British Despatch Puzzles Ottawa

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 4.—Despatches from England that the King has given his assent to the peace treaty, are arousing much concern. Just what the despatches mean is uncertain. There were two bills before the British Parliament. One expressed approval of the German peace treaty; the other, approval of the Anglo-French treaty. Under the bills, the King may do everything necessary for the carrying out of the treaties. It is assumed here that the despatches mean that the King has given royal assent to the two bills, not that he has formally ratified the treaties.

If, however, the despatches mean that formal ratifications have been deposited in Paris, as recommended, a constitutional situation will arise. The special session of the Dominion Parliament is being called expressly to approve ratification of the peace treaty, and to carry on such legislation as may be necessary. If the King has already ratified the treaty, the session will be more or less of a dead letter, except in so far as legislation to continue orders-in-council is concerned. "It is inconceivable to me," one high authority put it today, "that formal ratifications can have been deposited without waiting for the approval of the Parliament overseas. While such an action would be quite legal, it would, in my opinion, constitute in the light in which it is regarded today. There would, in that event, undoubtedly be an emphatic protest from the Government and from the Dominion Parliament."

Duration of War.

Ratification by the King further raises the important question of the duration of the war. The War Measures Act expires on proclamation by the Governor-General, that a state of war has ended, and with the Act expires prohibition, race track betting and other war-time orders-in-council. It is conceivable that the Canadian proclamation might be delayed after the formal proclamation of peace in Great Britain. But in view of the recent opinion of Sir Allen Aylesworth, former Minister of Justice, "The war ends when the King so declares," this would probably only lead to more constitutional tangles and a battle in the courts, whether the orders-in-council were in force or not. So far as periods of time expressed in the German peace treaty are concerned, the treaty comes into force on ratification by Germany and by the principal allied and associated powers. But, to cite the treaty itself, "In all other respects the treaty will enter into force for each power at the date of the deposit of its ratification." There is, therefore, also the question whether ratification by Great Britain does not bring about a state of peace between the two powers without waiting for further ratifications.

The question is under close consideration, and it is understood correspondence is under way with the Imperial Government, that the exact situation may be determined.

MOTHER WORRIED ABOUT DAUGHTER

MRS. BELVEA WAS ALMOST IN DESPAIR ABOUT MARJORIE—"TANLAC IS THE GRANDEST MEDICINE IN THE WORLD" SHE SAYS

The change I have seen take place in our little twelve year old daughter's condition during the past few weeks certainly seems wonderful and makes me want to tell everybody about Tanlac," said Mrs. B. Belyea, who resides at 173 Millican avenue, St. John, when the Tanlac representative, who had heard of the remarkable case, called recently to ascertain the facts.

"We really feel," continued Mrs. Belyea, "that Tanlac has saved Marjorie's life. What it has done for her seems almost like a miracle. For more than a year she had suffered from stomach trouble and was in such terrible pain at times that she would just scream. She had no appetite and could not eat anything without just suffering agony from the gas on her stomach. She would have such acute pains in her stomach at times that she would almost go into convulsions. When the spells came on I would just have to take her in my arms and it looked like she would die. Really, it was awful to see her suffer like she did and I was worried about her so I just could not sleep. She was under treatment four different times and we gave her every kind of medicine we could think of—even had an Exray picture of her stomach—but she got worse in spite of every means we tried and we just felt like she couldn't live much longer.

"We finally decided to try Tanlac, having read how it had helped others, although we had little faith in it to help her. But we got a bottle any way, being so anxious to do everything possible, and to our great surprise and delight she soon began to get better. By the time she finished the first bottle she was eating heartily and seemed to digest her food perfectly. She never complains of the least pain in her stomach now and while she has just finished her second bottle of Tanlac she seems to be as well as she ever was in her life. She runs and plays with other children something she hasn't done in more than a year, and she eats just anything she wants and enjoys it. It hardly seems possible that a medicine could do so much for one in so short a time. We never let an opportunity to tell what Tanlac has done for Marjorie go by. We just think it is the grandest medicine in the world and ought to be in every home."

Borden Writes to Cheese Men About Prices

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 4.—There was a large attendance of buyers and sellers at the meeting of the Cheese Board today. Some interesting correspondence which passed between the secretary and Sir Robert Borden was read. The first letter from the Premier dealt with the protest from the board relative to the fixing of maximum price for cheese and in this he pointed out that any action of this kind which might be taken by the British Government would be a purely domestic matter having as its object the reduction of the extremely high cost of living of which the public generally is complaining.

The second communication from Sir Robert was in reply to a resolution adopted by the representatives of Cornwall, Napanee, Inouquois, and Brockville boards with respect to the matter of the price of cheese and suggesting that the Dominion government for the purpose of reducing the rate of exchange should give a credit to the Imperial Government to be used for the purchase of Canadian cheese.

Borden's Reply.

"I might point out that the Dominion Government during 1917 and 1918 extended credits to the very large amount of seventy-five million dollars to the Imperial Government for the purchase of the exportable surplus of Canadian cheese, and I am advised that but for this action on our part the cheese could not have found a market in Great Britain as funds could not otherwise have been made available in Canada for its purchase. This year the British Government has made no request for a credit from us for the purchase of our cheese. So far as exchange is concerned, that is a matter which no action on the part of this Government can materially affect as it depends upon many considerations such as the balance of trade between America and Europe and upon the amount of credits extended by United States to European countries.

On the extension of a credit to the British Government for the purchase of our cheese even in the British Government required such a credit would have no appreciable effect upon sterling exchange as the amount involved while large in itself is small relatively to the immense aggregate of transaction between Europe and America. We realize the extreme importance to Canada of the cheese industry, and have always been willing to the extent of our power to assist in its development and extension. Faithfully yours, R. L. Borden."

