Blinding Headaches Made Her Helpless

Forced to Lie Down For Hours at a Time

Other sufferers from headaches will be interested to read this letter.

"Until last summer I was subject to very bad headaches. While they lasted I seemed to lose my sight and all power in my hands, and was forced to lie down for hours at a time. My aunt (who has taken Kruschen Sals for 12 years with beneficial results) suggested my trying them. I did so, and I've not had any return of those headache for months, in fact I feel quite better. I shall always take Kruschen regularly in future."

(Mrs. M. W.)

Headaches can frequently be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unassisted retention in the material which poisons the blood. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in the complete elimination of waste matter, resulting in purer blood-stream, and thus helping to bring relief from headaches.

Urges Withdrawal Of Foreign Aid

TORQUAY, Devonshire, June 17 (CP Cable)—The Earl of Lytton told the League of Nations Union Conference today the danger of the Spanish civil war spreading to other countries was becoming greater every month.

"The war can only be stopped in one way—by the withdrawal from both sides of the aid which is being given from the outside," Lord Lytton said.

The Conference adopted a resolution that the League of Nations

Musical Comedy At Kensington

"Receiving the Parson," a two act musical comedy was presented to a packed house in Kensington Hall Kensington, on Friday evening June 11th. The entertainment was under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the United Church, who deserve much praise for staging something different with great success. The close attention, laughter, and applause of the large audience gave ample proof of their enjoyment and appreciation.

The stage was appropriately decorated with potted plants and colored lights.

The scene opens in the living room of Deacon Judd and his practical wife Matilda. The Deacon allows Matilda to speak her mind seeing as there's no way short of murder of preventing it.

The parts of the Deacon and Matilda are most ably taken by Mr. Athol Cotton and Mrs. Ker Clark. Their pretty daughter, Nancy, is nicely acted by Miss Miriam Proffitt. The entire village assembles to plan a reception for the new minister and opening chorus "Shake Hands, How do you do" is beautifully rendered.

For the Dominion Textile Company Ltd., under continuous fire by Commission Counsel J. C. McRuer for more than a year. C. G. Heward of Montreal challenged the figures of abnormal profits in its 30 years of operation. Mr. McRuer argued that these represented an average annual return of 98 per cent on the original cash which went into the company.

On the other hand, Mr. Howard, taking the commission counsel's figures, showed profits throughout the period of only 9.12 per cent on invested capital. In 17 years the average ratio of earnings to value of investment had been 5.24 per cent.

Much had been made by commission counsel of the financial features covering the merger of the Dominion Textile Company. It was represented that only $500,000 in actual cash had been put into the new company by the syndicate promoting the merger.

Delving into records of the merger concerns—the Dominion Cotton Mills Ltd., the Merchants Cotton Mills, the Montmorency Bleaching and Printing Co., Mr. Howard recalled all had been in financial difficulties, three of them operating at losses. He said efforts to introduce fresh capital had failed and the companies were a blank future.

It was argued the merger aimed at eliminating duplication of work and excessive competition, and established economy in administration. Shareholders were given bonds in the new company on a basis agreeable to themselves. These shareholders began drawing interest on their bonds, almost as soon as the merger was consummated. Prior to that, they had been receiving nothing in addition to the $500,000 in cash. The Dominion Textile Company brought into the new concern other assets approximating $2,000,000.

Mr. Howard commended the labor policy of the company which, throughout the depression, was able to provide continuous employment. Figures showed that in the last few years, average real wage of the employees had risen, while returns on capital dropped. Analysts of other industries, disclosed the textile companies paid higher wages than the average industrial level in the provinces in which they operated.

The Dominion Textile Company's wages, for female employees, were considerably in excess of the requirements of the minimum wage act made. A year later the reduction was restored, and subsequently it was all restored. Wages generally were now higher than at any time in the company's history.

Mr. Howard disagreed with many of the figures employed by Mr. McRuer, relating to the Dominion Textile Co. The wages employed by commission counsel were fallacious, he said, and had little relevance to actual operations of the business.

For the primary textile concerns, R. L. Kellock of Toronto showed the magnitude of the industry, employing nearly 60,000 workers in Canada. He emphasized the regularity of employment enjoyed by these workers and the steady wages they had received.

During the proceedings it was brought out the textile companies had co-operated with the government to continue operations. Mr. Kellock showed this had been done even when the employers were themselves piling up deficits on their operations. When those who had invested their money in textiles were being shorn of dividends, work was being maintained among the wage-earners.

Mr. Kellock argued justification of the alarm at Japanese competition, particularly in the artificial silk industry. So low were Japanese wages, so different the living conditions of the workers from those of Canadians, and so active were governmental agencies in the subsidy of exports that a real threat was levelled at the Canadian primary textile industry.

"The war can only be stopped in one way—by the withdrawal from both sides of the aid which is being given from the outside," Lord Lytton said.

The Conference adopted a resolution that the League of Nations

Rebels Push To Outskirts Of Capital

highway with a six-mile curtain of fire.

This correspondent found himself in the thick of the battle at 4:30 p. m. when he entered Las Arenas, a northern Bilbao suburb on the east bank of the Nervion, with the first insurgent detachments.

Basque artillery batteries entrenched in Portugalete, almost directly across the river, were hammering the still smoldering city with a sustained barrage.

Proceeding cautiously, Gen. Davila's men mopped up the sector. Most of Las Arenas' largest buildings were ablaze and other fires were added to the conflagration by Government shells.

This correspondent sought refuge with others in the sub-cellars of the Maternity Hospital, already crowded with 150 nuns who said they had been without light or milk for the last 48 hours. Food supplies were exhausted two days ago by the Basque army command's order, they said.

