THE STORY

"I have no right to cheat her out of such a thrill as this," he decided. But he hurried his steps, for he had no desire to explain his appearance to any other but Gay.

Her amazement at his appearance at her door equalled his expectations. "Rand—Rand," she gasped weakly.

"Let me in, let me in, he urged laughingly. "Don't have me out here with the burden of crime upon me, for the first Chink to take a pot shot at."

Hurriedly she drew him into the room, closed and locked the door behind him.

"Rand—Rand—what have you done?" she whispered.

She listened silently while he told, in sketchy fashion, the events of the night. Her eyes upon him were terrified, and troubled. When he finished his recital with a jaunty triumphant gesture she turned on him passionately.

"You shouldn't do such things," she cried thickly. "You should not have no right to take such chances. Oh, Rand, what do they care for murder? Think of that poor boy—"

It was not until he had been well fortified with strong coffee that she asked him gently, for her sake, to give up this ridiculous, dangerous enterprise and pay no more attention to the activities in the Little Club. She said she was sorry she had ever told him anything about the affair in the cave, she felt she had led him into terrible danger.

"I keep thinking of that boy, Rand. They are utterly unprincipled, unscrupulous. I know they are. They would stop at nothing. If anything happens to you, it will be my fault."

Rand tried to reassure her, promising to take every precaution, but he would not consent to give up the undertaking. He was sure he had his finger on a thread that would unravel a vast network of intrigue and crime involving many thousands of dollars perhaps hundreds of lives. He was going to have the reward the unraveling would entail, but more important than that, he was going to have the sport of unraveling. He would not yield to her.

"And first of all, I'm going to show up your sad-eyed friend. He's a crook and I'll prove it to you. Him, and his sad eyes!"

"Randie, dear," Gay said, her hands in his hair, drawing his face toward her, "did any one ever tell you that your eyes are sad, too? That are. Very sad. Your lips are merry and your voice is light, your eyes are always wistful. The voice is what one makes it—but the eyes—Yes, open windows to the soul. Sad, very sad."

CHAPTER IX

It was amazing to Gay that the island, enmeshed as it was in a network of lawless enterprise so flagrant as to include open murder, should continue its placid aimless course of every-day untroubled calm. The Captain lumbered from the hotel drains to the Nixon porch and talked regretfully of the work he did not accomplish on his boat.

"Autumnly after Mrs. Anderson's stern denial of a Christmas party, had remained wistful, quiet and meek, climbed the hill one day with the old bright happy flush on her cheeks, and old bright light in her weak blue eyes. She was laughing.

"Oh, it is a lovely morning Gay a lovely morning. Coming on to Christmas now, isn't it, coming on to Christmas?"

"Yes, it is. Did—Alice Andover say you could have the party, after all?"

"Autumnly burst into joyous gentle laughter. "Oh, my dear, when I think of Alice Andover—dear Alice! She is a fine woman, for all her faults, one in a thousand. But when I think of all her administering, and her bossing, and her scheming—and all she gets for it—oh, no," she interrupted herself, trying to smother her exuberance. "Oh, no, no Christmas party this year, Oh, no!" She shook her little silver head, but could not shake away that air of joy.

She said she had only come to borrow a bag, a good-sized hand bag. She

A Tickling In Her Throat For Years

Mrs. Peter Johnson, Port Alberni, B.C., writes:—"I had been troubled for years with a tickling in my throat every time I would lie down, and at night I would cough so I could not sleep, and could hardly do my work. I would cough until I would vomit."

"I heard of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and after the first bottle I had no more cough, and now I am never without a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house."

transfer him from the northwest frontier province where he is stationed in the ordinary course of service with the Royal Air Force at Miranshah."

The place to which Col. Lawrence is transferred is not stated in the communiqué. The noted leader of the Arab revolt against Turkey in the war has occupied an inconspicuous position in the Royal Air Force for some time.

LAFORE, Jan. 11.—Aircraftsman Shaw, better known as Colonel T. F. Lawrence, aplaned today from Miranshah in the Northwest Frontier Provinces, to Lahore. He will go thence to Karachi and take the first boat for home. He has been transferred to the home establishment. It is flatly denied that Lawrence has had any connection with Afghanistan, and there is some likelihood his transfer home is designed to put a stop to such rumors.

HUGH FALOONA VICTIM OF INFLUENZA MALADY.

Taken ill on Christmas Day with influenza, Hugh Falooa, resident of this district since 1874, died this morning at his residence, 294 Port Street, Port Arthur, at the age of 82 years.

Hugh Falooa was one of the best known figures on the streets of Port Arthur for many years. Born in County Down, Ireland, near Belfast, he came out to Canada with his parents when he was nine years old, settling at Collingwood. He worked as a millwright in a sawmill at Collingwood until 1874, when he came to Silver Islet and worked in the silver mines which were at that time operating fully.

Later, he came to Port Arthur and in 1893 joined the Port Arthur police force, serving for twelve years, when he resigned to take a position with the Canadian National police. After several years' service on that body he retired.

He is survived by his widow and one son William; three grandchildren, Hubert, Bernice and Wilma, children of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Falooa; and one sister, Mrs. F. Filion, of Vancouver.

Of a musical temperament, the old gentleman loved his violin, and his talents have been handed down to his son William, and developed by him to a remarkable extent, the son having won many prizes in public competitions.—Port William Times-Journal.

His son William referred to above is captain of the Suction Dredge which operated here during the past season and who will have the sympathy of many acquaintances in his bereavement.)

LENOX, Mass., Jan. 8.—Two registered turkeys attacked Frank Carr, a local poultryman, when he approached them clad in a red sweater. Carr sought safety in a tree, where he discarded the sweater, thus restoring peace with his prize fowl.

Lawrence Sent to Parts Unknown

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 11.—(Via Reuters).—Colonel T. E. Lawrence, of Arabian fame, has been transferred from the northwest frontier of India to parts unknown. In view of erroneous reports that he was active on the Afghan side of the border in the present dispute between the Government of Afghanistan and rebels an official communiqué was issued by the Indian Government today.

The statement said: "In view of the increasing currency which is being obtained by unfounded and preposterous rumors connecting the name of Airraframa, Shaw (formerly Col. Lawrence) with events on the Afghan side of the border, the Indian Government has decided to

Islander's Daughter Wins Success

WINNER AT CHICAGO DISPLAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Miss Mildred Cochrane, 16, outstanding New Hampshire club girl, was the only New England girl winning a prize in the national Canning Contest, open to all 4-H club girls in the country, and held in connection with the international Livestock Show in Chicago.

Miss Cochrane won sixth place in the eastern division, which includes 12 states. She got the honor on her display of canned pork.

Her mother, Mrs. Annie Cochrane, who was formerly Annie Blanche Murray of Fredericton, P. E. Island, will be pleased to learn that Mildred is so outstanding in her Club work, besides her school work. She is a junior in High School and has been on the honor roll for several years.

Mrs. Cochrane is leader of the club and has been for sometime. Mildred took her mother's place for four months last summer. With the assistance of Mrs. Leon Parker, assistant club leader, she carried on the club work, at the time doing the canning that won her a national prize.
