RECIPROcity AS OTHERS SEE IT.

The editor in a tour of some ten days has passed through New Brunswick and down the New England coast to Boston, thence inland through Worcester, Springfield, Holyoke, and Northampton, and on the way, or in various cities has met many Province people and Americans with whom he conversed in regard to reciprocity. The opinions expressed were many and various. The general result may be, however, summed up briefly in the statement that the trade agreement occupies a much larger place in the Canadian mind than in that of the American. In New Brunswick one is asked what he thinks of reciprocity. In New England he has to inquire what others think, or he will rarely hear the subject mentioned.

At the New Brunswick points visited the subject frequently came under review. There were many who think it may be a good thing, or that it ought to be so. There are many who are squarely opposed to it. Generally this division follows pretty closely along party lines. Pronounced Liberals pretty generally favor it and pronounced Conservatives oppose it. We did not find any of the latter who favored it at all, though we believe there are some. Conservatives who accept it as a measure of possible advantage. Even among pronounced Liberals there seemed to be no enthusiasm, and a quite an apparent willingness was evinced to have the American Senate reject it and so relieve us of any further necessity of considering it.

The opinion was quite freely expressed that the Government would stand stronger with the people if relieved of the reciprocity agreement, and we found some who believed it would be a good thing for both countries if put into effect, but who still hoped that it might be defeated at Washington in order that the Laurier Government might not be needlessly weighted with it at the coming general election. These persons were of opinion that the agreement would gain few, if any votes for the party in comparison with the number of votes that must be lost if it became an issue at the polls.

Across the border no one seemed to think or care very much about reciprocity. It is viewed as merely a subordinate incident in the great game of politics as it is being played in the big Republic. As already stated, one had to inquire about it in order to call forth any expression of opinion. The annexation idea had no foothold at all in the public mind. Canada is looked upon by the Massachusetts people as a great and growing country, quite competent to manage her own affairs, able to stand alone and resolved to do so. Yes, they would be glad if Canada would throw in her lot with them as they had long ago hoped she might do, but they had about given up all hope of that. They failed to see that a little more or less trade between the two countries, or a little higher or lower tariff on one side or the other could have any effect whatever on their political relations.

Only in New Brunswick and among the Conservatives there have we found the annexation question considered as having any bearing upon or relation to the reciprocity agreement. The New England newspapers only at rare intervals mention reciprocity at all. Any one of a score of subjects is treated as of more importance. Congress may pass it, or amend it, which would amount to the same thing. But it is only one in twenty who cares anything about it. To the masses the agreement is only a pawn in the political game. We met some farmers and more especially some fishermen on the trains or boats who were quite decidedly against reciprocity. They did not see why they should allow Canadian farm products or Canadian fish to come in and spoil their home markets.

On the boat between Saint John and Boston we met a number of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia people, going to the States or returning to the Provinces. Most of these, at least two-thirds of them, stated their politics as Liberal, but nearly all seemed to be opposed to reciprocity. They had no notion that the American market would be much good to us. One said that butter and potatoes were cheaper in Boston than in New York. Another, an Islander, told of a lobster of famous size and lusciousness that he had just eaten in Boston. "I got it for 15 cents," he said, "and would have had to pay two or three times that for it in Charlottetown when I was last there." Perhaps it was that those opposed to reciprocity were the readiest to talk, but there is a certain significance even in that.

And over and above all is the question whether reciprocity will pass the Washington Senate. At this writing President Taft has announced his intention to keep Congress in session till October or even till December in order to obtain the ratification of the agreement. But the Republicans, who are in the majority in the Senate are mainly high protectionists and as such are afraid of, or opposed to removing the present duties. The Democrats, who are opposed to high duties, and who would willingly endorse a reciprocal trade agreement, are in no mood "to play Taft's game," as they put it. And the farmers and grangers, along the border especially, do not want free competition with the Canadian farmers.

Wherefore the situation is surrounded with doubt. What will Congress do? What will Parliament do, if Congress sanctions the agreement? Or if Congress amends the agreement? Shall we have further obstruction from the Opposition when Parliament resumes, perhaps forcing an appeal to the people? And if it goes to the people what will be their verdict? Thus there are questions on every side and no one can predict results with very much of certainty. Only time can solve the problem and we must possess our souls in patience for weeks and perhaps months to come.

BERLIN, Ont., May 29—Earl Grey and his two daughters, Ladies Sybil and Evelyn, were the guests of Berlin today when the Governor-General unveiled the $5,500 monumental statue of the late Queen Victoria, erected by the Berlin Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. CITIZENS SAY KILL THE LEPER

NEW YORK.—A despatch to the Herald from Pittsburgh says: Great alarm has been caused in this city over the discovery of a Chinese leper. The city physician had the victim removed to a tent on the premises of the Municipal Hospital for contagious diseases. He will be kept there, until a house can be built for him in an isolated spot of the city. An organized effort is being made by citizens to have the leper killed at once. A petition will be circulated asking that the director of public health devise some means of a easy death for the Chinese. Great alarm is felt that the disease will spread. The man had been suffering from leprosy for seven years, the disease manifested itself two years ago. The victim is Yee Tung, well educated, born in San Francisco, and thirty-one years old. For five years he has been employed as bookkeeper in Third avenue.