Have Been Offered Highest Price.

Among those who took part in the deliberations of the meeting were: T. A. Thompson, secretary of the Eastern Ontario Dairyman's Association, and Prof. G. G. Publow, chief dairy inspector for Eastern Ontario. The latter stated that there should be no misunderstanding regarding the price of cheese. There has been no price fixed. Canadians have been offered the highest price England can afford to pay and at the price stated, the British Food Ministry will hold the cheese for a time in Canadian storage houses. He has every faith in Dr. J. W. Robertson, adviser to Sir Robert Borden on the European food situation, and he expressed the hope that the producers would have the same confidence. There should be a fair profit at 25 cents per pound for cheese, he said, and the producers should not become discouraged. In closing Mr. Publow appealed to the producers to keep the standard of cheese up to the highest mark.

INSISTS THAT KAISER MUST BE PUNISHED

PARIS, August 11.—Louis Barthou, former Premier and Foreign Minister, read his report on the peace treaty to the treaty commission of the Chamber of Deputies today. The report was laid on the table of the House before it rose, so that the printing of it could begin at once.

The Chamber will decide on Thursday whether the debates on the treaty will open August 25 as proposed, which would insure its ratification about September 3. However according to latest news, the committee of presidents of groups and committees of the Chamber, is understood to have decided to postpone the debates until Sept. 2.

The report of M. Barthou, of fifty pages, concludes in favor of ratification. At the same time it formulates certain reserves. M. Barthou commends the action of the negotiators in departing from the old-time methods of procedure, but regrets that they did not from the outset decide upon complete destruction of Bismark's work by breaking up political Germany.

On the question of responsibilities and punishments the former premier grouped in striking fashion quantities of documents hitherto scattered from which he develops new considerations establishing the crushing responsibility of the former Kaiser and Germany, and declares that international morality will not be satisfied unless the chief guilty persons are punished.

MUSSEL SHELL INDUSTRY ACTIVE

MOUNT CARMEL, Ill., Aug. 10.—The demand for mussel shells in southern Illinois, southern Indiana and western and northern Kentucky, is greater this season than for many years, and the prices are the highest on record. This has resulted in great activity along the Wabash and other streams where the mussel industry is active. Many new camps have been established along the Wabash, the Ohio and the White rivers. During the war there was little activity but this summer numerous new button factories have been erected.

A WORD ABOUT THE SPORTS

Looking over the various programmes in the papers I noticed that some of the race tracks are putting on the second meeting of the season. Why not Kinkora put on the second meeting for to help their bad day on July 16, which was unfavorable. I want to say as a spectator if Kinkora would put on another horse race with a good free for all, and the racing as good as they had on July 17th following the previous day I will venture to say that the public will bear with me in saying that they would have one of the biggest meetings of the season. Kinkora has always been up to date in their accommodations and courtesy. Thanking you for your valuable space.

SYDNEY FISHERIES PROPOSED

SYDNEY, Cape Breton, August 10.—A proposal to operate a large fishing fleet out of the port of North Sydney and to erect there a cold storage plant to take care of the catch is now being considered by Massachusetts capitalists and North Sydney men. North Sydney is exceptionally well situated for a base for fishing operations but the handicaps hitherto has been the lack of cold storage facilities at port. The North Sydney men interested in the present project are now in Boston in consultation with men connected with the fish trade.

A SOUVENIR FOR OUR NURSING SISTERS

The Young Ladies of This District Who Were Overseas Proved a Big Factor in Winning the War.

Followers of Florence Nightingale (that immortal heroine) who made great sacrifices in order that they might serve their country overseas are deserving of special mention in any history of modern times.

It is not too much to say that our Allies would never have won so brilliant a victory had it not been for the noble and heroic work of our nursing sisters. Perhaps no greater proof of the worth of our nursing sisters overseas was the bombing of hospitals and Red Cross ambulances by the Germans.

Not the least of these noble women, are the daughters of this district who left to offer themselves for their king and country.

A special souvenir in the shape of a Memorial Volume which will deal with the work of your nursing sisters, a volume that will contain a concise sketch of their lives and a section comprising a photo engraving of each and every one of these heroines, is in course of preparation. No more splendid souvenir could be devised. As a lasting enduring memorial it surpasses all others and will become a heirloom in the family.

Full particulars may be had from Mr. D. K. Currie who is acting as Associate Editor, or Mr. J. R. Burnett, Local Representative.

Urge That The Embargo Be Removed Against Import Of Canadian Cattle

Scottish Chamber of Commerce Suggests Method to Break the American Combine in Britain.

LONDON, August 8.—The action of the British Board of Agriculture in continuing the embargo against the importation of Canadian cattle finds no sympathy in Scotland. At the annual meeting of the Scottish Chamber of Commerce, just concluded, a resolution was passed that the Act imposing the embargo should be repealed. It was stated that many members had favored the embargo because they accepted the British Government's fear of disease, but now that this ground had been abandoned, it had become a plain case of protection for British cattle-breeders, they favored the removal of the embargo. As regards the argument that the British cattle-breeders needs protection, it was urged that the home producer had ample margin for developing his industry, the proportion of home to imported supplies for 1918 being 58 per cent. Last year the United States and South America, two sources dominated largely by the Chicago packers' trusts, contributed about 70 per cent. of British meat imports, excluding bacon and hams, and it is therefore pointed out in Scotland that the importation of Canadian cattle should be encouraged in order to break the American combine.
