A Sweetheart At Thirty

THE STORY OF A WOMAN'S TRANSFORMATION

By Marion Rubincam

THE FAMILY ARGUMENT

Chapter 6

To most families, the announcement that the daughter wants to go to college is only a casual or an expected statement, but to ours it was a bombshell.

We were not a backwoods family. The "old Haines place" as they called our house, stood on the edge of a straggling little village called Henly Falls. There were perhaps a hundred families in the village itself, and a hundred more who lived in sight of it—that is in sight if one stood on the top of the big hill behind our house.

I threw a shawl around my shoulders after we were through the dishes and stepped out on the back porch for a breath of air. It was a clear night, with a bright moon, and I could see quite a long distance. Violet joined me and slid her arm around my waist.

"I've started something," Violet told me softly. "Mother is in there guessing they won't let me go. You might have thought I'd throw a brick the way they act. They must have known all along that I wanted to go to college."

"I don't see as three months' study will make much difference one way or the other," Jim said. "You've had all the lessons practically up to the end of the high school work."

"Not doing coming and summer cleaning," Esther remarked. "There's Laura—she likes to get married in a year."

"Why has Charlie spoken?" Jim began, but Esther interrupted. "Not yet, but he will. I know, and there's too much work here in this big house for me, even with Ed helping—with all the garden and outside work and chores to be done."

James came in and stood looking on from the doorway. No one paid any attention to him—poor fellow. Little attention was ever paid to him.

"I don't have to hire help, or else you would have to get another man, so I wouldn't have milking and garden work," Esther said. "There would be that expense besides the expense of the college."

"I don't see as three months' study will make much difference one way or the other," Jim said. "You've had all the lessons practically up to the end of the high school work."

"Not doing coming and summer cleaning," Esther remarked. "There's Laura—she likes to get married in a year."

CAPT. WILLIAMS OUT OF TROUBLE

"Since taking Tanlac I have gained twenty four pounds and am feeling as fine as I ever did," said Captain William Williams, who has resided at Ostrea Lake, N. S., all his life.

"For nearly two years I suffered from stomach trouble so bad I had forgot what it was to enjoy a meal. My appetite dwindled to almost nothing and what little I did eat soured and seemed like a heavy lump in the pit of my stomach. I was badly constipated and felt weak, worn out and good for nothing."

"Several of my friends told me what Tanlac had done for them and I tried it. It went straight to my trouble and now my stomach is in fine shape. I take pleasure in recommending Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists, course, and her board in town. And I won't let her go alone, that's final."

"I spoke up suddenly. 'I'll go with her then.' Here was the turning point—this sudden remark of mine—but I did not know then what a momentous thing it was. Great crisis often pass unnoted."

"Well you're old enough and plain enough to be a chaperon," Esther granted with her usual frankness. "But that would only make another pair of hands less and all the work to be done!"

"I'll do double work," offered James suddenly. "I won't be in school next winter, so you can give me all the outside work and you needn't get another hired man. Besides, I'll do heavy cleaning for evenings when the farm work's over."

"James graduates in June too," Violet put in, hoping this reminder would help her gain her point. But his results were unexpected. Jim had not yet got over his supper time anger. He swung around on James.

"Oh he does, does he," he growled. "He starts ploughing the North field Monday, and after that I've enough to keep him busy."

"But father, I graduate then!" James burst out. "It's only three months, and I'll help all I can after school hours and study evenings."

"I can use your time from nine to three," Jim said. That's when you'd be in school, and most likely reading instead of studying and—way," he added unreasonably.

"But father," James' face had gone white again, and Violet's eyes were overflowing with sympathy.

"I don't see as three months' study will make much difference one way or the other," Jim said. "You've had all the lessons practically up to the end of the high school work."

"Not doing coming and summer cleaning," Esther remarked. "There's Laura—she likes to get married in a year."

Two Bathers Lost Lives at Toronto

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—Lloyd Wiggins, aged 18, and Wilfred Ward, aged 28, both of Toronto, lost their lives by drowning today, the former in the Humber River and the latter at Sunnyside Bathing Beach, while Harvey Lawson, who got beyond his depth was rescued in the lake off Kew Beach Gardens, Corners Crawford and McConnell investigated the drowning fatalities and there will be no inquest. The drowning fatalities occurred in the presence of large crowds of bathers. Ward's disappearance was so sudden that, although surrounded by bathers, no one noticed him, and it was not until a friend turned round to look for him that his absence was noted. Acute dilation of the heart caused by over-exertion, was the cause of Ward's sudden ending in the water.

Ward who was bathing at Sunnyside Beach, had just finished his lunch, accompanied by Mrs Goyer, of Belleville, upon leaving the locker pavilion, he made a race for the water. Miss Goyer was in front and was wading out, thinking that Ward was immediately behind. The young woman turned to speak to Ward, only to find that he was not near her. Wading about amongst the crowd, Miss Goyer failed to locate him and notified the lifeguards that he was apparently missing. Ward, who was a good swimmer, had apparently sunk without outcry. He had not been in the water more than two minutes when his heart failed him. Going into the water so soon after his lunch was said to be responsible for his untimely end.

WET WEATHER PLAYS HAVOC WITH ENGLISH HAY CROP

LONDON, Aug. 10.—July, which has been unusually wet, played havoc with the hay crop in most of England. There has also been a lamentable deficiency in the amount of sunshine, but farmers, however, are not unduly pessimistic concerning the harvests, considerable delay in harvesting as a whole. Big Beach Crowd Was Disappointed

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Twelve good-looking young women, wearing crepe paper bathing suits, appeared yesterday afternoon on the beach at Wildwood, N. J. By jumping up and down on the outskirts of the crowd, it was possible to catch a glimpse of them now and then. But those who got there early and were in the centre of the throng said the young women looked quite charming. "Do you suppose they're going in with those flimsy things on?" was the whisper that pulsed through the assembled populace. Indeed they were, and they did. The surrounding mob separated just a little to give the twelve room to pass toward the surf, and then closed in thicker than ever. The twelve—who, by the way, were employees of a store in Philadelphia—tripped gayly to the water's edge. Paused there an instant and then deliberately walked into the water. The crowd stood with eyes popping out, wondering how soon it would begin to bluish. But into the surf the girls went, ankle high, knee high, waist high and then completely under. The beach throne waited for them to reappear. One head came up, then another, and— "Oh! There was a catch in it—the girls had on woollen suits under the paper."
