DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Schedule For Bridegrooms

Husband's Responsibility For Holding Wife's Affections

DEAR MISS DIX: We women get tired of being told now to hold our husbands. Isn't it up to the husband to hold his wife's affections as much as it is to the wife to keep her husband entertained and well taken care of?

I would like to say to every bridegroom: Don't throw away that with which you caught me as soon as we are married. Don't forget the little considerations and courtesies you extended me before we were married. Don't forget to tell me how nice I look nor how sweet I am. It carries a thrill at any time for any woman. Don't keep all your good clothes and good manners for company. Don't cease to be a lover just because you have become a husband. Women are just as sentimental and romantic as men and if husbands would remember this there wouldn't be so many wives looking abroad for men who understand them.

Don't go off on your holidays and Sundays, the only days I could be with you, and leave me with friends or by myself while you golf. The real reason I married you was because I loved you and wanted to be with you and thought that you felt the same way about me. Once in a while it is right and proper for you to have a day off, but not every Sunday and holiday.

Don't ever let me see that you regard me simply as some one to cook and wash and iron for you and make things comfortable. It is a knockout blow to a woman to find that she is nothing but a cook and a valet to her husband. Don't be one of those husbands who think that a wife should bear all the burden and hardships of rearing children alone. You may be tired when you get home from the office. So am I tired from washing, ironing, running after the children and entertaining them. And evening brings no change.

When you and the children keep the house torn up and I am doing

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

This was the day we came to Jamie's school picnic. Came by way of enjoying the occasion with our grand-sons and many another and as well because we had an important event of our own to celebrate. This latter apparently James is thinking of now, reviewing many scenes from the rather lengthy interval of time in the smoke wreaths that billow pearl-grey and, we confess, not ungraciously above the old armchair. Just what does he see of this time, since that day when we vowed our vows—for this is our Anniversary. Of that we may only conjecture.

He is looking upon wistful pictures we suppose, but James being James, there will appear as well, those that were fraught with anxiety. It is certain that to the screen of his mind would come though perhaps not first of all, the lines of a favorite horse or mare. Perhaps "Old Cleveland" of whose wise and amusing ways, he recounts in stories to our small ones. Or it could be "the old mare" that James would tell you was "the mother of all" much respected in memory, and her name woven into many a tale, her blood perpetuated in "our own mare" good friend of his and the family.

Flashing there to linger in a succession of scenes of it would be

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it obligatory that a woman wear black garments when attending a funeral?

A. No, this is not necessary unless she is to be with the bereaved family. Even in this case, it is not always done. She should, however, wear dark or subdued clothes.

Q. Is it all right for a man to use only his initials when signing social correspondence?

A. No; he should sign his full name.

Q. What is the proper way to eat corn on the cob at the table?

A. The cob is held by the end, in one hand only. This is one thing where neither the knife or the fork can be used.

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I mail out flowers and be assured that they will keep fresh for a few days?

A. Before packing for mailing, cut slits in raw potatoes and insert the stems of the flowers into these openings. The juice of the potato will nourish the flowers, and keep them fresh for several days.

Q. How can I relieve the pain of mosquito bites?

A. Spots on white kid shoes that cannot be removed with regular shoe dressing can be rubbed gently with very fine sandpaper.

Blankets

See that the blankets are thoroughly clean before storing them, then pack with moth balls for moths to enter. If properly done, this is just as effective as moth-proof bags.

Preventing Strain

Do not try to lift any heavy object with the back bent. Always crouch down and lift with a straight spine, making the weight come on the arms. A sprained back can be avoided in this way.

When Shampooing

Use Vaseline jelly or cold cream and grease the area around the eyes before the shampoo, and soap will be prevented from entering the eyes.

A. The sting in mosquito bites may be relieved by moistening soap, any ordinary kind, and rubbing on the affected spots.

Q. How can I remove spots from white kid shoes?

A. Spots on white kid shoes that cannot be removed with regular shoe dressing can be rubbed gently with very fine sandpaper.

HARMLESS CONDITION OFTEN TAKEN FOR CORONARY THROMBOSIS

A healthy, middle aged man felt a sudden pain under his breast bone, but thinking it was gas in upper part of stomach tried to forget about it. As the pain persisted for a couple of hours and did not move in any direction, he called up a friend who was a heart specialist and requested an immediate examination. After a careful examination including the use of the electrocardiograph, the doctor assured the patient that his pain was due to colic or cramp in the large intestine in the portion which passed across the abdomen from the right to the left side. The patient was naturally relieved and the pain passed away an hour later.

