THE KEELEY CURE.

Portland, Me., May 4 1909.

Few if any intelligent and honest men will dispute the fact that the habitual use of intoxicating drink is the greatest, and most expensive evil of the 20th century, as it has been in the past. The time is fast approaching when no position of trust can be obtained or retained by the man who is daily under the influence of alcohol. And yet there are thousands of educated, and normally intelligent men who are thus handicapped the business and home and practically all of them are anxious to free themselves from this degrading slavery. Most of them have tried repeatedly to break their bonds, and failed. Why? The entire system of the habitual drinker, including his brain, is more or less saturated with alcohol. The effects upon the brain is to deaden and stupefy the mind, numb the moral sense, and greatly weaken the will. The nervous system, accustomed to excessive stimulation will act only under the stimulus. In the morning the habitue cannot write, can hardly do a simple sum until he has braced up with several drinks. Can he be expected to maintain successfully, and unaided, an incessant struggle for weeks, and months, when, if he takes no drink for several days he becomes more or less a nervous wreck, with a constant gnawing, craving for drink? He is a sick man. He needs help, but ordinary help will not suffice. That afforded by the Keeley Cure will, for the reason that Dr. Keeley devoted the greater part of his life to the study of this condition, and the perfecting of the best remedies for its cure. I have for several years investigated this treatment, noted the effects of its remedies, and questioned many whom it has cured; with the following conclusions. Will it guarantee a permanent cure? No. Will it guarantee that a graduate cannot go out once and take a drink, if he so will? No. What then will it do? It will in its course of treatment, eliminate the alcohol from the patient's system. It will afford a support to the brain and nervous system, that will enable him in from one to four days to cut off their supply of alcohol, with little or no suffering. In place of the the nightly alcoholic stupor, it will restore normal, healthy sleep. It will give him a normal and excellent appetite, increase his weight, often from ten to twenty pounds, in four weeks, and make him again a healthy and a free man, for about all else it will take away the craving for liquor which will never return, unless re-created by new indulgence. This is all that is needed by the man who really wants to be cured. Why then do relapses occur? Because there are men who don't want to be cured, but only to be temporarily soled, and finally, men who haven't sense enough to know that having once required the Keeley cure, they can never again indulge moderately in intoxicating liquors. Moderately? There is no safe moderation in liquor drinking, for physicians now know that the so called daily moderate drinker receives more lasting injury, and is more certain to acquire some form of fatal disease, than the man who drinks to excess once a month, and abstains during the intervals. There are many imitations of the Keeley Cure, but so far as I have been able to learn their results, they have amounted to very little more than a temporary sobering-up process. C. W. STOCKMAN, M. D.
