DR. KANNAWIN AT HARTSVILLE.—On Monday evening August 13th Rev. W. M. Kannawin, D. D., Secretary, of the Board of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies will speak in the Presbyterian Church, Hartsville at 7:30 p. m. All are cordially invited. The young people of Brookfield, Hunter River, Clyde River, Rose Valley and Bradabane are especially urged to be present to hear Dr. Kannawin's inspiring messages to the young.

MARSHFIELD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The service here on Sunday afternoon was conducted by Mr. Wiborn, of Princeton College, who has come to take the place of his friend, Mr. Hill, who was the victim of the recent drowning fatality at Alberton. Mr. Barrett, the student-in-charge, was fulfilling an engagement at Kensington. The special soloist was Mr. C. J. Gallagher who gave a very fine rendering of "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer." The Sacraments of the Lord's Supper and of Baptism will be celebrated next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock when the Moderator of the Session, Rev. W. Bruce Muir will conduct the service. The special soloist will be Miss Ina Muir. The preparatory service will be held on Friday night at half-past seven.

WEDDING BELLS.—A very pretty wedding took place at St. George's church on the morning of July 25, when Mr. Patrick Sanphy led to the altar Miss Laura Mae McDonald, one of the most popular young ladies of that vicinity. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. McDonald, parish priest. The bride looked charming in a gown of white satin with hat to match and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. She was attended by her sister, Rose, who wore powder blue with hat to match. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Ed Cairns. A dainty breakfast was served at the home of the bride to her immediate friends, including Rev. J. C. McDonald and Rev. Father McElihan, after which the bridal party motored to the city, where they had dinner at the Queen Hotel. In the evening they returned to the home of the groom in St. Teresa's where a beautiful supper was served to upwards of two hundred guests. The remainder of the evening was spent in music and dancing. The presents received were numerous and costly including linen, cut glass, silver, china and several substantial cheques, testifying to the popularity of the young couple. Their many friends wish Mr. and Mrs. Sanphy a happy journey through life.

Drama At Ganges Ghat

(By British United Press) LONDON, August 13.—We do not pretend to know if there be any survival after this life is finished, but, if so, and if God be just and merciful in the sense that we very imperfectly understand justice and mercy, then such of these ten men as survive their earthly punishment may well go on humble pilgrimage to Sampati's flower-decked shrine, and with ashes on their heads, cast themselves down and invoke the gentle spirit to intercede with the Almighty to save their guilty souls from everlasting damnation. This astonishing passage occurs according to a story from Bombay in the judgment passed by Chief Justice Jerral and Justice Adams, of the Patna High Court, recently, the appeals of ten men convicted of assisting Kampati Kuer, a young Brahmin widow, to commit suicide by "suttee," that is by throwing herself on her husband's funeral pyre. The men had been sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from one year to ten years. The prosecution stated that the woman accompanied the body of her husband to the burning ghat, or cremation ground, on the banks of the Ganges, with the intention of committing suicide in accordance with the old Indian custom. A posse of police constables was mobilized on receipt of news of the impending sacrifice, and, led by an inspector, hurried to the ghat. They arrived on the scene to discover a crowd numbering about 5,000 persons round the body of the woman's husband. The inspector, in view of the dense throng, found the situation beyond his control.

The widow, as the police looked on helplessly, was then made to take a bath in the Ganges, and was supplied with articles of the toilet which, according to the old custom, a woman must use before she commits suttee.

The woman now seated herself on the funeral pyre of her husband, which was not alight, but she had scarcely taken her seat when her clothes suddenly burst into flames. This was due to the surreptitious ignition of an inflammable powder by those in charge of the suttee, in order to impress the simple-minded crowd.

The people, when they saw the unaccountable flames arising from the cold pyre, believed that a miracle had occurred and some began throwing pieces of firewood on her.

This increased the blaze, but it was not before she had been severely burned and was in extreme agony that the woman jumped from the flames into the river.

One of the ten men then handed over to her the body of her husband, which she attempted to drag along with her. The organizers including the prisoners then shouted to her to drown herself, for, they knew that, if she were rescued, the trick by which flames had been made to spring up would be exposed and they could not light the fire by this method again. The police constables endeavoured to rescue her in a boat, but their attempts were thwarted by the crowd. The woman later emerged of her own accord from the river. She was taken to hospital, but died after two days.

Hunter River And Vicinity

Mrs. Mugford, Charlottetown, has been visiting her brother, Mr. Fred Wayne, and relatives in Bungay, during the past week.

Miss Tillie Smith, of Boston, Mass., is spending a holiday with friends in Bungay.

STORING UP MEMORIES FOR DAYS TO COME

TORONTO, Aug. 13.—Nina Moore Jamieson writes of country life in Ontario as she sees it on a farm, by "diaries" appearing in the daily press. In years to come these sketches will be valuable historically, as they give vivid pictures, full of home detail. A few paragraphs from her story of an auction in a farm-house will illustrate how beautifully and yet with due regard for all the humors of the fray, she sees life in 1928. "My how that auctioneer could talk! He simply fascinated me. His piercing eyes singled out unerringly the bidders, timid as they might be. With terrific speed he dealt out picks and shovels, rakes and spades, his voice running in an incessant monotone until he secured a bid. Then he exhorted valiantly, so that I was positively ashamed of myself for declining to
