An Adventure In Years BY CAROLYN BEECHER

Sonia led herself into the studio. Ned stood before his easel, tall and still—a statue of vital youth. Her face glowed, but her eyes flamed. All the colorlessness she pretended, all the suppressed fire of her spirit was pitilessly apparent. (He was young—ready for love, for life.)

Ned turned and smiled at Sonia. She had just emerged from another struggle with herself. She would treat him always as if he were a big child. That same decision she had made so many times before—and so far failed to keep. He moved a chair for her, then sank into one himself.

"You're a dear boy!" she said, and kissed him lightly on the cheek. Then to hide her own embarrassment and his she went on: "Did I frighten you. Hasn't any one ever kissed you before? I've made you blush like a girl. You'll have to get accustomed to me, Ned. I'm going to mother you a lot."

Ned muttered something. She touched his cheek lightly with her finger. It almost burned her, it was so hot. Then she patted his hand. It was icy cold. "Do you want me to be nice to you—to mother you?" she asked as she sank into the easy chair he had placed for her.

"I guess so—yes—I don't know." The boy's embarrassment was pitiful. But Sonia only laughed and pretended not to notice. It was sure proof he was not accustomed to kisses. It made her thrill with happiness. If only she could keep him like this—her boy.

She would be everything that was good—to him. It would be easy to be a noble woman if he believed in her, expected it of her. "Come, then, shake hands on it. I am to be your mother, you my dear, obedient son."

He just touched her outstretched hand, his eyes lowered, then drew his fingers away. She laughed softly. "How shy you are, Ned, for such a great big boy!" Again she laughed that soft, rippling laugh he had always said to himself was like music.

She saw the flaring admiration in his eyes. But in her own there dwelt a brooding fire. Just then Strong came in. His glance swept the two sitting so near each other. Sonia quivered as if a wound had been touched, so desperately did she resent his coming.

"We were beginning to understand each other," she said to herself, her hands clasping and unclasping in her lap. Then: "Ned, give me a cigarette, please." He had taken one from his gold case, the case she had saved part of her allowance to give him, and was lighting it. He passed it to her. Then Strong spoke: "I'll have one also. When one is nervous and disturbed there is nothing like a smoke."

Ned held out the case. Strong took a cigarette, lit it and moved over to the easel. "Been working?" he asked. "Not long."

The picture on the easel, a portrait of a child about eight years old, was charming in the simplicity of its conception and arrangement. The straight little frock, the tousled hair, and color in some places, brown in others, the wide-open, questioning eyes, all were charmingly portrayed.

"One of the best things Ned ever did—don't you think?" "You think so?" "Yes, it is charming." "You hear, Ned. Sonia says it is good."

"And you?" Ned's eyes were raised to Strong, the man all forgotten in the artist. "He will always divide himself—an artist always—no matter what happens," Sonia said to herself as she lay back lazily smoking and listening to the conversation about the picture, the placing of the high lights and shadows.

Finally she arose. "I think I will run along. Bring Ned home to dinner to-night. Beverly. We are going to have his favorite dish—fricassee d chicken. Be sure and have plenty of biscuits and lots of gravy." Ned said boyishly, as he assisted her with her wrap. "I'll see you have all you can eat," she responded, then to Strong: "Come early, Beverly, and we'll go some day afterward. A play or moving picture."

"Very well." Once away from the studio Sonia said to herself: "I shall have no more trouble now. He will think I care only as a mother cares. And why shouldn't I? Many women care for men younger than themselves. There is no wrong in my loving him as long as I wrong neither myself nor him—nor Beverly!"

She had often thought of the fascination very young woman and girls have for older and for very old men. Why shouldn't young women have the same fascination for men older than they? What was sauce for the gander might well be sauce for the goose also.

Like many other women she forgot convention, forgot that something in society that frowns upon a woman and laughs at the same thing in a man. (To Be Continued.)

