Luminoscopy Shadow Test System

Looking into the Eye

The most advanced science of Eyesight Testing known. This system measures and corrects any hidden or latent trouble. It is especially valuable in old chronic hard cases, and those who have not received satisfactory results elsewhere. We also use in our Test room the Ophthalmometer Retinoscope, Phorometer and other delicately adjusted apparatus for determining just in what degree if any, your eyes fall short of perfection. If in need of glasses come in and "SEE" Superior Eye Service.

FOX MEN

I am in a position to impart to you after experimenting for three years how to prevent diarrhoea and dysentery trouble in young fox pups, thus minimizing your losses and reducing the mortality. It is in the art of feeding. I have been using for a period of three years Shredded Wheat and found without a doubt the best food obtainable giving best results and minimizing the cost of feeding. I have a shipment due to arrive any day of about three tons and will be glad to receive applications in lots of 100 lbs. and over. The Shredded Wheat is packed in bags, accurate weight; fully 35 per cent cheaper than any biscuit on the market, easy digestible, no trouble and an absolute saving. Some of the largest ranches are using same on my recommendation and each and every statement made can be corroborated. For your own good drop me a line or call and see me I will tell you more about it.

"THE HOUSE OF SERVICE"

HOW A BLIGHTED LOVE CAUSED HYDROPHOBIA

How a blighted love is said actually to have produced hydrophobia is explained by Dr. John D. Quackenbush, who describes the following remarkable case in the New York Medical Journal:

Hydrophobia, or fear of water, the wæter frytyns (frightness) of our Anglo-Saxon forbears, is universally associated with rabies, an infectious disease depending on a specific virus whose micro-organism has not yet been discovered and which is communicated to man by the bite of mad dogs, cats, wolves and other carnivores. But hydrophobia may be a true phobia, or unfounded fear of water, of purely psychic nature and origin and so taking class with mysophobia, fear of dirt; acrophobia, fear of heights; agoraphobia, fear to cross open spaces. As such it is to be further distinguished from hydrophobia, or morbid dread of hydrophobia as transmitted by rabid brutes. In rabies, painful spasms of the throat muscles are a distinctive symptom. Convulsions follow attempts to swallow water, the very sight of which throws the sufferer into paroxysms.

Exactly these manifestations characterized attempts to drink on the part of a patient referred to me by a specialist of Cleveland—a woman in whose case dogs and their bites played no part. An unfortunate marriage to a man she detested, in deference to her parents' demands, precipitated the first attack in this subject. As she stood before the altar at the ceremony a spasm of the pharyngeal constrictors and muscles of the larynx suddenly occurred, closing the epiglottis with a strangling sensation in hysterical imitation of the genuine tetanic contractions of canine madness. Gradually a difficulty in swallowing developed, having special reference to water. The spasm returned with every attempt to quench her thirst, and finally at the very sight or thought of water.

When she reported to me she was accustomed to occupy four hours every morning fighting with the water in the basin to get her face washed. To force a teaspoonful of water into her stomach was equivalent to a tragedy, during the action of which she clutched at her throat to relieve the tension, and struggled agonizingly to drive air through the constricted larynx into her lungs, for, as she explained it, there "wasn't air enough for her to breathe; her wind was shut off."

In the accomplishment of the distressing task of ingesting a mouthful of water she was constrained to lift and put down the containing wine-glass scores of times before she could control the spasm sufficiently to force down a modicum of the fluid her desolated system craved. An extension of the obsessive idea terminated in the delusional conviction that there was water in whatever she ate or touched, and she accordingly spent hours in wiping articles of food and chinaware to remove suspected moisture therefrom.

The imaginary wretchedness of all such subjects, which to the onlooker appears ludicrous, is positively unpicturable. Bodily pain is not comparable to it. The rational therapy consists in dynamic suggestion coupled with persistent elimination, for a toxin generating intestinal flora has to be reckoned with in the general run of patients. In such physio-psychic treatment, supplemented by forced feeding for the impoverished cells, is to be found the balm for these hurt minds, and is represented one of the supreme applications of medical psychology.

