Says No Price Increase For Iron, Steel Scrap

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—(CP)—Because normal flow of iron and steel scrap has slowed due to rumors of anticipated price increases, the Prices Board today announced that no immediate adjustment in the price of either cast iron or steel scrap is contemplated.

Although some slowing-up in the flow of scrap was due to weather, Board officials said, this has been accentuated by these rumors which were probably due to recent increases permitted in the price of non-ferrous metals.

GAVE FINE SHOWING
Members of the 16 Farm Forums were pleased to have with them on Monday night, February 3, Mr. John Martin of the Prince Edward Island Libraries who showed films on certain phases of agriculture. Accompanying Mr. Martin were: Mr. Fred Cannon, an Entomologist and Mr. Lorne Calbeck, an agricultural scientist, each of the Experimental Farm, Charlottetown, who gave interesting talks concerning the growing of potatoes.

ABLE DEBATERS—Areligh Hillman of Sydney, N. S., and Chester Macdonald of Summerside, P. E. I., were successful in rebutting the arguments of their opponents, Clarence Christie of St. Peter's, N.S., and Albert Somers of St. Quentin, N.B., in an inter-mural debate at Mount Allison. The resolution "The Semester System should be continued at Mount Allison next year" was a timely topic and created considerable interest among the students.

H. BROWN WEDS IDA FARQUHARSON—Spring flowers decorated St. George's United Church, Toronto, for the marriage on St. Valentine's Day, of Miss Ida Isabel Farquharson, daughter of Mrs. Farquharson of this city, and the late Percy A. Farquharson, Charlottetown, P. E. I., to Mr. Harold Everett Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Brown of Winnipeg. Rev. Dr. Willard Browning conducted the ceremony and Miss Lena McIure sang "The Sign of the Cross" and "The Sign of the Cross". Mr. H. Atack was at the organ. Ft. Lt. Robert Farquharson, in R. C. A. F. uniform, gave his sister in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory tulle made with fitted bodice, low neckline and a full skirt falling into a circular train. Her finger-tip veil was held by a halo of seed pearls and her bouquet was of orchids, white lilies and pink roses. Mrs. Douglas Farquharson was matron of honor in pink net over satin with chapelet of pink roses. Mr. Robert McGill, Winnipeg, was his cousin's groomsmen. Ushers were the bride's brothers, George and Gordon Farquharson. Following a reception at Glenview, where the bride's mother resided, in a Laurentian blue lace gown with becoming black hat, Mr. and Mrs. Brown left for Limbost for a honeymoon. They will reside in Toronto—Toronto Globe and Mail.

SOURIS C. W. L.—The regular monthly meeting of the Souris Sub-division Catholic Women's League was held in St. Mary's Convent on Tuesday evening, February 11th, with a large attendance of members. The President Mrs. Fred Mulally presided. The meeting opened with the league prayer by Father Murnaghan. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by the Secretary Mrs. Art Macdonald. She also read a letter from the Diocesan President, Mrs. Trainor, in which she urged all women of the parish to become members of the League. She also discussed the forming of a Study Club during Lent and a Conventor was appointed. The treasurer Mrs. St. Clair Paquet read a very encouraging financial report. A winning ticket in the Souris Hospital lottery was drawn helping to swell the League funds by one hundred dollars. The forming of a Girl Guide Group was discussed. Leaders to be appointed to go to Charlottetown for instructions. Letters of thanks were received from the Sisters of St. Mary's Convent, Souris, Mr. Ernest McIure and Mrs. Isaac Cheverie, Charlottetown. The sick visiting committee reported gifts of fruit sent to the sick and shut-ins during the Christmas season. No further business the meeting closed with prayer.

