AMERICAN MODELS FOR THE WELL DRESSED LADY

Patons Ltd., who are noted for keeping abreast of the times, sprang a pleasant surprise yesterday when Mr. Newman representing the popular "Diantha Dresses" advertised so largely in the American magazines, gave a showing of the latest New York styles in afternoon, evening, and street dresses.

It was a happy thought on the firm's part to enable Charlottetown ladies to choose their gowns direct from styles and materials, so by their rich and beautiful in style and fitting that one stands lost in admiration. These lovely gowns can be ordered from Mr. Newman, measurements being taken on the slip-form system, and can be secured within ten days of order and, from the new measurement are entirely satisfactory and need little alteration as their Canadian factory at Toronto is noted for superior fit and workmanship. Patons Ltd. are now the selling agents for "Diantha Dresses" and will have a showing two or three times a year, while catalogues are forwarded through the firm, to their customers in the meantime.

Now that the tempo of war has been lifted society is resuming its entertainments and public functions necessitating dainty gowns which are already advertised for the near future.

Yesterday quite a number of ladies saw the dresses and not a few orders were promptly given while today's showing which is final will no doubt be widely attended as everyone is invited.

The street dresses appeal at once to the fastidious dresser the models shown being in velvets of black, green, while dark colors predominate other choice can also be made. Straight line effects are much worn and are artistically finished off in panel effects with black fringe, or artistically decorated with black military braid. Satin and cloth are also stylishly combined and all these models are seen extensively on New York streets.

In the semi-evening gowns the loveliest confections are shown in satins and silks with over dress of georgette, choice being given in all the popular shades. The neck is generally cut round with just a small collar of white to give a finishing touch, while the popular long sleeve has in several cases the new Bell cuff.

The models are all charmingly simple, the narrow silhouette effect giving a graceful appearance to all figures. Several styles have the full accordion plaited panel back and front, while others have a crush belt with bow tie at back. One lovely gown was of white satin, long clinging plants, with panel effect back and front of black and white striped crepe. This was finished off with long black silk braid. Other dresses in amethyst Georgette over silk, flesh pink, blue and several styles with a contrasting trimming are certainly lovely.

In Misses dresses the showing is also extensive and the dainty little party dresses in delicate shades must be seen as pen fails to describe their loveliness.

For the lady in mourning the "Victory Dress" with its dainty softness and rich clinging folds of black crepe is one of the nicest models shown.

TRAVELING SALESMAN

Tells How He Regained Strength, Ambition and Vim

Atlantic, Iowa.—"I am a travelling salesman and was run-down, worn out, no appetite and no ambition my druggist told me Vinol was what I needed and within a few days after taking it I commenced to gain and I built up my health and strength so every spring and fall I take it to build me up and it keeps me in splendid condition."—W. E. Brockelby.

The reason we guarantee Vinol is because it is a constitutional remedy containing beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphate the most successful tonics known.

E. A. Foster, Charlottetown. Vinol is sold in Montague by H. J. Mabon and at the best drug store in every town and city in the country.

Vladivostok Has Become

One of the Great Centres

Of the Plans of the Allies

THE great Russian port of Vladivostok is now one of the great centres for the Allied armies. At the end of March commanders of the British and Japanese ships in the port found it necessary to land armed forces to protect the interests of their nationals and to preserve order because the Bolshevik element had made a raid on a Japanese business establishment and attacked other foreign nationals in the streets. The landing force was requested to protect certain thoroughfares and wharves by the consular body, which was afraid that an attempt might be made to blow up or burn the vast quantity of stores which had been sent by the Allied Governments to Russia. Before the downfall of the Czar, however, the Siberian railway was not able to handle the vast quantity of military supplies which ship after ship was dumping on the wharves. The stores were worth many millions of dollars and it was principally to save these from destruction that the British and Japanese landed marines.

Before the landing of these forces robbery and holdups in broad daylight were of common occurrence, and in February of this year the largest hotel in the town was raided by a band of ruffians, who systematically went through the occupant of each room and took from him all his valuables. It is estimated that the amount of money secured in this haul was $15,000. The revolution in 1905 and for some time after, when robbery, often with violence, was a daily occurrence. The advent of the foreign forces proclaimed the death knell of acts of this kind and other disorders and in the areas where the foreign patrols operated, safety of life and property were immediately obtained.

Although Vladivostok is young it is a town of wonderful architecture. The Government offices and buildings, churches, barracks and residential houses are of solid structure, and these in conjunction with the imposing business establishments give Vladivostok a very imposing appearance. Although the streets are broad and mapped out on a broad and comprehensive plan, many of the streets off the main thoroughfare still have wooden sidewalks, and gutters are full of filth and garbage. Great numbers of beggars are constantly met with.

Like most other Russian far eastern cities, Vladivostok is what can be termed a "free city," that is to say every one does pretty well as he likes. The town does not appear to wake up until midnight. Then the cafe chantant artists do a roaring business, the houses devoted to this form of entertainment being very numerous, the restaurants, with their string bands, seldom closing before daylight. The gaiety, freedom and lack of care are typically Russian, even in these hard times. There may be an uprising or a riot at 8 p.m., but at midnight the town will be full of life; champagne will be tossed off with a recklessness astounding to the foreigner, who knows the high prices ruling for this beverage.