O'er Flanders fields the sunset glow Smiles on the graves of those below Who fought their gallant fight To save for children yet unborn Sweet liberty: and those who mourn Through many a sleepless night Consoled should be with this sweet thought, That Victory, though dearly bought Against foul German might, God gave to us as recompense For calling our dear loved ones hence, And he knows what is right, So let us pray through dreary days, That God, in His mysterious ways, Will grant us second sight To look beyond the clouded sky And see our meeting by and by, With those we mourn tonight. —ILDERIM.

The ground in which roses are planted should be fertile and well drained. All woollens, fur and feathers should be thoroughly cleaned before they are put away.

Mihard's Liniment Co., Limited. Dear Sirs:—This fall I got thrown on a fence and hurt my chest very bad, so I could not work and it hurt me to breathe. I tried all kinds of Liniments and they did me no good. One bottle of MIHARD'S LINIMENT, warmed on flannels and applied on my breast, cured me completely. C. H. COSSABOOM, Rossway, Digby Co., N.S.

THE AMBASSADOR.

By L. Godfrey-Turner.

I am the Voice of a Million Men, and I broge my song for you! I could have stayed and sung and played as others schemed to do. One coward cry from this Voice, and I would be living and laughing too! Men—what of your wives and children then?

I am the heart of a Million Men, and for you I ceased to beat; and I poured my blood to the stinking mud to make your meadows sweet! I could have turned and seen you burned in every British street!

Men and Masters—Masters Men—what of your wives and children then?

I am the Soul of a Million Men—(and a soul has ears and eyes that hark and see, and a memory that lives and never dies!)—I could have sold myself to hold your place beneath the skies!

Men and Masters—Masters Men—what of your wives and children then?

I am the Voice and the Heart and the Soul of the men who fought your fight; and I ask no tears for my night-mare years of an everlasting night—only a sign that the right is mine to pray that you do right!

Men and Masters—Masters Men—I shall have died for England then!

DANISH MARY

(By Percy Mackaye in New York Times.)

'Twas Danish Mary picked them up Out of the air and sea: A shoddy, trudging lollypop A-trapsling slatternly.

The cry rang north, the cry rang south:

"The vanished—where are they?" But Danish Mary shut her mouth And shuffled on her way.

"Ho, Hawker!—Grieve!"—on flying scud Called kingdoms and called kings: But Danish Mary chewed her cud In drowsy maunders.

Now "Lost!" cried West, and "Lost!" cried East,

Till "Perished!" like a pall, Turned bonfire-light and homing feast More dark than funeral.

And toward the hollow sky rose prayer

And dirge of steeple-chime: But what should Danish Mary care? She takes her own sweet time.

And bawls to Lewis Butts: "It's me! I've picked 'em up—your men."

"What!—Grieve, and Hawker?" "Sure?" And she Goes shambling on again.

But lightning engines flash and light For news that reaps renown.

The jacksies swarm from bay and bight

And race to run her down.

And win, and bear her prize away—

While Mary turns to prowl

Once more where slips the dumb salt spar

And slaps her on the jowl.

NUXATED IRON The Power Behind Strong, Red-blooded, Successful Men and Women of Today.

Can Youth and Middle Age Be Happy The older man is attracted by the young girl's freshness and innocence. And the girl is fascinated by the older man's experience, his broader outlook on life, his delightful manners, in brief, his sophistication. Can they be happy together? Will not the young girl's very sweetest cloy after a time? And will not the coldness and undemonstrativeness of the older man kill his young wife's love? Or worse yet, drive her to some younger and more agreeable man for comradeship? Is any love strong enough to reconcile two people so different in character? Sandra Courtney thought so, but even she had hours of black doubt. Read the solution of her problem in "Sandra the Jealous," which starts Friday morning.
