constitutional relations, and, what is even more important, an economic conference from which, possibly, may come a reconstruction of the fiscal fabric of the Empire. Having regard to the magnitude of the enterprise, an early conclusion may not be looked for.

While the Government intends ultimately to enact legislation providing for a tariff board along the lines of that which was intended in the legislation of the Borden Government, the complete revision of the tariff promised for next winter is not likely to be in any way contingent upon such a body. Plenty of information is already on hand and it was not difficult to supplement it in arriving at the decisions to introduce the changes now being passed upon in Parliament. The Government may repeat this process of consultation and anyway, it will take the responsibility for making changes. The Conservative conception of a tariff board is more essentially a fact-finding organization for those charged with the function of framing the tariff.

hot debate. The tariff on gasoline, the increased duties on window glass and finally the advances in the levies on agricultural implements, constituted reasons for the hottest of the skirmishes. The gasoline item and that covering the duties on glass passed the committee. That covering cultivators, harrows, seed drills, etc., the first of the agricultural implements list was still under discussion at adjournment.

Public Hearings of Tariff

A feature of the day was the statement by Premier Bennett that before Parliament meets again public hearings on the tariff will take place. This assurance was given in answer to a question by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, who asserted that no opportunity for the consumer to state his case on the increase had been given. The Prime Minister was not in a position to state just how the hearings would take place, but he assured Mr. King that they would be held.

No Increase In Gasoline

With respect to the item which places a duty of 2 1-2 cents a gallon under the general tariff on the type of gasoline, which is generally used in Canada, Premier Bennett read to the house the understanding he has received from the four gasoline producing companies in Canada, that imposition of the duty will not result in increased prices. Criticism of the guarantee came quickly. Col. L. J. Ralston, former Minister of National Defence, asked if the Prime Minister, acting in a legal capacity, would suggest for a moment that the document constituted a contract. There was nothing in it to compel the companies to reduce prices in the event of the market dropping, he asserted. It constituted "poor security" to the Canadian people. The undertaking had been accepted by the Government in good faith, replied the Prime Minister, and the Government proposed to act in good faith. If there was abuse, the remedy lay in the hands of the Government.

Belgians and Germans Dominate Market

Then came the window glass items which impose duties as high as 4 1/2 cents a pound under the general tariff. Hon. J. C. Elliott, former Minister of Public Works, complained that the new duty would double the price of glass in Canada. It amounted to "taxing daylight."

Conditions are worse in the United States, the report of the Federal Department of Agriculture reveals. The report estimates a reduction of thirty-four million bushels below the August estimate. This leaves the crop 14 per cent below the five-year average, 1924-28. Blight is responsible for the loss and there is a possibility of conditions becoming worse, the report declares.

NO CHANGE

Any changes in the constitution were termed by the Ontario Premier "as one of the most important and serious situations that have arisen in the history of Canada." He added they should "not be rushed into without mature consideration."

Canada As A Shining Example

(Special to The Guardian) GENEVA, Sept. 20.—Canada was held up today before the Assembly of the League of Nations as a shining example to people who are striving to solve the vexing problem of minorities. Sir Robert Borden, former Premier of the Dominion told representatives of Germany, Poland and other nations, whose relations are being constantly disturbed because of the presence of foreign racial groups within their borders, that the problem could be solved and solved justly and happily. Give to the minorities every constitutional and legal right beyond a shadow of doubt, Sir Robert said, and "on the other hand impress upon them the necessity for their co-operation." Canada, Sir Robert said, "with its English and French inhabitants has on this basis happily brought into harmony a people who were divided by race, language and religion."
