(Special to The Guardian.) ST. JOHN, June 23.—The charges against Hon. J. K. Flemming and Hon. F. W. McLeod, in connection with the construction of the Valley Railway were taken up today by the Royal Commission which has been investigating the timber limit changes. One witness was on the stand all day and his evidence was largely technical in its nature. The witness was Burton M. The inquiry will continue in St. John tomorrow, and tomorrow evening will go to Fredericton there to take the evidence of contractors on the road. MURDER TRIAL AT YARMOUTH

(Special to The Guardian.) YARMOUTH, N. S., June 23.—The Supreme Court opened this morning the trial of the accused in the case of the murder of the accused's wife at Ohio on April 23rd. Hilton and his wife, on the night of April 21st, had some words in reference to the sale of a heifer which Mrs. Hilton claimed as her own. The row seemed to end there, but about midnight the accused came into his wife's room and jumped on her with both feet while she was in bed. He then went into the kitchen and the row was resumed, Hilton throwing a lighted lamp at his wife, inflicting a wound from which she died. A jury was empanelled and the grand jury found a true bill.

ANNUAL MEETING PROVINCIAL RIFLE ASS'N

As mentioned in yesterday's issue of the Guardian, the annual meeting of the Provincial Rifle Association of Prince Edward Island was held in the Police Court room, on Monday evening, when a good deal of routine business was considered. Colonel F. S. Moore, in presenting the "Fifty-third Annual Report of the Proceedings of the Provincial Rifle Association of Prince Edward Island for the year 1913", said that it was the best report of the Association that had ever been submitted. The sum of $1,333 had been distributed in prizes, in looking over the figures relating to the various matches he thought they would concede that a very great advance had been made in the rifle shooting. He thought that the scores made in some of the matches here would compare favorably with those of previous years. He referred particularly to the Prowse match. He thought that the Association could justly take credit to themselves for having encouraged shooting in the province, and the conditions attendant justified the existence of the Association. It was regrettable that with the splendid prize list offered last year the entries were not larger in number. He did not know what the reason was for this lack of interest. The reason had been suggested that the men at the local headquarters had become so expert that it was useless for anybody from the country districts to participate. He thought the question might be taken into consideration, whether they should handicap in some way those men who were putting up centuries and ninety-nines and such tall scores, so that those who were less adept with the rifle might be encouraged to come in and take part. He did not know whether this was practicable, but he put it to the meeting for their consideration, as it was in the interests of the shooting in the province that every inducement should be given for young shots to come in. The president of the year, of course, was the winning of the inter-provincial match. When in five years out of seven they had wrested the trophy from the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, he congratulated themselves. They were indebted to the riflemen who had practiced so assiduously to fit themselves for the event. They were also indebted to their Secretary-Treasurer for the very efficient manner in which he had reformed his duties. He would congratulate the Association on the record of the year. Most of the members commented on Colonel Moore's speech in regard to the fewness of entries last year in spite of the splendid prizes offered. And it was the general opinion that the reason suggested by the Colonel was not exactly correct. The members thought that the fact that Ross rifles were not more accessible to the riflemen was responsible for the condition of affairs. A large percentage of the prizes in the Prowse match, for instance, they pointed out, had been won by men from the country, so that it was not right to say that they were not being encouraged to come in. That the attendance was not as large as it should be, was due to the fact that they did not get justice in regard to the use of Ross rifles. This opinion was expressed by the meeting on the whole. Colonel Stewart, however, concurring with the view the President took of the matter. Major Bartlett thought that to a large extent the fault was due to the riflemen of Prince Edward Island. There was no other association in Canada, he said, in which the entries were as cheap as they were in the case of this province's. There was no other association that to their riflemen gave anything like the amount that was given to the Prince Edward Island men taking into consideration the respective amounts which the various provinces received from the Dominion Government. There was

NATIONALISTS READY TO FIGHT HOME RULE

(Canadian Press.) LONDON, June 22.—John Redmond's begging letter to the President of the United Irish League of Philadelphia is the first open admission to the overseas friends and sympathizers that the Nationalists are ready to fight for Home Rule, should the proverbial slip between the cup and the lip appear. The Irish National Leader, having committed himself to the volunteer movement is anxious to find records as well as men, knowing that Carson is well provided with financial support from Scotch and other Unionists. The last developments in connection with the Irish Volunteers is inspiring great aggressiveness. This is made clear in a despatch from the correspondent of the Morning Post who says the tension in Londonderry is due to increasingly aggressive conduct on the part of the Nationalists. He says this cannot be exaggerated. Everyone is waiting an outbreak which will mean loss of life. He tells of a young farmer who arrived in the district on a Motor Cycle who was assailed by a crowd who believed him to be the despatch bearer of Carson's Volunteer Army. He had to be rescued by the Police. Today Lord Crewe will make a short statement in the House of Lords regarding the amending Bill to which Lansdowne is expected to reply. It is expected the Bill will be given its first reading without debate. The second reading will probably be fixed for a week later. As June 30 was originally fixed as the date for taking the Bill to the Upper House the Government is already obliged to meet the wishes of the Lords which proceeds deliberately.