HAMPTON W. M. S.—Hampton W. M. S. held the February meeting at the home of Mrs. Clayton Morrison. The President, Mrs. John Rogerson, assisted by Miss Doris Myers, Miss Myrtle Inman, Mrs. Henry Peterson, Mrs. Dan Dart and Mrs. Jackson gave an inspiring devotional period. While the business was being conducted the different secretaries had interesting reports and plans were discussed to begin work on a quilt or quilts for the Labrador Box of 1947. Mrs. Wm. MacParlane, Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Morrison were appointed to take charge of the many cards, needles, thread, etc., which were brought to this meeting to be forwarded to the Trinidad Mission where such gifts are very warmly received. Roll call was answered by fourteen members and several visitors were very cordially welcomed. Plans were completed for participation in the Prayer Service to be held in Hampton Church, Bonshaw, DeSable, Victoria and Hampton meet together to observe this great international supplication. An excellent report of the Island Presbytery was given by Mrs. Mark Cameron. Mr. Jackson then closed the meeting with prayer. After the meeting a social period was enjoyed during which luncheon was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Earle Calbeck and Miss Mary Morrison. The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mark Cameron. Study on India in charge of Mrs. Clayton Morrison.

Lenten Meditations

From The Times, London

A MODERN LENT

Today brings the return of Lent, the season set apart by long traditional "fasting and repentance." In present circumstances, austerity in the matter of food is enforced by a authority other than ecclesiastical, and the most progressive conscience need not trouble itself further over this Lenten duty. But the duty of repentance when that word is interpreted rightly, remains as important as ever, and can only be fulfilled by individual effort. The Lenten season has in some ways changed significance from that which it had for our forefathers. With them the use of melancholy and penitence in public professions of contrition, attendance at special services, and the chanting of psalms and other mental hymns. No doubt such observance brought some proportion to those who used it, but for the most part it must be applied to the average man or woman of today.

For them the essential part of "keeping Lent," the preliminary to the "repentance" which Lent demanded, was a thorough and candid self-examination, a study of his soul and of its present relation to God. As a rule the thoughtful person, however unworldly, a Martha-like carefulness over many things, is apt to take his spiritual health for granted. He assumes it to be, more or less, what it has been for many years, strength or new weakness. Up to nothing can be more mistaken than the habit of the spiritual valetudinarian, fussing perpetually over the state of his soul. Yet an occasional scrutiny of it is a precaution not to neglect. It is for this Lent seems to provide the opportunity. At times there will be some obvious progress or lapse to register. More often, however, the average man tries honestly to see how he stands in relation with his religion, he will be inclined to reply that there has been no perceptible change. His beliefs, his standards of conduct, his habits seem to remain what they have been for many years past.

But judgment by this as his standard is a very dangerous one. It is his self-examination that reveals symptoms of this tendency to drift to a considerable extent it is due to the reaction after a period of mental and physical weariness, to the insistent claims upon thought and time.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER will be held in Cornwall Church Thursday evening at 7.30 p.m. Mrs. (Rev.) A. E. Todd will give the address.

DURING THE SEASON of Lent we will sell baked beans from 4 to 6 Wednesday afternoons. Call 1103-J.

SERIOUS INJURY—The many friends of Mr. S. F. Tarbush will regret to learn that he fell on the street while returning to his home last Saturday night and is now in the P. E. I. Hospital with a broken leg.

RUSTICO CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE STUDY CLUB—On Wednesday evening, February 12, the Christian Doctrine study groups held a general meeting at their parish hall. The meeting opened by the Rev. Fr. Stella, D.M., and was under the presidency of Mr. Jean H. Dolan. The secretaries of each local group were called upon to give a report of their respective districts and they read very encouraging words. A great deal of work is being done and all seem to be doing their share. Reverend Father Filio, pastor, was then asked to answer questions brought in by different leaders and did so to the satisfaction of all. He also passed a few remarks and seemed quite pleased with the local secretaries' reports. The subject studied this year is "Catholic Action" and the speaker stressed the importance of putting the principles now being learned into practice so that each may do his duty as members of the Catholic Church. The remaining part of the evening was very agreeably spent as some members of each group furnished entertainment of some kind to form a varied concert. The program was enjoyed by all and furthermore it helped the young people develop their talents which are certainly by no means inferior. The local Christian doctrine meeting will be held again weekly for the remaining part of the winter.

DOWNE-DUNNNG WEDDING
The Salvation Army Citadel was crowded to capacity on Wednesday, Jan. 29th, 1947 when Roma Warburton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Downe, Charlottetown was united in marriage to Joseph Edwardson, son of Mr. Frank Dunnington and the late Mrs. Dunnington of Charlottetown.

Entering the citadel on the arm of her father the bride looked lovely in a floor length gown of white moire with train and sweetheart neckline, her floor length veil was arranged in crown effect she carried a lovely bouquet of red roses.

