At 10 o'clock last night the car ferry was reported to have reached a point one mile from Tormentine, and was battling with heavy ice which has been driven in by the easterly wind. The ferry had another mile of ice to break through before she would be able to proceed to Borden. The steamer left Tormentine at 2 o'clock, Monday morning, and after working more than 36 hours in the ice returned to Tormentine. Second Period
After two minutes of play Campbell, smart National centre flicked the light on a pass out from Harper. Sixteen minutes after Walker, Montague centre crossed the score on an individual effort.

Third Period
Campbell, Borden centre again turned the trick on another long canto in eleven minutes. The count came after he circled his own net to coast unmolested to Mabe who had little chance on the score. This was the final and winning goal of the night. The Imperials put a stiff fight, forcing Borden to go all they had to come out on top. The winners meet Victoria next week in another sudden death fixture for the Island title.

Save The Birds

want these birds to increase we have got to reduce the hawks in the same proportion as other birds have been reduced the last fifty years. Remember, one Sharp Shinned Hawk will kill hundreds of birds in a year.

It is not humanly and the boys of our land that are keeping our song and insectivorous birds down; education has stopped that. It is the bird's natural enemies that all are ill out of proportion.

One evening last fall four miles from my home when the March hawks were migrating there were fourteen in sight at once and yet men are telling me "They are on the decrease," they must have poor eyesight or the sun dazzles their eyes. Talk about hawks being scarce, I shot seventeen hawks in less than three hours. Do not forget readers these various hawks follow our valuable birds to the south and back again.

Several of my most particular friends who do not see eye to eye with me on the hawk question, but who are among my best friends just the same, are coming from as far as three hundred miles to tag young Mourning doves around my little thirty acre plantation, where the doves nest by the hundreds. And this same class of men will take me in their parks near their homes and wonder why the Mourning doves, Cardinals and Robins are not as plentiful in their parks, and in the same breath call my attention to a mother crow on her nest, and possibly to what they call a beautiful hawk sitting on a dead limb across the golf course, and these two birds dominating the whole situation. Why do not these men go to places to tag Mourning doves, and Robins instead of coming here, where we control the hawks and other natural enemies? And, by the way, right here let me say to the men of the world, because we do not see eye to eye along the line of any study, do not let that make us enemies, because there is nothing that will help a friend more than real friendly constructive criticism. An Indian once said, "Everybody think like me, every body want my squaw."

If you have a hatching of several hundred pure bred choice chickens and put them out, and hawks start reducing your flock, are you supposed to go in the house and read some Government bulletin or other literature to find out whether this is a valuable hawk nine days out of ten. I say right here, take ex-President Calvin Coolidge's advice when he said "Let every man do the duty closest to him," or in other words, take the gun and control him because when your chickens are gone he will only start at your neighbors.

Knowing the deprecations of the middle size and smaller hawks as I do, and have known all my life, I am completely bewildered to know why intelligent men will advocate the stocking of a country with song, insectivorous and game birds and make stringent laws to punish even a child for molesting one of them, and at the same time frame laws protecting hawks that eat these useful birds all up.

One great excuse is that these hawks and owls kill mice. Let me ask you this question. Are mice the farmers' great dread in America? No; the multiplying of weed seeds that the majority of song and insectivorous birds live on throughout the width and breadth of America is what is bothering us, and I never was proder of our own local Game Protective Association than I was at our last meeting when they stood up in unison in favor of putting the quail on the song bird list. The Bob-White quail and the Mourning Dove are the two most valuable birds we have on the North American continent, and if any person tells you that each bird will destroy as many and more, than ten thousand weed seeds in one day you believe it and if we

WORLD CONFERENCE PLANNED ON BOXING
(By Robert C. Dowson, United Press Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, March 10.—Unanimous agreement and control of world boxing championships will be the objective of leading fight officials of the United States, Great Britain and continental countries at a conference here about the middle of April. The meeting is called by the British Boxing Board of Control with the object of bringing about an understanding on international boxing matters between itself, the National Boxing Association of America and the International Boxing Union. The National Boxing Association's president, John V. Clinton, will voice proposals and ideas of the association's 38 affiliated states, while a delegation from the International Boxing Union will represent Germany, France, Belgium, Italy and other European states. The British delegation will be headed by Charles Donmall, secretary of the British Board.

In addition to co-operation among the three principal organizations working agreements between all boxing commissions and controlling bodies throughout the world will be discussed.

A proposition expected to come from the American delegation that the question of any world championship should be submitted to the British Board and the European organizations for their approval. The contest can be held. The attitude was indicated in a recent letter from Clinton to Donmall. "We admit," Clinton wrote, "Americans are prone to claim world championships without due consideration of the rights in the prize of the various other countries of the world. This is one of the propositions that should be settled once for all in the conference which are arranging to be held in London at an early date.

"I would suggest that a completion of the outstanding negotiations each class be arranged every two months and submitted to these quarters in order that the Championship Committee of the National Boxing Association may take due notice of ratings for European boxers."

ENGINEER FINDS STRONG WIND SKIDS LIGHTNING

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 10.—Chain lightning actually "skids" when driven by a strong wind, according to K. B. McEachern, research engineer at the General Electric Company plant here.

In a recent announcement, McEachern pointed out that, despite its reputation for being a terrible "enemy," lightning is one of the greatest benefactors of mankind.

"It has been proved in several different ways," McEachern said, "that lightning can be blown and moved from its path by the wind. This is possible because many lightning discharges, consist of a succession of discharges, too rapid for the eye to distinguish but not too rapid for the wind to blow along."

CAPE TRAVERSE PROWESS

SIR.—The writer has followed with interest the activities of the various teams comprising the McLean League, this season and now when all is over and Borden holds the MacLean Trophy, I cannot help asking why they were allowed to compete at all this season. Was not their application to the League filed too late? How then did they get in and why did Mr. Jones not disqualify them under the M. A. H. A. rules which do not admit such things? No doubt Mr. Jones never had this brought to his attention for if it had it would have meant Exit Borden.

However by now the "tumult and the shouting" has died and Cape Traverse, although not holders of the trophy emerged from the fray the only unbeaten team in their own section, and in addition, again this season have ably demonstrated their superiority over Kensington, winners of the central section. Have they beaten Borden this year? Yes, in an exhibition game they showed that on fast ice they could easily handle Borden, and now I will venture to express my own humble opinion which came to me after watching Cape Traverse, Borden and Kensington in action, all at their best. It is that I believe Cape Traverse capable of at least holding their own against a picked team from Kensington and Borden.

Nationals turned in a fairly nice game, being compelled to turn aside about 35 shots apiece during the evening's play.

The above criticism is meant to be constructive rather than the contrary, and it is hoped that the teams will try and remedy these faults before playing any more games. Then again, forwards skating in over their opponent's blue line is not good hockey, because a forward pass to a waiting puckman has the "blue line" men trapped hands down. At no time, with the exception of a desperate offence should a complete forward line pass the opposing blue line.

To get back to the game, it may be stated that each and every player on the ice last night gave their all throughout every period of the game. It was exciting hockey and the four hundred and some fans left the Forum well pleased on the night's exhibition.

THE SCORES

First Period

The first period although scoreless, was crowded with exciting hockey and plenty penalties. Referee Fred Moore handing out five minors before the bell.