Despite all this glare and glitter of night life there is much poverty in Vladivostok. A large portion of the male population of the city was called to the colors in 1914. The separation allowance was of the smallest. Most of the Vladivostok contingent were killed in the earlier stages of the war; those returning being mostly cripples and men unfit for hard manual labor. The pensions which the wounded men were to receive, and the allowances to the wives and families of the men killed have been stopped since the Bolsheviks took over the government, thus throwing a large portion of the population on the charity of their more wealthy brethren.

The cost of commodities in Vladivostok has gone up many times over since the outbreak of war and many things are unobtainable. The value of the rouble is at the present time about 13 cents Mexican (6 1/2 cents); at the outbreak of war it stood at $1.05 Mexican (52 cents). Many imports have to be paid for on a gold basis.

As in Russia proper, the Bolsheviks demanded an increase of wages for the workers and as the owners of factories could not make any profit under such circumstances they preferred that their factories should be idle. The stoppage of imports into Russia over the Siberian line killed the port's shipping business and the thousands of stevedores and dock hands were thrown out of employment.

Despite all this, Vladivostok is an interesting place. It is probably the nearest blending of east and west in the world. The community is a cosmopolitan one to a degree, including a large population of Koreans, thousands of Japanese and Chinese, Gilyaks from Primamorskaya, Orochis, from the maritime provinces, representatives of the Goldi, Mangun and Semager tribes, with a sprinkling of Orochons, Manyars, Biars and Daurians. The strange thing is every one seems to get on with the other and to overlook each other's peculiarities. The Russians appear to have a peculiar gift for getting on with Asiatics.

On the other side of the shield one can point to the excellent attendance at the Vladivostok opera houses, where music of the highest class is produced. European stars have appeared on the stage both in vocal and instrumental numbers. This love of the artistic is another startling phase of the Russian, but even in his art the Russian has a barbaric and reckless touch.

Address and Presentation

Shortly before the departure of Rev. R. P. Murray from Mt. Stewart a deputation of ladies from the Presbyterian Church waited upon him and on behalf of the congregation presented him with an address and purse. Rev. Mr. Murray although taken somewhat by surprise acknowledged both in suitable terms referring briefly to the many times he had been remembered in similar ways by the Mount Stewart Congregation.

Following was the address:— To the Rev. R. P. Murray, Mount Stewart.

Reverend and dear Sir, We the ladies representing the Presbyterian congregation of Mount Stewart, desire by this means, to express our sincere regret at your contemplated departure from Mount Stewart to another field of labor, and that the ties and associations formed between pastor and people during the past nine years are about to be severed.

We desire also to place on record our keen appreciation of your work as our Minister since assuming charge of this congregation nine years ago, and assure you that we shall always cherish tender and pleasant recollections of the happy and cordial relations that have ever existed between us. By your unflinching courtesy, your genial and kindly disposition, and by your readiness and willingness at all times to devote your time and talents to the furtherance of every good work and activity, having for its object the welfare of the community and the uplifting and betterment of the people. You have endeared yourself to all classes and creeds who will sincerely regret your departure from amongst us.

As a small token of the esteem in which you are held by the people of Mount Stewart and adjacent districts, we beg you to accept this purse in kindly remembrance of us, and we trust and pray that in the new field to which you have been called, your labors may be abundantly blessed.

Signed, MRS. MONT, MACKAY, Secretary of Ladies Aid Society

Mt. Stewart, Oct. 22nd, 1918.

Peace Terms And the Election

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(British Wireless Service)—"One of the principal issues at the forthcoming general election will be the nature of the peace settlement. It will mean the settlement of the world. Premier Lloyd George made this announcement in an address to his liberal supporters on November 11. "What are the principles on which that settlement is to be effected?" he asked. "Are we to lapse back into the old national rivalries, animosities and competitive armaments, or are we to imitate the reign on earth of the Prince of Peace? Is it the duty of Liberalism to use its influence to ensure that it shall be a reign of peace."

There is a place for everything; but few people have access to the index.

It is foolish for a man to boast of being boss in his own house when his wife is present.

Brain Power

IN the brain is consumed one-fifth of all the blood in the human system. This goes to feed the nerve cells and to create the all-essential nerve force—whether you think or speak or move your hand, nerve force is consumed in that act. When any unusual demand is made on the brain, whether by excessive mental effort or as the result of mental worry and anxiety, still more blood and more nervous energy are used in the brain and other organs of the body are robbed of the nervous energy necessary for their proper working. This is why the thinker—the man who works with his brain, and who does not in these trying days—is most subject to nervous indigestion, nervous headache, sleeplessness and weak functioning of the vital organs such as the heart, stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. The human system is a bundle of nerves, and whether we realize it or not, our health depends to a very great extent on the condition of the nerves. There is always a big demand on the nervous system, and when this is increased by shock, or sorrow or any great mental worry or anxiety there is danger of a breakdown. At this trying time, when so many are suffering from nervous troubles of one kind or another, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is proving a blessing of untold value. This food cure is not like a stimulant, because it cures in Nature's way by restoring the depleted nerve cells, increasing the nervous energy and building up the system generally. When you feel tired out in mind and body, have brain fog and failing memory, and feel that you are losing your energy and vigor, it is time to turn to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of renewing mental and bodily vigor. If your experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is like that of the great majority of people who use it you will soon feel the benefits in increased capacity—both mental and physical. You will feel that you have the reserve force necessary to withstand the strain of life's work and to ward off disease. It is only by building up nerve force that you can hope to counteract the debilitating influence of mental worry and anxiety. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so universally used that you can obtain it from any dealer at 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, or from Edmanston Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of the genuine.