"Some of the (refugee) ships have been stopped by rebel (insurgent) warships and at least one has been sunk with the loss of many lives.

"German aviation, not content to bombard the cities and villages of Vizcaya (the province containing Bilbao) and machine gun the population of Bilbao, still trying to prevent the evacuation of the city of Santander.

"Pursuit planes, flying low after dropping their bombs, have massacred an immense caravan of women and children with machine guns.

"Tonight in pitch darkness there is a frightful spectacle. Over the sound of machine gun bullets and the crash of bombs come screams of terror and pain from the dying on the roads, which are covered with the torn bodies of women and children. Their pitiful baggage is scattered by the side of the road.

"This morning Bilbao suffered a terrible bombardment. Several shells hit hospitals which were jammed with sick and wounded. The number of victims is very high."

Edmontone Poisoning Outbreak Is Probed

EDMONTON, June 17—(CP)—Relief department and health authorities linked forces today in what they said would be a "thorough investigation" of tainted food which has sent 33 persons to hospitals suffering from a foreign poison which suits a very definite majority of the people of Canada—for the moment—in the opinion of John W. Dafeo, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, but the qualification, he says, is important.

He explained just how important it is tonight before the second conference on Canadian American affairs here in a paper on Canada's foreign policy.

The Dominion Government's current policy, he said, was essentially one which kept national disunity at a minimum by postponing decisions and encouraging expectations. While it worked today "in a fashion" it was predicated on a continuation of existing international conditions.

If those conditions should take a violent turn for the worse—and he thought it inevitable in the not too distant future—that policy would collapse. The several present vaguely-defined groups of opinion on the question would be realigned into two clear-cut factions, North Americans and Imperialists.

Of the latter group he commented, "In spite of much that I hear to the contrary I think they would together constitute a great multitude."

In the government's present policy, said Mr. Dafeo, there was no outward evidence of an inward decision to take any particular course in the event of developments calling for action.

"The government marks time and hopes that nothing is going to happen," he said, "and the people do likewise."

The whole foreign policy issue, which is now threatening to swallow up all other political issues in Canada, is not new. "As a matter

GENE RAYMOND AND JEANETTE M'DONALD WED

Excitement, Extravagance, And Mol Scenes Mark Marriage Of "Perfect Pair."

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., June 17—Hollywood's "perfect pair," Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond, began their married life a some secret spot today, after a wedding that shattered every movie colony record for excitement, extravagance and mob scenes.

They will have a Honolulu honeymoon, sailing June 26.

More than 15,000 persons massed around the fashionable Wilshire Methodist Episcopal Church last night when the ceremony took place. Three hours before the appointed time, automobiles checked every street for a mile around.

The jam delayed the bride-maids 40 minutes.

Inside the church, approximately 1,000 top-ranking, approximately 1,000 top-ranking, and celebrated film figures were getting restless.

Men began to saw their necks on stiff, formal collars as they craned around for some sign that the ceremony was to start. Women tapped gold-shod feet with impatience.

The guests, who packed every inch of the mammoth church, had time to see the decorations. Even Hollywood was awed.

There were nearly 1,000,000 roses. Six candelabra, each bearing seven slender tapers, burned in the chancel. The middle aisle, bounded by pink silk ribbon along the whole length, also was lined with seven candelas on a side.

It was the quiescence of formality, the very epitome of rigid correctness. Friends estimated it cost $25,000.

White-gloved ushers, Harold Lloyd, John Mack Brown, Allan Jones, Basil Rathbone, Warren Rock and Richard Hargreaves, escorted feminine guests to their places.

Nelson Eddy sang "I Love You Truly" as the bride's mother, Mrs. Anna MacDonald, took her place. The bridesmaids were Ginger Rogers, Fay Wray, Mrs. Richard Hargreaves, Mrs. Warren Rock, and Mrs. John Mack Brown.

Came the bride, 30, a year older than the bridegroom.

She wore flesh mousseline with a redingote, long, full sleeves, a bouquet of flowers. The skirt was full. Her veil was pink tulle. She wore a shell-shaped lace cap, carried a gold-embroidered pink satin prayer book.

Raymond, his corn-silk hair shining, smiled as she came near. He held out his arm. She gripped it firmly.

Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers, whose wedding is scheduled for this month, leaned forward in their seats.

It was a single-ring service. The Rev. Willis Martin officiated. As he intoned the Lord's Prayer, near the end, a dull roar from the thousands outside echoed in the church. The flash of photographers' glass flared against the stained-glass windows.

The bridal couple kissed, a medium-long kiss.

of fact, this question, insofar as it is an attempt to relate Canadian responsibilities to the external policy of Great Britain, has been a chronic source of political disturbance for the last half-century," he said.

Dirac started it and since then it had never been entirely absent from political speculation in Canada or Great Britain. The heart of the issue always was and is now—"Should Canada become an integrated part of a consolidated empire with a common foreign policy involving definite commitments with respect to defence preparations for war, and participation in war should it come?"

The United Kingdom has continued for ten years the requirement that renters of exhibitors of motion picture films must acquire or exhibit stated percentages of registered British films.

DAFOE SCORES GOVERNMENT'S FOREIGN POLICY

Liberal Editor Critical Of Attitude Toward Empire Obligations.

(By The Canadian Press)
KINGSTON, Ont., June 17—Preparations for defence and no commitments of any kind constitute a foreign policy which suits a very definite majority of the people of Canada—for the moment—in the opinion of John W. Dafeo, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, but the qualification, he says, is important.
