

Her Little Boy Had Severe Cold Croupy Cough

Mrs. Henry E. Lyman, West River, N. B., writes: "My little boy caught a very severe cold, and had a croupy cough. I tried several medicines, but he got no relief from them. I was advised to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and he had only taken three doses when he got relief, and before he had finished the bottle he was all rid of his cough. It would not be without it in the house as it is a wonderful cough medicine." Price, 35c a bottle; large family size 60c; at all druggists and dealers; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THEY HAD TO SEE PARIS

Mrs. Peters turned on him. And the face of the earth darkened.

"Why do you want to spoil everything? You ought to be ashamed of yourself, and the way you are acting about that dress suit. How do you expect me to entertain at the chateau if you don't have a dress suit? You won't dare to come down to dinner."

"Oh yes, I will," said Pike with sudden heat. "I'll take more than that to keep me from eating."

Words flew back and forth, while Cupid drawing his bow, looked on in astonishment. But the guide, knowing more of human nature, discreetly edged away.

"I'm going to take one of your business suits down to the tailor and have him make a dress suit the same size," declared Mrs. Peters.

"I'll never wear it—I can tell you that right now," Mrs. Peters turned to Opa.

"Come on; we're going home—alone. He can come some other way."

They turned their backs upon Pike as he stood before Cupid enthroned in his Temple of Love, and walked away. In a few minutes they were being whirled toward Paris in the taxi limousine.

"Let her go; danged if I care," he said in his first rage. "I'll get a little peace, anyway."

But after the first resentment wore off he felt differently. He was hurt. When Pike was still a veterinary surgeon, just coming in from the farm, he had met Ida Matthews. She had a better education, she spoke more grammatically, she was far above him and he looked upon her as moving in another world. She still carried the glamour of those first impressions.

His deep, abiding affection for "Idy" remained unchanged, although in the absorbing rush of business he often forgot to tell her so. Sometimes a week would go by without kissing her, then suddenly he would pull her into his lap wrap his long arms about her, and say, "I haven't seen anything yet I'd trade for you."

For years they had slept in the same bed. When Mrs. Peters went to visit a relative, or was away for a night, Pike complained that he could not sleep so well.

"I've got used to you that I can't

Thin-Blooded People Always Feel Cold

To Withstand the Rigors of Winter the Blood Must Be Rich and Pure.

Thin-blooded people easily become discouraged. They lose strength; grip, influenza and ordinary winter colds seize them and they find it exceedingly hard to shake off any of these troubles. They feel chilly all the time; their nervous system becomes a wreck; they cannot sleep and life becomes a burden.

To overcome this deplorable state of health good blood is essential. This good blood gives warmth to the body; strength to the nerves and does much to either prevent colds and grip or to banish their dreaded after-effects. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the perfect blood builder — they never fail to make new, rich, red blood. They are the ideal tonic for winter use. Concerning their use Miss Kate L. Grant, Merlin, Ont., writes:—

"I was very much run down but found health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after other medicines had failed to help me. Two years ago I felt tired all the time; had no appetite; was nervous and cold all the time. Nothing I took seemed to do me any good till I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After a short treatment with them the draggy feeling left me; my appetite improved; my blood became warmer and my strength gradually increased. This encouraged me to continue the use of the Pills and now I am feeling better than I have done for years."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing but they do it well — they build up and renew rich, red health-giving blood thus making weak, run-down men and women strong, active and happy. These Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

sleep without you," he said.

The changing gulf stream of fashion had swept them into single beds, but they had never thought of separate rooms. Deep down Pike was as devoted to her, although not so demonstrative, as the day they were married.

He saw women who brought longings in him and his eyes lingered on their charms. Sometimes, even in the presence of his wife, his eyes dwelt on other women and he felt deep, possessive stirrings, but he trust them aside.

"I swore I was going to be faithful to Idy and I'm going to be," he said.

It had always remained a flag flying from a topmost peak.

Pike wandered about the great grounds, among the bosquets, colonnades, grottoes, along the terraces and along the bassins with their splendid symbolical bronze figures rising so lightly out of the water, but the pleasure was gone. At last he went outside the high iron fence and the drivers of the waiting carriages came clamoring toward him. Selecting a carriage, he drove to the station and buying a ticket, walked up and down the dingy cement platform, waiting for the train growing more and more tiresome.

"I wonder what the boys are doing," he said yearningly. "Wouldn't I like to walk in on 'em."

Getting out at the Gare des Invalides, he took a taxi to the hotel. As he was leaving the taxi something happened. He suddenly found himself face to face with Claudine. His heart gave a leap—she looked even more charming than that night, in Montmartre. How delightfully and typically French she was, and about her was a faint, haunting stimulation of perfume.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, and in her was the unfeigned delight of a child. "Monsieur Peñair, how nice eet oes we find ourselves to meet again." And she looked up at him with a smile that warmed his heart.

"By golly! It is! Where did you blow in from?"

"Ah, I see. Like ze wind, I blow, and she waited a hand in delightful imitations of that great unseen force. "How you ze Americans, say eet, so much wis ze slang."

SPECIAL SERVICE IN KENSINGTON UNITED CHURCH

On Sunday, Dec. 22, the service of the Kensington United church conducted by the pastor Rev. Dr. Saint were worthy of more than passing mention, the evening service being a masterpiece of Christmas and Missionary presentation.

The subject was dealt with in three phases: The Dawn of Light, The Transmission of Light, and the Diffusion of Light.

The first phase pictured by the church being plunged into darkness what a dreary desolate place the world was while "darkness brooded" significant also of the "moral darkness of the world. Even as when the Creator said "Let there be Light" and the light came as a blessing to the earth, so an everlasting light was prophesied for the world. As the second phase of the service was entered on, the star of Bethlehem which heralded that everlasting light, suddenly shone forth, while the choir sang the nativity hymn.

Simultaneously with the words—"I am the Light of the world," a single pure white steadily burning candle appeared on the pulpit.

An interesting little scene was then carried out, when the oldest member of session in attendance, the president of the Y. P. S., and a wea maid from the primary department went forward, each holding a small candle which they lit from the symbolical on the desk, then moving towards the choir, the members of which were holding candles, they started the lighting and each one lighting another, until all were holding aloft their lights, at the same time singing.

Shall we whose souls are lighted, With wisdom front on high, Shall we to men benighted The lamps of life deny.

Thus endeavoring, to show that none are too old or too young but that they can aid in the Transmission of that light, which is the light of the world.

The third phase was then presented and while the congregation waited in a moment of breathless hush, the choir meanwhile singing "When I survey the wondrous Cross," the cross itself, radiant and blazing burst into view, having been cleverly concealed beneath a banner of the Christian church, which hung directly under the star.

It was a wonderfully impressive scene, the softly beaming star and the gloriously brilliant cross, with the choir softly, singing the old carol, creating an hallowed impression which could not help but leave its imprint on both young and old.

Much credit is due, the pastor, and those who assisted him in the setting and arrangement of the lights, also to the choir for the beautiful music rendered, all tending to portray so

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Mrs. Hubert Willis, Dear Sister: Words fail to convey our feeling of sorrow to you in this hour of bereavement, realizing that the angel of death has visited your home and taken therefrom in the person, your beloved husband. We know the parting is hard and now your hearts are mourning. We would direct you to the Heavenly Father who has promised. I will not leave you comfortless I will come to you. We pray that God's grace will sustain and keep you and your family with every needed blessing. Therefore we bow in humble submission saying "Not my will, O Lord, but Thine be done."

But we sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Signed on behalf of the members of the W. M. Society of Kingston, United Church.
