Soldiers Of Fortune

By RICHARD HARDY DAVIS

Back in time for supper at the ball, Clay was drawn in a secret talk with Stuart, who asked him to meet him later in the Plazo, in a dark corner of which the former British officer appeared with a folded piece of sticky paper.

It was part of a placard Mendoza's men had posted about the capital charging Alvarez with giving Olancho's richest birthright—the mines—to aliens and had given command of the army to an alien, Stuart. It attacked Alvarez's failure to resent boundary aggressions of neighboring countries and finally asked "What can be expected of a President who is as blind to the dishonor of his country as he is to the dishonor of his own home?"

Stuart told Clay that he offered to resign his army post, but that Alvarez had declined to let him, and Stuart refused to leave the President and his wife with trouble undoubtedly coming.

And trouble soon came. It broke out at a review of Olancho's troops.

President Alvarez of course was present and his rival Mendoza with his cavalry.

In the midst of review, Mendoza, his sword at salute, rode up to the president.

"As the head of the army," he said, "I arrest you for high treason. You have plotted to place yourself in office without popular election. You are also accused of large thefts of public funds."

There was no chance for Alvarez's friends to block the coup. Mendoza's troops were so placed as to prevent any attempt at rescue and the President was taken to the jail.

Stuart, however, dashed to the carriage in which Madame Alvarez was watching the review.

"To the Palace!" he ordered the coachman and the guards. "Shoot anyone who tries to stop you."

The men did as ordered and brought the President's wife to her home where she prepared for hasty departure. King and Clay followed and the former put his yacht at her disposal.

But Stuart's men, whom he had taken to the Palace to guard Madame la President, despite his kindness to them, had been imbued with the native hatred of the alien woman, and when she appeared at the head of the palace stairway to take her flight, they fired, and Stuart fell, fatally wounded.

King, however, saw that the president's wife escaped, though Mendoza's troops assassinated Alvarez as, they said, "he was attempting to run away."

Clay and his men, anxious to defend the mines, and to retain the Langham concession, took part in the revolution. In one of the battles, Mendoza himself and the Americans helped in putting Rojas, a sincere Patriot, in the president's chair. As a result, the concession was continued and work went on in the mines as it had done before the revolution.

The steamer Santiago was leaving Valencia, the captain, coming to the ship's social hall, told his passengers that if they wanted to take a last look at Olancho, this was their chance.

Alice Langham and Reggie King looked up from their novels. Miss Langham shook her head.

"I've already said good-bye to Olancho," she said.

"I'm very comfortable here," said King.

But Clay and Hope arose with alacrity and stepped onto the empty deck. Alice Langham looked after them somewhat wistful and bit the edges of her book. She glanced critically toward King and assured herself that after all he understood her and she him, and that if they never rose to certain heights they never sank below a level of mutual esteem.

The young engineer and Hope walked about the decks and finally found a secluded spot.

"Dearest," said Clay, promise me that you are going to be very happy.

Hope raised her eyes and looked at him in silence, and had the man in the wheelhouse been watching the stars, as he should have been no one but the two foolish young people in the bow would have known her answer.

The ship's bell sounded eight times and Hope moved slightly.

"Eight bells, a voice sang from the darkness. 'The for'ard light's shining bright, and all's well."

THE END.

HELEN GAHAGEN PREFERS TAILORED GARMENTS FOR DAYTIME WEAR

HOLLYWOOD, May 22—She has been acclaimed by a famous New York critic as "the world's 10 most beautiful women—in one." She hates the word "hobby." She is much more interested in a discussion of child education than she is in clothes, yet is known as one of the smarest wearers of beautiful clothes on the New York stage.

She is Helen Gahagen, now spending some time in Hollywood. And her views about clothes are quite as decided as are her pertinent views about life in general.

Miss Gahagen prefers tailored garments for daytime and satin for evening and sees no reason why a woman shouldn't have lots of clothes made along the same pattern if that style is particularly becoming.