Miss Yelda Dunnington, sister of the groom as bridesmaid, wore mauve sheer with matching mitts and shoulder length veil. She carried white carnations. Miss Minnie Downe, sister of the bride as bridesmaid wore pale blue sheer with mitts and shoulder veil and carried pink carnations.

The junior bridesmaids were Miss Marjorie Gray and Miss Marjorie West, dressed in white and blue taffeta with matching gloves, they wore silver caps and carried bouquets of mixed flowers.

Mrs. Louis Diggs-Price, mother of the groom as matron of honor, wore white sheer with shoulder veil and carried a bouquet of yellow daffodils. The little flower girls, Marjorie Downe and Fernie Herman, brides of the bride were charming in pink and blue floor length dresses with bonnets to match, they carried pink baskets filled with lovely flowers.

The groom was ably supported by Mr. Edward Downe, brother of the bride.

The two ushers, Mr. James Dunnington and Mr. Russell Downe led the bridal party to the altar which was beautiful in white and silver, the service was conducted in soft candle light, an impressive double ring service was then performed by the clergyman Major Victor McLean. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Arthur Arsenault and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Louis Diggs-Price, groomed in blue taffeta with blue mitts and gold cap sang very sweetly "I Love You Truly". After the service the bridal party and their guests proceeded to the home of the bride's parents where the reception was held. Previous to her marriage the bride was tendered several showers by her girl friends. Among the gifts were a beautiful mantle clock from Crockett's Jewellery Store where the groom is a valued employee, a lovely lamp given by the staff of Prowse Bros, where the bride was employed and a substantial cheque from Mr. T. W. L. Prowse.

"Your art is in tune with the heartbeat of humanity," he suggested with intense seriousness. "You can laugh, Paul, and your friend Richardson can laugh. You look upon my books as driver?" "Don't you?" "Of course I don't!" she said angrily. "No, you wouldn't. You mean every word you write. Every best seller that was ever written had that same curious sincerity. But it doesn't alter the fact that it is driven, my dear Rebecca." "I'm not going to quarrel with you, Paul, although I can see that you are doing your best to annoy me. What do you mean exactly by drive?" "By drive I mean rubbish. You give false value to everything and very much overestimate the importance of love." "I may play a minor part in your life, but generally speaking, it doesn't. Besides, 200,000 people cannot be wrong, and if six people read every book of mine that is sold it comes to 200,000, and what about my flock?" she demanded. "Sorry, Rebecca, but I hadn't noticed it. Stand up. I can't see it if you sit in a heap like that. Rather nice. A lovely colour!" "Who is that woman over there facing the window?" she suddenly asked. "A woman I painted once in Paris," he said. She crossed to the picture but he remained sitting on the low seat by the door, quietly watching her. She was—he had never considered the matter before—thirty-five? Certainly not more than thirty-eight. "I don't like her," Rebecca said over her shoulder. "Cynical." "No, I don't think she is cynical. Few women are. It's a rather curious fact." "Slowly she turned and came back to the table: "She has very beautiful eyes." "Very," he agreed. "You must learn a great deal about women by painting them," she said thoughtfully. "You know, Paul, you intrigue me," she said as he lit her cigarette. "I thought that you writers had agreed not to use that word any more. What does it mean, by the way? I've often wondered." "To make one curious. Few people have that effect on me." "Or on me, Rebecca?" "Why haven't you married?" "I've never had time. You see, Rebecca, I've been a very busy man." "Nonsense. I'm certain that there's a romance at the back of your life! There's probably a good plot in it, too," she added as an afterthought. "Romance," he said, wistfully. "Shall I tell you the tale of my life, Rebecca?" "If I thought there would be a shred of truth in what you said I'd love you to. But I should like to know the story of that woman in the picture over there." "So would I. I fancy that it would be very interesting." "She was a model?" "No, no far that I painted her, yes." "You're in a most maddening mood, this afternoon. Quiescent! You accept everything I say. I've never known a man who 'uld be so rude so politely—not outside France, anyway. You haven't to me yet why you settled down here. You're not going to be married?" she asked sharply. "No," he said evenly. "Men of your age are capable of the most incredible folly," she said. (Continued on Page 8)