I believe all of us with a pain under breast bone lasting for hours would have suspected an attack of coronary thrombosis, but we are now learning that these are a number of conditions, most of them harmless, that can be taken for the acute heart attack, coronary thrombosis, in which a small blood vessel is closed or partly closed and so is not supplying the heart muscle itself with enough pure blood to supply the wall muscle of the heart.

In the "American Practitioner," Philadelphia, Dr. H. B. Sprague states that there are a number of conditions such as digestion of foods, disturbance of movements of the intestines, liver and stomach due to emotional upsets, that if not carefully investigated, may be mistaken for attacks of coronary thrombosis and the pain which is always present in acute heart attacks. As conditions mistaken for angina pectoris, he mentions, herpes zoster, (shingles) with pain occurring several months before the skin eruption appears; 2. cardiospasm, spasm of the tube (oesophagus) carrying food to stomach; 3. ulcer of the oesophagus; and 4. cardiac or heart neurosis when the individual fears he has heart disease and this fear actually causes the pain in chest.

In addition to these four common conditions that may be mistaken for coronary thrombosis, Dr. Sprague quotes the report of an outstanding heart specialist, Dr. H. B. Sprague, who has listed as coronary attacks and referred to heart specialists.

Despite the fact that there are so many conditions that may be mistaken for coronary thrombosis, if a pair occurs under the breast bone, see, call on or call in your family doctor at once. Don't take chances!

Hobbies Of Local Citizens

By Uncle Joe

Mrs. Colin MacLure, Brackley Point, derives a great deal of pleasure from pursuing her letter-writing hobby, which has occupied many of her spare moments for a long time.

Old friends, relatives who are abroad, sick folk, and those whose lives have been saddened by the loss of loved ones, all come in for a share of the almost countless letters that have come from the pen of this woman who never tires of dispensing comfort, sympathy and the milk of human kindness.

These thoughtful acts on the part of Brackley Point's elderly resident have resulted in much good, not only in her own community but in far-off places where her letters have found their way to bring comfort and hope to some forlorn and shipwrecked brother rowing hard against life's stream.

Now approaching the borderland of eighty, Mrs. Colin MacLure still enjoys sending out her little messages of hope, love and sympathy that have been so well appreciated wherever they go.

How often do most of us overlook the little things in life that mean so much to the friendly smile that costs us such little effort, the handshake—yes, and sometimes the little handout to a brother who may have fallen from grace. Or may be we've forgotten to visit that sick friend who's been a shut-in for a long, long time.

Remember, the giant oak once was a tiny acorn. The oceans, too, are made up of small streams and rivers, and the tiny grain of sand once was part of a great rocky mountain or maybe just a cluster of smaller stones.

The little things, well attended to, often mean the difference between success and failure, between being hungry and well fed, between being naked and clothed, between being happy and unhappy.

In rendering this little service to others, Mrs. MacLure long since has captured the art of making other folks happy as well as adding to her own happiness.

A widow, and the mother of seven children (one of whom died in the flower of early manhood), one would think that this kindly lady had reached that milestone in life when she would want to lay aside the burdens and take it easy. Not so. She belongs to a generation of rugged individuals, the last of whom soon will be for us little more than a memory.

But, in passing, most of them leave "footprints on the sands of time." They have made our Island a better place in which to live. So in this group I leave Brackley Point's letter-writing hobbyist, Mrs. Colin MacLure.

HASTY, rash and impetuous decisions or conduct could have an adverse effect on major objectives of most constructive and creative promise. Bad judgment, indecision, mental or emotional obscurity, could work for failure, tangled issues or disagreeable complications, strife, slander or dangers from over-acting, rash adventures or wild impulses. Use reason rather than turbulent feelings or reckless impulses. Business involvements could react in home or other personal misfortunes.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, may be disposed to rash, impetuous and ungoverned conduct, with an attempt to hammer difficult situation or lagging prospects into shape by main force or by impetuous smashing through obstructions or opposition by passion and excitement rather than studied judgment and personal inner resources.