THE MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN FOR MEN

There was a large attendance in St. James Hall yesterday afternoon, to partake of supper and to listen to the addresses of the visiting representatives of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. His Honour Lieutenant-Governor Rogers introduced the speakers. He said that the meeting represented at least four Christian denominations in this city. They should all recognize the necessity for the missionary movement, for it provided for the education and Christian instruction of the very diverse classes of people that came to the country from foreign lands. He hoped that the visit of the speakers would have a lasting impression on the minds of the people of the province. Rev. R. M. Kamilton, Secretary of the Presbyterian Movement, gave an excellent address on the work of the missionary body in foreign lands. He said that they were apt to look upon the great commercial enterprises in the world as the big things, and they were apt to look upon the religious phase of life as a minor thing. Religion was very often assigned a very inconspicuous place in their lives. The missionary movement, he said, was a big subject. It had been said by some that the curse of life was its littleness, and this was particularly true in so far as religious life was concerned. The little things they had attempted to do and the little way in which they had attempted big things, and so they had not accomplished things that they ought to have accomplished if they had gone about them in a bigger and better way. They had before them the greatest enterprise in the world, the greatest organization in the world, and that was the evangelization of the world. All business enterprises sank into insignificance alongside it. The missionary movement was the biggest work any man could identify himself with, and they had need to keep this thought before them in order to give to that work the dignity it ought to carry with it. It depended upon their point of view what they were going to attempt to accomplish. They had big things in Canada, they had a tremendous country which was only part of the Empire on which the sun never sets, and that Empire had always been characterized by men of large enterprise. Some of the greatest enterprises that had ever been attempted by British men had in them the very genius of missionary movement and had paved the way for missionary achievement. Transportation facilities were eliminating distance and were bringing the various parts of the world into communion with one another. People were not so isolated, and nations who before thought it wise to exclude the world were opening their doors to civilization. They had discovered a people, but what were they going to do with them? Were they going to use them simply for the purpose of trade and commerce? Were they going to forget that the most important thing in the world was not its material wealth but the human beings who were in it? Were they going to forget that the most important thing in the human was the spiritual and religious? It was their duty and responsibility to give them the very best of every thing they had. The very greatest things they had done were unconsciously missionary enterprises and this ought to show the importance of the work and make them feel more keenly their duty and obligations. The speaker dealt with the importance of the English language in missionary work. English was becoming more and more universal, Germany herself admitting that ultimately the English must have supremacy so far as language was concerned. The United States, it was stated, made nine million dollars per day. In Canada the income per head, (comparatively) was even larger. Where was all the money going to? In Edmonton the cost of education was less per year than the amount that they found it way into theatres, the sum of $700,000 being spent annually in amusements. They were not doing the big things that they should. The only message there was for the man who was "down and out" was the message of the Man Christ. Some one had said he would sooner save a million souls than make a million dollars. The biggest job in the world was the minister's. They should all get behind the minister and brace him up to his task and let him feel that it was no trivial job he had, but a mighty enterprise. They should put up their standard; they should lift the mark that they were trying to reach, lift it higher every year. Mr. D. M. Ross, Secretary of the Anglican Movement, also gave an address. He said he did not know there was such a nice place as Prince Edward Island. He had thought that Ontario was splendid, but when he went back he would tell them that Ontario was not quite the whole of it (Cheers). Mr. Ross spoke on the great progress which was being made in the progress which was being made in 1807 and laboured for seven years without a single convert. There might be men who would say that a missionary followed his calling because he could not get a better job. But it took manhood, real, strong manhood, to work seven years in a heathen country amid equal and vice, away from friends and comfort. In 1834 Morrison gained one convert, and in 1831 with the aid of some other missionaries, he had converted three persons; and in 1830 there were one hundred thousand! Then the Boxer Rebellion occurred, when men were tortured and persecuted because they would not renounce their religious faith, because they would not trample on two sticks placed crosswise, because they would not step on a piece of paper on which the name of their Lord and Saviour had been written. That excellent condition was the great result of missionary work. Such work needed manhood, the very best manhood. Rev. J. W. Howe, of the Methodist Mission in Japan, gave an account of the work that is being carried on there and quoted statistics to show the progress that is being made. Mr. H. K. Caskey, General Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement was the last speaker. Mr. Caskey is a brilliant, vivacious speaker, and in the course of his address made several humorous anecdotes in illustration of his remarks. He read a letter which a friend of his in Japan had written him, showing the great extent to which the English language was used in that country. The letter stated that English confronted one on every side. At the railway station the name of the place was printed in Japanese and English; and interesting and amusing signs in English adorned the public places; such signs as: "Purs made out of your skins or muzzled or led by a string or tied at home." (Laughter). After the addresses of the visitors had been delivered, a resolution that the members of the various churches would undertake, as early as conveniently possible, an individual canvass in behalf of the movement was put to the vote and unanimously great importance of the missionary movement.

