THE TEETH THAT JACK BUILT This is the lime that made the teeth that Jack built.

These are the fruits, added once each day, along with the milk that made the teeth that Jack built.

To eat it with fruit, added once a day, along with the milk.

A sensible way to get the lime that made the teeth that Jack built.

CHAPTER VI Deborah walked slowly back to the house. The shadows were beginning to lengthen; the sun was already dropping down toward the porch.

Tubby fumbled in his pocket for a key ring. He opened the bag. He looked at Deborah.

"I've brought you some wedding presents," he said with his fascinating lisp. "There wasn't time to tell anyone before you left San Francisco. Bryn made me promise I wouldn't tell, anyway, as if it could have been kept quiet. The City is buzzing."

"Oh, dear," Deborah said faintly. "Nobody heard her. Grandmother was looking very proud. 'This is a very old family, of course,' she said. 'Even in San Francisco the wedding was certain to be a matter of comment. Nobody there will remember us, but I am pleased to think that Bryn is well known.'"

Tubby drew forth a tissue-wrapped box. "This is from my sister Sally," he explained, handing it to Deborah.

Deborah unwrapped the tissue paper. Inside was a long velvet jeweler's box; she opened it and there, in the white velvet lining lay a whole suit of rose-colored crystals, exquisitely cut. The long strand of the necklace dropped to her waist; the earrings were pendant on silver chains; there were two sparkling bracelets and a beautiful ring. Deborah looked at them.

"Is your sister Sally... is she a very great friend of Bryn's too?"

"Yes, indeed. They've adored each other for years. When Sally and Simon used to quarrel, it was always Bryn that Sally went to for sympathy. He'd let her cry it out on his shoulder, and pat her— you know the way men do," Tubby said to Grandmother with a cantarelle. "... and then he would slip off the telephone Simon, give him a good wigging, and tell him where Sally was.... I don't think they'd ever have got through at all if it hadn't been for Bryn."

"Who is Simon?" Deborah heard herself saying.

"Simon? Oh, he's Sally's husband. They're crazy about each other, you know, and always were, but they did quarrel until they were married. Now, here," Tubby went on, rummaging with one hand and holding out a flat round parcel with the other. "This is from me. It's the only way you ever get it. I thought you'd appreciate it," he muttered, his head in the bag. (To be Continued)

THE COOK'S CORNER

EGGLESS SALAD DRESSING.

Two-thirds cup vinegar, 1-2 cup water, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1-2 teaspoon white pepper, 1 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon salt. Mix all ingredients and cook over fire until thick. When using, add 2 table-spoons of dressing to 1-2 cup of cream.

CREAMED DRIED BEEF DE LUXE.

Four shredded wheat biscuits, 1-4 pound dried beef, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk, 1-8 teaspoon white pepper, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 egg yolk.

Cut up the dried beef; pour over it boiling water to cover; let stand five minutes and drain. Melt the butter over direct heat in the top of a double boiler, add the dried beef and cook five minutes while stirring. Add the flour, stir well, then add the milk and seasonings, and cook over hot water until thickened, stirring constantly. Cover and cook ten minutes. Beat the egg yolk and add to the dried beef mixture while stirring constantly. Cook two minutes and serve on split shredded wheat biscuit two-halves to each person—which have been heated in a moderate oven at 375 degrees Fahrenheit for ten minutes.

The egg yolk and Worcestershire sauce may be omitted. Or add a cup of sauteed sliced mushroom caps to turn this into a distinguished luncheon or dinner dish.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

ANNUAL POPPIES ARE BRILLIANT

They Bloom Easily From Seed and Thrive in Poor Dry Situations. Sow Them Early When They Are to Bloom.

"Poppy magic" and all the allusions to flash and delicacy contained in their infancy of grace and charm are yours if you will plant this lovely flower this spring. Those "visionary tints" of which the poet sings, painted on your garden floor like crystal specks which sparkle in the sun, will lend an atmosphere of soft air to your garden.

Plant them to bloom at large in your garden to sow and re-sow themselves with an unending spread of color. Their brilliancy will not be surpassed by any other annual, and they do their job better than any other. Following the June perennials as they do they will prove a happy flash before the later phlox and annuals have had a chance to bloom.

Shirley poppies are the most satisfactory. There is considerable work to be done in thinning the tiny seedlings from the lawn after the fall broadcast seeding, but the final effect is well worth the trouble.

Fall or winter sowing over the frozen ground will produce the same effect; the poppies germinate during cool weather and myriads of them appear with the spring thaws when they may be thinned. They naturalize easily, and if many of them are pulled up by the roots after the blooming season, the seeding will not be too prolific.

