"In all my many years of office I do not remember one when so many marriages that had been arranged did not take place."

One of the oldest Registrars in London yesterday. "It has been an uncommon thing to have three or four marriages cancelled in one week."

"And in almost every case it is the bride who changes her mind at the last moment. They come up into the office, these youngsters, with their minds half made up."

Then, for some reason, the bride becomes a bit hysterical, bursts into tears, and rushes from the room, leaving a sheepish, embarrassed and half angry bridegroom behind.

The bridegroom, having paid for the license, the ring, and the other incidentals necessary for a wedding, rushes to the nearest pub to drown his anger, his sorrow, and his shame and to escape the snickers and jeers of his friends.

"The favorite excuse made by the bride for changing her mind is a phrase that I think they have learned from reading the reports of cases in the divorce courts."

"But the real reason, in my opinion, is that many of these young girls do not realize the seriousness of the step they are taking until they find themselves in the severe atmosphere of the official-looking blue documents prepared for their signature. They understand that marriage is not a thing to be taken lightly."

Peckham And The Minister

(By Dominion News Service.)

LONDON, June 28.—Peckham was paralysed.

Peckham, which has known, on Sunday only the soft chiming of "church bells and whose only sensation on the day of rest has been an occasional flight outside the public house after closing time, has been shaken to its foundations by the Rev. Ernest Thorn, minister of the Church of the Strangers.

Peckham knows that what the Rev. Ernest Thorn has done is attracting crowds to his church, and whether his idea is good for Peckham and the church, Peckham has yet to decide.

Strangers were not patronising the Church of the Strangers, and the Rev. Ernest Thorn thought up an idea to bring them in. He succeeded. He banished the pulpit, and in its place erected a stage. On the stage he placed his properties, i.e., three stools, two pitchers, and a tent. Then he advertised.

A Busy Mother

(By Dominion News Service.)

LONDON, June 28.—Two years ago Mrs. Hearne of Mill Platt Avenue, Isleworth, won a prize at a local baby show.

"Eleven of the 19 are alive and well," Mrs. Hearne said, when interviewed. "It makes me smile when I hear of people in the London suburbs who say they cannot afford to bring up one or two children. If they had to bring up a family like ours on $15.00 a week and less than that when my husband, who is a labourer, has to make a day or two off in wet weather—they would know what family responsibility is."

"Holidays? Now what time would I get for holidays? Why, I have never seen the sea. I rarely get a chance to run into London and I have never been over London bridge."

"I start the day's work at 5 o'clock and find lots to do to keep me interested and occupied until bedtime.

"Our greatest difficulty is in providing the children with boots. I can cut down the clothes of the older children when they have grown out of them for the younger

Modern Woman

(By Dominion News Service.)

LONDON, June 28.—Matilda Emily Bert, of Aden Road, Stoke Newington, had destroyed for ever one man's belief in chivalry, courtesy, woman grace and the Victorian conception of the female sex. Matilda Emily mounted a crowded tramcar. The man rose, and, lifting his hat, said "Madam will you have my seat." To his surprise, instead of blushing faintly, bowing courteously, and murmuring, almost inaudibly, her thanks Emily Matilda hauled off and handed him a Dempsey on the nose. The conductor of the tram ventured to remonstrate and Matilda Emily walloped him on the jaw. The conductor, disappointed, but with his faith in womankind not altogether destroyed, took her by the arm, assisted her from the tram, and placed her under the protection of a policeman. On the following day Matilda Emily told the grim reporter, had visited the Magistrate at Tottenham that the courteous gentleman when she rose to give her his seat pushed her, and that the conductor had addressed her in what she considered a too friendly tone, to wit "old bird."

The Magistrates looked the party over, bent their heads in solemn contemplation, and in chorus said "Fined £1."

The Famous Mystery Box

(By Dominion News Service.)

LONDON, June 28.—Disciples of Joanna Southcott, the domestic servant who during the last years of the eighteenth century gained thousands of followers, are again urging that her famous box of mystery, said to contain prophecies of immense importance to England shall be opened. Periodically advertisements appear in the London papers urging that "Moss's" fate will be London's doom unless the Bishops open Joanna Southcott's box.

This famous box is said to contain unpublished prophecies which relate to a period 130 years after they were written and are, therefore, due for early fulfilment. It was about 1792 that Joanna, who up to that time had lived quietly as a domestic servant on a farm in Devonshire, suddenly announced herself as the woman "clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet and upon her head a crown of 12 stars." She wrote 60 books of prophecy and went about doing very well "selling the elect" at a charge stated to vary between £2 and £11—each. As she is said to have had 144,000 followers, her income as a prophet was not likely to be despised.

The mysterious box is said to be secretly guarded somewhere in Devonshire, and is only to be opened in the presence of 24 bishops and 24 of the followers of the prophetess. Up to the present the 24 bishops have not expressed any willingness or desire to examine the prophecies.