FEW DAYS REMAIN FOR EXTRA VOTES IN THE GUARDIAN'S GREAT PRIZE CONTEST

Hustlers Still Have a Chance to Come Under the Wire First in the Great Race for the Big Cash Prize of $800.00. Make the Final Effort and Be the Lucky Winner

A few days more and your chance to get extra votes has gone. Do you think that you have enough votes to win the prize you intended winning when you entered the struggle a few weeks ago? Your friends have been watching you in this race. Many have been very much interested in your welfare. Can you look them in the face and tell them that you have done your best, and if you find that you are not the winner of one of the larger prizes, say to them that you could not help it? Don't blame anyone but yourself if you are not the winner of the Grand Prize. The candidate that wins this beautiful prize has had to travel the same path as you. There have been no favorites in this campaign, and whoever the lucky one may be to receive the $800 in gold, he or she will have won it honestly and deserves a great deal of credit. This has been a long and hard race. Many have dropped by the wayside. Others have not done their best. But the ones that stick to the end and come out victorious are people that have mastered the greatest enterprise of its kind that has ever presented itself in this part of Canada. DREAMER. Remember that it is the busy people that do things in this world. No dreamer ever had a look-in for anything that was worth while. The dreamer spends his time thinking how easily he can do this or that, and by the time he has made up his mind the easiest way to accomplish a certain thing the opportunity has gone. The world likes people that do things, not think and talk about them. SATURDAY AT 8 P. M. That is the end of the last big epoch in the history of The Guardian's great prize contest. That is your last chance to receive extra votes. Not one minute will be given candidates after 8 p. m. Saturday. All candidates must have their subscriptions in by that time to receive the extra votes. The race is very close, and it is up to you to have enough subscriptions by that time

INVESTIGATING EMPRESS DISASTER

Evidence of Diver Who Lost His Life While Examining Wreck Placed Before the Commission. Exact Position of Wreck Shown for First Time.

(Canadian Press.) QUEBEC, June 23.—The result of the investigations of Edward Cossaboon, the New York diver who sacrificed his life to determine the present position of the Empress of Ireland, was laid before the Dominion Commission on inquiry today by George W. Weatherspoon, who was dressed in deep mourning out of respect to his dead comrade who died as a result of a fall down the slippery side of the Empress while attempting to place a mooring line on her. He told the diver's exploits in simple but dramatic carefulness. His evidence shows for the first time the exact position of the wreck which is lying pointing northeast with her rigging pointing toward the shore. C. S. Haight, Counsel for the Stordstad, claimed this heading agreed substantially with the statements of the Stordstad officers as to the pointing of the ship when she ran across her bows. Mr. Aspinall K. C., acting for the C. P. R. drew statements from Weatherspoon that the current at the bottom of the river was not the same as at the top and may have changed the position of the sunken vessel. Mr. Haight asked Captain Walsh, Marine Superintendent of the C. P. R. a number of suggestive questions as to the chief qualifications an officer must possess to secure promotion in the Marine Service of the company. He seemed to hint that a pilot to make rapid voyages was the chief test. Captain Walsh denied this and pointed out that careful instructions were given to captains not to take any risk.

INVESTIGATION AT SUMMERSIDE

(Special by Phone.) SUMMERSIDE, June 23.—At the Summerside Court House this morning the commission appointed to enquire into charges made by the Temperance Alliance against Stipendiary Wright and Prohibition Prosecutor Phillips of Prince County, was resumed. The evidence of Mr. W. E. Bentley, one of the Council that appeared in support of the Alliance's charges, was continued. He was cross-examined in some detail by Mr. Strong with regard to his and Mr. Bentley's position concerning the case. (Continued on page 4.)

PECULIAR CASE IN HIGH COURT

(Canadian Press.) OTTAWA, June 23.—Ernest Berube (formerly a messenger of the House of Commons and one time valet of Senator William Miller, made a statement in the High Court this morning that the greater part of his time while in attendance on the late Senator, was occupied in preventing gentleman from swimming in whiskey. I did my best to make him look as like a man as possible when he attended the Senate", said Berube. "I attended him each day but never received any salary for my services". Berube is defendant in an action brought against him by the Eastern Trust Company and Joseph Chisholm executors of the late Senator Miller, who are suing for payment of principal and interest and property on Bolton street. Berube executed a mortgage in favour of Miller for $1,000 on the understanding that he gave his services for the interest and principal to be cancelled when Miller died. Judgment was reserved.

DOES NOT WANT ULSTER EXCLUDED

(Canadian Press.) LONDON, June 23.—Introducing the amending Bill the Marquis of Crewe dealt much with existing difficulties in religious matters surrounding Ulster but while he admitted that some form of exclusion was necessary for those who deemed themselves affected by the Home Rule Bill he contended that the exclusion of the entire province of Ulster would involve great injustice.
