in the million, co'umm! On the latter phrase of this subject an American magazine, published last month, has this to say:
"We hear much in these days about 'social justice.' The impulse for social betterment is strong, the demand for economic reorganization is loud, and this is well. But no other injustice in the land is comparable to that which enables ten thousand brewers and distillers to transfer a billion dollars annually from the pockets of the poor to their own bank accounts. No other social detriment would be so great as the change from 'moderate drinking' to total abstinence on the part of two million American laborers. It would mean higher wages, less sickness, better homes, larger savings, lower taxes, stronger churches. The curse of poverty, how vast! The injustice of monopoly, how evident! But the temperance advocate represents the most effective way of escape, not

Wants to Cure His Friends.
Everett L. Holland, a well-known Canadian, moved to the United States some time ago. The change of climate brought on a serious and painful illness, which three physicians said was stone in the kidneys, but were unable to relieve his terrible suffering.
In his agony, Mr Holland thought of an old and reliable remedy which had a great reputation in his Canadian home—the well known Gin Pills. These Pills contain the medicinal properties of Juniper berries—whence their name—but are absolutely free of alcohol. Mr Holland wrote a former neighbor for a supply of these Pills, and on March 20th last, in a letter to the National Drug & Chemical Co., said "I am well." He is now anxious to have these pills put on sale in the United States in order to cure his new friends of kidney and bladder troubles. Gin Pills are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. Samples sent free if you write National Drug & Chemical Co., Ltd., (Dept. P. E.), Toronto.

simply from poverty to things, but from poverty of life. We fight the deadliest monopoly—the liquor traffic that not only strips a man of his wages, but also robs him of home and heaven."

The worst superstitions of all ages are those connected with strong drink, but they are rapidly fading. Innumerable laboratories scientists are demonstrating that even in moderation strong drink permanently slows thought, dulls perception, and weakens the will, making the drinker a less efficient student and a less competent workman. They mark alcohol a deadly poison. The great captains of industry, leaders of armies, teachers of youth, medical experts, insurance managers, trainers of athletes, and those who would climb to the frozen pole, prohibit its use. "The suppression of the drink habit by education and the destruction of the liquor traffic by legislation," says Dr. Joseph H. Crooker, "constitute the most effective 'Applied Christianity.' The same authority says: 'Laws against the Whiskey Trust, which corrupts everything human and blights everything divine, foster life and protect liberty.'

Brother, we stand in good company. Our cause is one of benevolence—to destroy the destroyer of millions and to conquer the enemy of our race. The whole horizon is bright with promise. A hundred thousand Good Templars in Germany, where lawyers and doctors, professors and students are declaring for total abstinence, over two million employees in the United States and Canada under orders to avoid strong drink; millions of our young people in our schools taught and trained to abstain from liquors; in Sweden, 12,000 enthusiastic students pledged to total abstinence; in Denmark, the names of over half the adult population recently put on a petition for restrictive legislation; insurance companies and fraternal orders barring the users of alcoholic liquors; the drink bill of Great Britain decreased nearly $50,000,000 last year; the economists and scientists of France, Switzerland, Austria, and Hungary are loud in their warnings, some 1,500 periodicals throughout the world are exclusively devoted to the cause; magazines and newspapers are fast refusing liquor advertisements; no liquor allowed in working-men's clubs in Finland; in the British navy 25,000 total abstainers; forty per cent of the 60,000 Imperial troops in India are also total abstainers; in Russia (Continued on page 10).
