Bad Fires In Prince County

Three bad fires occurred yesterday in Prince County in which one house was totally destroyed and two others badly damaged. The first fire broke out shortly after ten a. m. at the home of Vernon MacLeod, merchant at Albany. When first noticed flames were coming through the roof. Friends and neighbours came to the assistance of Mr. MacLeod and saved the building. The property was one of the finest in the district and the beautiful oak floors were considerably damaged. There was some insurance.

The second blaze broke about noon at the residence of Earl Yeo, Lot 16. It is not known how the fire started but when first seen the roof was well alight. Willing neighbours lent assistance and the fire was finally put under control but not before the roof, attic, rooms and walls and part of the second storey were destroyed. Considerable damage was done to the rest of the building by fire and water. There was some insurance on the building.

The third fire occurred in Miscouche about 3 p.m. and also started in the attic, it is thought from a defective flue. The house owned by William Perry, was near the railway track and was soon well ablaze. There was a high wind blowing and but for the tremendous efforts of the men in the village and an abundance of water from the convent, two other properties only 30 feet away would have been burned. A call was put in to Linkletter road and several farmers there came hastily to assist. Pumping 45 gallons every minute, which was taken to the scene of the fire in trucks, a steady stream of water was kept playing on the adjacent buildings. As late as eight o'clock water was still being taken to the scene in case the smouldering ruins of the Perry house break out again into flames and endanger nearby buildings. There was a small insurance on the burned property.

Death Of Veteran Actor & Playwright

(A.P. by Guardian's Special Wire) HARTFORD, Conn., April 29—William Gillette, the Sherlock Holmes of the stage, died in Hartford Hospital today of pulmonary hemorrhage.
The veteran actor and playwright, who would have been 82 July 24, left no close relatives but a world of admirers mourned his passing.
In failing health for several months, the tall, powerfully-built actor-dramatist was removed to the hospital a few weeks ago from his isolated castle home, perched on a steep bluff overlooking the Connecticut River at nearby Hadlyme.
Since his last appearance on Broadway, in "Three Wise Fools" in 1935, he had spent his time reading, writing and tinkering with a miniature railroad at his castle, which he built in 1919.

Feet Troubles Him, Scadding Says

MONCTON, N. B., April 29 — "When I looked over the site of the cave-in of the mine at Moose River in which we were held prisoners for ten days and saw the vast depression in the earth, it is a good thing that neither Dr. Robertson nor myself had any knowledge of the extent of the cave-in or otherwise we would have given up hope", stated Alfred Scadding when passing through Moncton this afternoon on the Ocean Limited of the Canadian National Railways en route back to Toronto after attending a celebration among rescue miners at Stellarton, Nova Scotia, on the anniversary of their release from their underground prison. In the course of his visit to Stellarton, Scadding made a trip to Moose River.
Scadding's feet still bother him and he says that he has very little feeling in them at the present time, but is taking treatment for them which he hopes will be successful. All of his toes were amputated. The treatment consists in putting his feet alternately in hot and cold water. He says he is unable to distinguish between the hot and cold water but experiences a sort of "drawing down" feeling. From what the medical men tell him he said he expects to be able to walk around in another year without any difficulty. It was on Easter Sunday last year that the cave-in took place and the rescue was effected a year ago Friday last.
Scadding is planning to pay a return visit to Stellarton for July first.

HOLMAN'S SUMMERSIDE

"A Pleasant And Profitable Place To Shop"

Canada and the one to which probably the least thought is given when making up seeds mixtures. In 1922 a series of tests were laid down at the Experimental Farm, Nappan, N. S., to ascertain if possible, the best mixtures to use when seeding down areas for hay. Data are now available covering a twenty-year period. Different grasses were seeded alone and in various combinations with red clover, alsike, and other grasses. Towards the end of the test alfalfa was introduced into a few of the mixtures.

These tests have definitely shown that none of the grasses when seeded alone can produce the yields of hay that may be obtained from these same grasses when seeded in combination with either red clover, or with both.

Of the grasses, when seeded alone, timothy has been much more productive than meadow fescue, orchard grass or red top.

Of the different mixtures tested the following have given the highest yields:

Timothy (8); red clover (10)
Timothy (8); alsike clover (6)
Timothy (8); red clover (8);

alsike clover (2)
Timothy (8); red clover (5); alsike clover (5).

N. B. —Numbers in brackets refer to pounds of seed, per acre. From the yield data obtained in this test it would seem that red clover and alsike may be interchanged quite freely without seriously affecting yields. Alsike is more tolerant of wet and acid conditions and might largely replace red clover on soils of this type.

Insofar as alfalfa is concerned, we suggest adding 2 pounds per acre to any of the above mixtures on fields that are well drained and contain sufficient lime for its development, using only northern ground seed. Observations should then be made as to how it survives the winters. Alfalfa can be used to replace 2 pounds of the clovers. On low lying ground it is probably good insurance to substitute red top for part of the timothy, say 6 pounds of timothy and 2 pounds of red top per acre. No appreciable difference in yield was noted in these tests when the substitution was made.

—Kenneth Cox, Experimental Farm Nappan, N. S.