Despite the fact that 130 years have passed since this woman

IN MEMORIAM

MR. ANGUS A. McCORMACK

A gloom was cast over the town of Souris and surrounding country on the morning of June 14, 1923, when it became known that death, the grim reaper, had visited the home of Mrs. Bert Paquet, and claimed for its victim her father, Mr. Angus A. McCormack, at the advanced age of 89 years.

The deceased had been ailing for the past ten months and notwithstanding the best medical attention and most tender and devoted nursing, he succumbed to the inevitable. His spirit took its flight into the mansion of bliss where happiness reigns supreme. Although suffering intensely at times he never murmured nor complained, but bore it with patience and resignation to the Divine Will. He was visited frequently by his pastor, and he died fortified by the last rites of the Roman Catholic church.

He will long be remembered in the community for his kind and cheerful disposition, merited for him the love and esteem of all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, a fact which was clearly demonstrated by the large concourse of people who followed the remains to St. Mary's cemetery on Saturday, 16th inst, where a solemn service of requiem was celebrated by his pastor, Rev. J. C. MacLean, after which all the mortal remains of a kind and loving father were laid to rest beside his wife, who predeceased him three years ago. He leaves to mourn one son, A. J. McCormack, Battleford, Sask., and three daughters, Mrs. Anna Wyman, Mrs. Fred B. McIntyre, and Mrs. Bert Paquet, also an adopted daughter, Mrs. Mamie Townsend. The pallbearers were Mr. A. Currie, Mr. T. Arbing, Mr. H. B. Acorn, Mr. James Dunphy, Mr. Patrick St. John, Mr. Wm. Cheverie. May his soul his in peace.

MR. EDWARD SHARKEY

On Sunday evening, June 17th, as his shadowing over the land, there passed peacefully away to his eternal reward, Mr. Edward Sharkey, of Corraville, in his eightieth year. Although well advanced in years the late Mr. Sharkey was hearty and active until about six months ago, when suddenly the hand of time seemed to bear heavily upon him and being forced to remain in doors during the long severe winter his constitution became gradually weakened so that he was compelled to remain in bed. Finally the crisis—inevitable in the case of the aged—came on Wednesday afternoon, the 13th. A sudden change accompanied by chills and weakness seized him, and it became apparent that death was rapidly approaching. His gradually sinking and the end came, which must come to all, on the following Sunday.

The deceased was one of the pioneer settlers of the St. Peter's Road. Descended from ancestors noted for their industry and thrift, he inherited those sterling qualities, and during his long and active life he was a chief factor in promoting every enterprise calculated to advance the public welfare of his native district. In his private affairs he exhibited the same care and attention, and he was regarded as one of the most independent and most progressive farmers in his parish. But it will chiefly be by his vivacity, his kindly gentility and neighborliness, that the deceased will long be remembered by all who came in contact with him. A host of friends and acquaintances will long revere his memory.

He reared a large family consisting of five girls and six boys—Patrick J., who lives on the home-stand, and Mrs. D. J. Mullin at St. Peter's. Five of the family are in Boston and four are in the Canadian West.

In his last illness he was attended by his parish priest, Rev. Bernard Gillis; and on Wednesday morning the 20th, his mortal remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of All Saints' church, Cardigan, beside his beloved wife who predeceased him eighteen years ago.

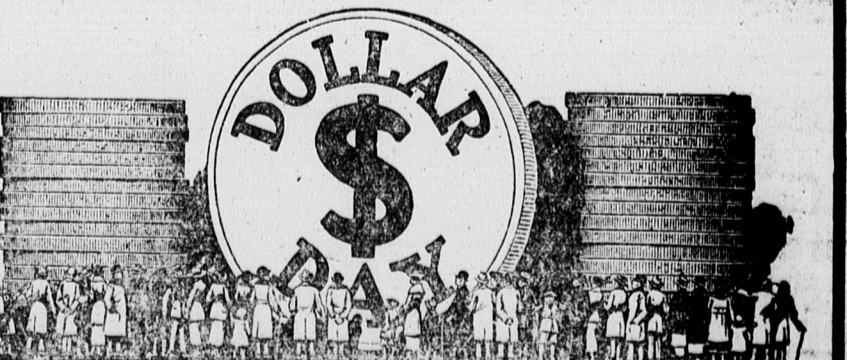

Eternal rest give unto him, O Lord, and let perpetual rest shine upon him.

The passing of the late Edward Sharkey, Esq., of Corraville, merits more than a fleeting notice. A man of the most genial and kindly nature it was always a pleasure to meet him, especially in his home, where he was ever the most gracious host. Thoroughly honest and just, his word was his bond, to the poor ever charitable and sympathetic. Many will miss him. As the first postmaster of Corraville, for a long period his public duties were always conscientiously discharged. Born in April, 1844, his long life was spent in the old family home, and here, surrounded by a devoted family, many of whom came far to be with him, he breathed his last as the sun went down on June 17. No suffering or disease came to him, only a beautiful fading from life, a life that might well be imitated, a death to be envied.

His funeral services were held at All Saints' church, Cardigan, and largely attended, interment following in the adjoining cemetery, beside the remains of his beloved wife, who went before eighteen years ago.

Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord.
