Louise, and brought from the realm of abstract to concrete things by the guiding genius of Sir Edwin Lutyens, who, whether he is planning Imperial Delhi or Doll's House, brings to his work the fire and flame of an inspiration that comes only to great minds.

Here in no hastily contrived building, but one so exquisitely devised that if some magic touch could magnify it to the proportions demanded by those whose lines are cast in spacious places, it would become at once the ideal Royal Palace, by the side of which the finest examples in the world must bow diminished heads.

The Queen's love of the miniature is well-known to her family and to the Court, and when the pleasant desire to give her the perfect Doll's House first took shape, none could have foreseen the measure of development that was going to create the finished work of art. But the idea pleased the greatest of our sculptors, painters, craftsmen, writers. They desired to identify themselves with the presentation, and, under the careful direction of Princess Marie Louise and Sir Edwin Lutyens, their gifts have taken due place as well as form, so that today the Doll's House is such a treasure house of art and literature as may merit the much coveted and misused term unique. Indeed, the adjective can stand up as proudly as the Doll's House itself and defy the challenge of the purist.

You must imagine before the first transformation a very beautiful four square building of arresting design and with wonderful windows that seem to collect the light. On the roof are bronze figures by Frankton. On one side of the house there is a formal garden laid out by Miss Gertrude Jekyll, with lawns and flower beds that show strict regard for the building they complete and adorn, on the other side there is a garage with a fine array of model motor cars. Then you must imagine the whole front rising like the deep cover of a box, in true doll's house fashion, and you will find at the heart of the miniature palace revealed.

If the exterior charmed the interior amazes. Let common honesty prompt the confession that the most skilled observer could not enumerate one tenth part of the attractions that confront him here.

Concentration is demanded for all the special features for the wonderful entrance hall with its marble pavement and sweeping staircase; for drawing-room, dining-room, library, bed-room and nurseries with their marvellous painted ceilings, their mural work, their statues, bronzes, pictures and tapestries for the bathrooms, kitchen, bedroom, cellars, store-rooms, electric lifts and lighting plant, in short, for all the equipment of a mansion made perfect. It is only when the general scheme has been grasped that the visitor can begin to study the details, and then he finds there is no item either in the decoration, furniture or equipment that is not the contribution of some distinguished artist or craftsman.

The ceilings, the walls and the pictures on them have been painted by the greatest of our artists. The names of Lavery, Orpen, D. Y. Cameron, A. S. Cope, Minnings, Dulac are the first that leap to the pen and another artist of distinction, to be seen by most of us for the first time here, is the Lady Patricia Ramsay. Some contribute original work, others have copied known pictures. Mr. Munnings reproduces his spirited equestrian portrait of the Prince of Wales, and Sir A. S. Cope copies the famous Winterhalter portrait of the Royal Family, painted when Prince Albert and Queen Victoria were young.

The prevailing harmony is wonderful, every room has its colour scheme, to which all decoration conforms, and the proportions of pictures, statuary and furniture have been preserved throughout. There is an admirable sense of variety in unity. The nurseries, for example, with their gay mural paintings by Dulac are in happiest and most effective contrast with, say, the ceiling of the dining-room painted by Professor Moira. Every style of art finds its representation; the bath-rooms are decorated on the walls with miniature "Punch" cartoons, each signed by the artist.

It is not easy, indeed it is impossible, to sum up within the limits of a short article the wonders of a piece of creative work that has occupied some of our best brains for several years, but it is possible to create this story of what the visitor may expect on a leisurely visit without some reference to the Library. Apart from the beauty of its furniture, and the alluring hint supplied by a table covered with State dispatch boxes, there is a library to which nearly two hundred of our leading writers have contributed a little book in their own handwriting. Many have given original work. Others, like Mr. Hardy, have written out what they like best of their own creation. A few—Mr. Kipling is one—have illustrated their selection. Here again the word unique insists upon asserting itself. Et pour cause, Barrie, Arnold Bennett, Max Beerbohm, Chesterton, Conrad, Gosse, Robert Bridges, Sir J. A. Frazer and Lord Haldane are among the contributors. But the library does not end with the writers. Artists are represented by a truly wonderful collection of miniature water-colours, pencil drawings and etchings. To this gathering six hundred men and women have sent their gift.

Space fails, and the rest of the work must go undescribed. The Queen's Doll's House is the masterly translation of a great idea made quadering under a title that appears to impose unnecessary limitations upon it. Far greater than a Doll's House, it is, on one hand, the perfection of art in miniature, and on the other, a complete realisation of the ambition to pay a very loyal and loving tribute to Queen Mary.

their interest to show more independence, rather than to appear as tame followers of a shattered Administration. A crash is impending, as they must see. Even if their independent action should precipitate the crash, their credit would stand higher at home than if they continue to follow the humiliating role of pulling Liberal chestnuts out of the fire at Ottawa.

The Progressives have troubles enough of their own without shouldering further responsibility for the blundering and incapacity of the King Government. Like the Liberal party they have suffered from weak leadership and divided counsels. Like them they suffered a crushing defeat in the Ontario elections. They also have suffered discredit from the $15,000,000 deficit last year, which Drury left as a legacy to his successor in the Premiership. The negotiations for fusion last summer brought only confusion into the Progressive camp. These are some of the reasons why further support of the King Government has become more and more distasteful to the Agrarian party. And yet if their support should fail the Government must fall.

Incapacity and stupid blundering have ruled the King Cabinet from the day of its formation. It has had a share of ill fortune, too, at times, but apparently has learned nothing from past mistakes and done nothing to retrieve its mistakes.

Like the Egyptians of old at Red Sea, its chariot wheels heavily as it goes forward to brink of the gulf, in which it soon to be swallowed up. Never before did so helpless and so less a Cabinet meet the Parliament of a free country. The country waits impatiently for the end of the curtain, while these players strut and fret their brief hour upon the stage.