She has her favorite designer copy a chosen tailleur in three or four different fabrics—in an English tweed perhaps for casual wear, in a smart sheer cerulean blue or a navy poiret twill for street wear. She likes the vogue for darker blouses.

Faster Way Found to Relieve Headaches

NOW PAIN OFTEN RELIEVED IN MINUTES!

Remember the pictures below when you want fast relief from pain. Demand and get the method doctors prescribe—Aspirin.

Millions have found that Aspirin eases even a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain often in a few minutes!

In the stomach as in the glass here, an Aspirin tablet starts to dissolve, or disintegrate, almost the instant it touches moisture. It begins "taking hold" of your pain practically as soon as you swallow it.

Equally important, Aspirin is safe. For scientific tests show this: Aspirin does not harm the heart.

Remember these two points: Aspirin Speed and Aspirin Safety. And, see that you get ASPIRIN. It is made in Canada, and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet.

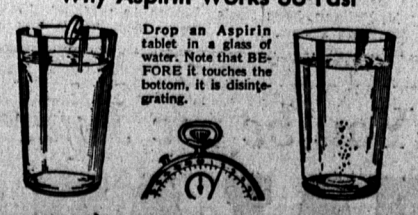
Get tin of 12 tablets or economical bottle of 24 or 100 at any druggist's.

Why Aspirin Works So Fast



Drop an Aspirin tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches the bottom, it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH — An Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach—ASPIRIN tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

"THE GOOD LORD'S WORK"

"The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do,
I said, 'You get somebody else—or, wait till I get through.'
I don't know how the Lord came out, but he seemed to get along—
But I felt kind of sneaking like—knowing I'd done God wrong—
One day I needed the Lord, needed Him myself—needed him right away—
And he never answered me at all, but I could hear Him say—
Down in my accusing heart —
'Nigger, I'se got too much to do,
You get somebody else, or wait till I get through.'
Now, when the Lord, He have a job for me, I never tries to shirk,
I drops what I have on hand and does the good Lord's work;
And my affairs can run along, or wait till I get through,
Nobody lese can do the job that God's marked out for you."
—Paul Lawrence Dunbar, the Negro poet.

THE STATURE OF A KING

Once upon a time there was a king, and a palace, and a block of marble set in a high wall which surrounded the palace. For generations it had been the custom for the son of the king, whose right it was to succeed his father, to be set aside and another chosen if when he came to manhood he did not reach in stature, as he stood on the polished slab just beneath it, the line which had been drilled in the block of marble set in the wall. In ordinary times the spot was well guarded, and the young man did not know whether he would measure up to the standard until the moment, when, surrounded by courtiers and subjects-to-be, he met this supreme test.

"There came a day when the king was slain in battle. In the excitement the stone was left unguarded, and in the moonlit midnight the prince stole out into the garden, accompanied only by his bodyguard, for a private measurement. He fell short of the mark by an inch! He could never be king! But yes, he would! A magician, silenced by rich reward, should lower the line. And so he gained the throne and the crown, but he was not happy.

"There came another day when his son was grown to manhood, and the father knew that he would never reach in stature even the lowered mark. Could it be changed again? No, there was no more black magic. And so at last he told the young man the story of his own temptation and yielding. 'My heart told me that the standard set up for kings should not be lowered. But I could not get the thing I believed I had a right to possess, and I would not give up the crown. I wanted it for myself, for my son.' And he wept bitterly.

"'Alas, my father,' cried the young prince, 'you have robbed me of all crowns. I cannot even be a true knight. What am I?—Only the son of a lowered line, a lost standard.' And that night he disappeared from the kingdom for ever.

"A few months later when the old cry rang through the palace grounds, 'The king is dead—long live the king,' a young peasant lad stood on the polished slab beside the garden wall, his head an inch and more above the line—a king!