The Iceland, known by this name because of their abundance in that northernly country, are next in popularity with the Shirleys. They, too, will naturalize, but need a well drained bed, where they will give a brilliant flash of orange and yellow.

The old-fashioned peony flowered opium poppy is becoming popular again. New rose and pink varieties of this big flower are ideal for planting with delphiniums, and way, is excellent for sprinkling on biscuits or coffee cake; it is called monkhuchen in German.

The number of poppies in your garden will determine to a great extent the amount of color. Plan them lavishly and then thin well, as well as pull up a few to prevent too profuse growth in the spring.

What Good Mother? Dorothy Dix One Who Can Rule

Too Much Love and Attention Without Firmness and Discipline Are Fatal for Most Children and Mothers Should Avoid This Error

It is a strange thing that women have such queer ideas about motherhood and that those who think themselves the best mothers are generally the worst. There are exceptions, of course, but the great majority of mothers rear their children by their emotions without using a single lobe of their brains. This enables them to be filled with self-righteousness over being good mothers even while they are doing things to the child that will wreck its future life.

It is the commonest thing in the world to hear the mother of some detestable little brat, who has been pampered and spoiled until he is perfectly rotten, say that she knows that Johnny is rude and destructive and disobedient, but that she just loves him so much that she has never been able to control him or deny him anything he wanted.

If you'll think over the wild and wayward boys and girls you have known, who have brought shame and sorrow on their parents and been no-bewildered, heart-stricken mother kept repeating that she couldn't understand how her children could have turned out that way, because she had ever since they were born. She had sacrificed herself to them any responsibilities. She had never made them work or shoulder. She had slaved, waiting on them hand and foot. She had sat up half the night making Mamma a new dress and she had taken Tom's breakfast up to him on a tray, and so on and on, priding herself on the senseless devotion that had made her children what they were.

We have all known the possessive mothers who cut their children off from all the natural relationships of life; who would not let them have friends when they were school girls and boys; who would not let them marry when they were men and women, because they could not bear to be parted from them, or for them to have affection for any one else but themselves. I have actually heard mother boast of still having all their children with them, even though they had made them sour and disgruntled old maids and bachelors.

Most of them are not many women who are intentionally bad mothers. It is often through ignorance that they have lost their perspective and cannot see them as they are, or bring any common sense to bear upon their rearing, and because they befool themselves into thinking that if they only love their children enough they are bound to develop into the kind of men and women they wish them to be.

The question then arises, who is the ideal mother? What qualities should a woman possess to make her a good mother? I should say, first, love and tenderness. Every child needs these, but in moderation. Love can curse as well as bless, and it is the easiest thing in the world for tenderness to degenerate into weakness. The ideal mother is the woman who uses both her head and her heart in dealing with her children, and loves them too well to let them grow up into pests that everybody else hates.

The ideal mother should have firmness enough to enforce law and order in her household and to teach her children obedience and respect for authority. No greater misfortune can befall a human being than to be mother's fair-haired darling who has been pampered and spoiled from the cradle and saved from every hardship; whose selfishness has been cultivated; whose egotism has been inflated; whose will has never been crossed. It is the spoiled children who are predestined failures in the world and who fill the divorce courts. Life plays no favorites and it disciplines with a heavy hand the men and women whose mothers never taught them to stand and take it, or to submit their wills to others.

The ideal mother does not try to keep her children perpetual babies. She teaches them to stand on their own feet and fight their own battles. Like the wise birds, she pushes them out of the home nest and lets them make their own. And she leaves them free to make their own lives. When a woman can do that, she is a good mother.

EXCLUSIVE STYLES FOR PEERLESS DRESSERS

Young moderns who crave sophisticated clothes will love this pastel flower-like solid-color bolero jacket costume.

She'll be particularly enthusiastic about the bolero jacket with its shoulder sleeves interesting and plaited. She'll enjoy wearing the jacket over other frocks.

She'll want to take her jacket off, too, to show off her smart fitted and flared dress. There's an action plait at the front of the skirt. It allows plenty of freedom for activities of youth. The brief puffed sleeves with cuffs, provide lots of flattery for chubby arms.

For another different looking dress, make it of gay cotton print with plain jacket. The color of the jacket will tone with one of the print. Omit the plaited frill.

A Detailed step-by-step Sewing Guide accompanies the pattern and makes it ever so easy to sew.

Style No. 2560 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2 1-2 yards of 39-inch material with 3 yards of plaiting.
