BEAUTY ARTS By LOIS LEEDS

Facial massage is needed to improve the circulation BEFORE APPLYING MAKE-UP. One of the beauty problems which seems to cause misery no little concern is just how to apply make-up and what care and preparation to give her skin before she applies her rouge and face powder.

Milady Beautiful By Lois Leeds DRY SKIN WITH ENLARGED PORES

A great many of my readers appear to be greatly distressed because their skin is inclined to be of the dry type and at the same time have a tendency toward enlarged pores and tiny blackheads forming about the chin, nose and mouth.

presses applied to the part affected is one of the very best remedies for a skin which is of the above type. It is possible to work a great improvement by a series of home treatments that I shall describe for you in today's beauty talk.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia. This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract.

Can Laws Be Passed That Will Keep Homes Intact? — Why a Wise Wife Lets Her Husband Have His Fling — May a Girl Go After Her Man?

Dear Miss Dix—I favor having a law passed that would make it a misdemeanor for a married man ever to step out with any other woman, married or single, except his wife, mother, daughter or sister, or for any married woman ever to accept any attentions from any man except her husband, father, son or brother.

Answer:

Anything that would stop the breaking up of homes would be a glorious thing, but, alas, you cannot legislate virtue into people.

Indeed, such is the contrariness of human nature that the more we fence it in with laws the more determined it is to break over them.

The only way to stop divorce is to keep men and women from wanting them, and the only laws that will help the situation are those that would prevent marriage taking place that are foredoomed to end in divorce.

It seems to me that we could do much to stop divorce, and to prevent the misery of broken-up homes and the tragedy of half-orphan children by passing laws that would require several days to elapse between the issuing of a marriage license and the performance of a marriage ceremony.

But the cure for divorce must come from within and not from law but love. Homes must be kept together not by force but by the desire of those who live within them to keep them intact.

Husbands and wives must realize that whether marriage is a success or a failure depends upon the intelligence, the unselfishness, the sense of duty that they bring to bear upon it.

No man falls out of love with his wife without reason. He wants to love her. It is to his advantage morally, financially and socially to go on loving her, but she disillusion him and kills his love by slovenliness or tactlessness or selfishness or peevishness or by some other fault.

Same way with a woman. She does not voluntarily cease to care for her husband. She is a thousandfold happier and more contented loving him than she is in loving some strange man, but when she wanders away from home in search of an affinity it is because her husband has slain her affection by neglect or coldness or lack of attention or stinginess or fault-finding.

We talk a lot about home-wreckers and love pirates and vamps breaking up homes and stealing the love of a husband or wife, but in reality it is always an inside job and the wife or husband was always accessory to the crime.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Before I met my husband he was very shy and took no interest in women. I encouraged him to snap out of himself and overcome his inferiority complex, and he has gone to the other extreme and become a phalanderer just because women and being admired by women are new experiences to him, and it tickles his vanity.

Am I right or should I ask him if he wants a divorce and let him have one if he desires it? I have no children and have my own money, so am not dependent on him.

You are a wise woman and you are taking exactly the right course in dealing with your husband. Just keep quiet and hold steady and play a waiting game and in a little while your husband will come back to you never to roam again.

Every good wife has to have a lot of the maternal love in her. She has to be able to look upon her husband's faults and vagaries as a mother looks upon the naughtiness of her little boy and to realize that he often doesn't mean to be bad or to hurt her, but he just had to follow the impulse of the moment and, above all, that he had to play hookey from school a little while, but he is glad enough to come back to her after he has had his little fling and he wants to be spanked and kissed and forgiven.

Not long ago a man said to me with tears in his voice: "Oh, Miss Dix, if our wives would only have a little more patience with us! I know we don't deserve it, but if they would only stick awhile longer how many tragedies they would save! Now I fell into the hands of a gold-digger, a girl young enough to be my daughter. I was flattered by thinking that I was still a lady-killer and could win the heart of a pretty young girl and she kept jolly-ing me along and telling me my wife was too old for me and didn't understand me, etc., until finally I broke up my home and divorced my wife and married her.

"I hadn't been married a month before I bitterly regretted it, before I knew I didn't care anything for this girl and the only woman I loved was my wife and before I knew that all the girl wanted of me was my money. I am the most miserable man in the world, and when I see a happy, middle-aged

"And I often think that if only my wife had had patience enough to wait for my infatuation to be over, as it soon would have been, how happy we might have been for the balance of our lives and how grateful I would have been to her for saving me."

That story, which is a true one, answers your question better than I can. DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—Why is it proper for a young man to go after the girl he wants and improper for the girl to go after the boy she wants? BETTY.

It isn't improper in either case. The only difference is that convention permits the boy to go after the girl openly, while the girl has to camouflage the love chase. But she generally gets her man just the same. DOROTHY DIX.

Bridesmaids' frocks were never more charming, and this year's bridesmaids will have costumes which they can wear happily to garden parties all summer long. Embroidered organdie is the newest favorite in high-waisted, bouffant dresses. One such has a delicate tracery of blue on white. There is much plain organdie too, and the usual quantities of chiffon, net, tulle and mousseline de sole. Originality in color combinations distinguishes many June wedding parties. There is a fancy for the all-white wedding group, and, in distinct contrast to that, a liking for colors stronger than the customary soft pastels. Chiffon frocks worn by the bridesmaids at a garden wedding are made in a peach tone so intense as to verge on orange, and accom-

Etiquette By Roberts Lee

Q. Is it wrong for a girl to accept an expensive gift from a young man who has been calling on her for some time?

A. She should never accept an expensive gift unless engaged.

Q. What two colors should be avoided by a very shallow person, when buying dresses?

A. A pale blue or an apple green. Q. Should one ever bring books to the table? A. No; it is not mannersly.

A Morning Smile

An illusionist performing in a Northern town put a woman into a box from which there was no apparent outlet, and shut the lid. When he opened it again there was nothing inside but a couple of rabbits. After the performance a Scotsman went to the illusionist and asked him if he could perform the same trick if his (the Scotsman's) wife were to get into the box. "Why yes," answered the illusionist. "But are you anxious to get rid of your wife?" "Weel," answered the Scot, "it's no sae much that, but wee Willie got me tae promise him twa rabbits for his birthday!"