"Only a folklore story? Yes, but it carries a haunting warning to us, for we live in a day of the lowered line. Like the king, men and women, young and old, have found it hard to get what they want, to do what they wish, and still measure up to the line which has marked a standard for generations. God's law is that standard. Can we afford to lower it? Is any pleasure or privilege worth such a price?—Lora E. Clement in The Youth's Instructor.

"AND WHEN THEY HAD PRAYED THE PLACE WAS SHAKEN"

The Temperance League and W. C. T. U. can take great credit for starting the movement for a clean-up of a new Mayor for the City of Vancouver. People said, "It can't be done," but after much preparation and a brief intensive campaign with an outstanding canditdate, Mr. G. G. McGeer, K. C., M. L. A., well known monetary reformer, was swept into office by a majority of over 25,000. Already good people are lifting their heads, underworld characters are being arrested or fleeing the city, seventeen police officers have been suspended, two police magistrates have been dismissed and the positions filled by others, and today Vancouver is in the grip of a real moral reform movement. The Mayor has been installed in office and one of the first things proposed was a day of prayer. He set aside Sunday, January 5th as a day of humiliation and prayer, and called aldermen, civic department heads, legislators, judges and magistrates, and all other persons in authority, and all loyal and law-abiding people to assemble for worship that day. Says he, "We have fallen on evil days because we have forgotten God, it becomes us to confess our sins and to pray for clemency and forgiveness to render our homage to the Almighty and Merciful Ruler of the universe, to the end that He will grant to us a vision of our city fair as she might be, 'a city of justice' where none shall prey on others, a city of plenty where poverty and vice shall cease to fester, a city of brotherhood and happy homes where success shall be founded on service, and honor given to nobleness alone, a city of peace, where order shall not rest on force but on the love of all for the city wherein we dwell." We believe that a new day is dawning on the Western Front.

—R. J. MacIntyre, Sec. B. C. Temperance League.

DR. IRWIN

The Secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation prefaced his address by some account of the International Congress on Temperance, which he attended last summer in London, England, which had many notworthy persons as delegates—for instance, a Past President of Austria, Chief of the Health Department of Belgium, a Cabinet Minister from Holland, two archbishops, twelve bishops, university professors, and a number of high commissioners.

Europe has growing temperance movements and desires fellowship with Anglo-Saxons, especially with Great Britain. Plans are being formed for an International Council with headquarters at Lusanne, comprising one European member, one American and one British.

The recent local option votes were reviewed and encouragement found in the majority of dry victories.

It is recognized throughout the world that alcohol is a narcotic drug, and its use must be controlled and progressively diminished in view of its evil social effects. To multiply the outlets for sale means to increase the volume of sales, and the opportunities for youth to contract the habit of drinking. The barriers and restraints against vice are weakened by the presence of women in drinking places.

The trend of liquor administration has been the largest sale possible without outraging public opinion. This is seen in the scant regard for legal enactment in the case of Huron and Peel, while the regulation that Beverage Rooms must have a certain number of rooms, has no real relation to the needs of the travelling public.

The 1934 liquor expenditure in Ontario of $53,000,000 was a 19 per cent. increase over that of the previous year. The building trade increase of 16 per cent. may be taken as an index of general conditions the increase of buyer sales exceeds the rate of normal business and trade recovery by at least 3 per cent. The municipal refund of 20 per cent. of profits from a local beer parlor is a tidbit to subsidize criticism and work out to a tax rebate of about 13 cents for each citizen who pays taxes within a municipality. The influence of this rebate upon public opinion is greatly in excess of its value in dollars and cents.

CONTRAST! That's what makes a tour through Québec so fascinating . . . so utterly different.

Montréal . . . Québec city . . . Trois Rivières. . . fine modern cities, all of them. And a few miles out in the country, old Inns; the village square dance and "raconteur" . . . handicrafts . . . ancient arts and customs still preserved in a setting of pastoral beauty. There is an atmosphere about Québec you will find nowhere else in America . . . a land essentially French. Pay us a visit this year. We're expecting you.
