THE OLD HOME.

I am sitting, idly sitting,
Mid the sunset's fading gleam,
And a vision comes to cheer me,
Of the old home by the stream,
For I seem to hear the cow bells,
In the winding, shady lane,
Feel the breezes gently rustle,
Rippling o'er the fields of grain.

It is autumn and the dead leaves
From the branches silent fall,
All the birds in nests abiding,
In the shadows softly call,
Now the crickets chirping loudly,
Pipe again their merry lay,
Mingling with the harp's voices
Where the little children play.

Though the years are passing by,
Since the careless days I sported,
Off its open door I now sigh,
Yet the summer's host of blossom,
Oh, the old home, how I love it!
Fair in yard and meadow grow,
And the stream the valley crossing
Sings its old song sweet and low.