The Markets THE PROVISION MARKET

MONTREAL, May 1.—The market for live hogs yesterday was quiet and without any special feature to note, prices being about steady with selected stock quoted at $13.50 and sows at $9.50 to $10 per 100 lbs. weighed off cars. There was a steady demand for small lots of dressed hogs to meet immediate requirements and sales of city abattoir fresh-killed stock were made at $20.50 to $21.50 per 100 lbs. The Toronto market for live hogs was easier again on Thursday, the outside price for selects being $11.75 per 100 lbs. fed and watered.

Feature of the local trade in smoked meats has been the demand from some packers for American hams and a sale of car load was made on Thursday of picnic hams averaging 8 to 10 lbs. each at $9 per 100 lbs., and S. P. hams averaging 12 to 14 lbs. each at $12.25 per 100 lbs. f. o. b. St. Louis for prompt shipment. There was no change in the condition of the local market for Canadian meats, prices being steady with a fair trade passing in 8 to 10 lbs. hams at 35c per lb. 10 to 15 lbs. at 33c to 34c, and 18 to 25 lbs. at 32c to 33c, while Windsor selected boneless bacon sold at 51c to 52c per lb. and breakfast grades at 37c to 38c per lb. The demand for trimmed loins of fresh pork was good and prices were unchanged at 35c per lb. and trimmed shoulders at 22c to 23c per lb.

A weaker feeling has developed in the market for lard and prices have scored a further decline of 1-4 to 1-2c per lb. owing to the liberal offerings and the continued limited demand for supplies. Sales of Canadian grades were made at 14c per lb. in 20 lb wood pails, and in tierces and boxes at 13-1/2 per lb.

The receipts of provisions yesterday were 1,287 packages lard; 5 boxed hams and bacon, and 357 packages tinned meats. The market of CHICAGO, April 29—Provisions were firmer in response to higher quotations on hogs, although subsequently the hog market failed to hold. Prices at the close showed an advance ranging from 21-1/2c to 25c.

REG LEG THIEF HELD WITH GIRL FOR TRIAL. VINELAND, N. J., May 3.—Charged with having robbed Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ashton of $125, after trying them to the bedposts in their home here, "Reg Leg" Jack Gordon and a girl, being his wife, were arraigned this afternoon before Justice of the Peace H. B. DeWitt, and committed to jail in Bridgeton to await trial.

More than 500 residents of Vineland await the return of the prisoners. They were in the custody of Chief of Police Hudson and Hamilton Beghart, who captured them in Washington. Although Gordon grinned on the crowd of men and women, his companion buried her face behind her coat.

According to Chief Hudson, Gordon confessed, saying he was willing to take his stretch and go to jail. Put Shoe on Peg. In his efforts to cover his tracks after the Ashton robbery, he nailed a shoe to his peg leg. Gordon said he then engaged Pat Figaroli to convey him and the girl in an automobile to Millville. Just as he was about to attack Figaroli to steal the car, two of the driver's friends jumped into the automobile.

At Millville he hired Jack Kessler to drive him to Camden. His intention to steal that car was spotted by the appearance of a friend of Kessler's who asked the driver for a "lift."

The police say they learned Gordon was preceded here by a nurse, who was delegated to obtain information relative to the wealth and habits of leading families. Then he and the girl came here and registered at a hotel as Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith. The police assert Gordon visited the Ashton home first because he learned Ashton did not believe in depositing money in a bank. He had two other houses on his list when he was forced to flee.

Chief Hudson said this afternoon he learned Gordon collected $1 to $5 from hundreds of families in the township by pretending he was deaf. He carried a card telling how "he suffered when fighting for his country in the Argonne forest."

BEST LIAR IN SEVEN SEAS IS BEING SOUGHT

NEW YORK, May 2.—The perfect job was invented yesterday with an inspired stroke and now the perfect paradox is being sought to fill it. The steamship George Washington is to have an official liar. He will have nothing to do but elucidate the mysteries of the deep for gaping travellers. He will get good wages. He will be supplied with trousers to hitch, a fresh yard to insert at the start of each yarn, a cutty pipe and probably with a forelock to pull at appropriate intervals. He must furnish his own whiskers, a weatherbeaten look and imagination.

Age Has No Limit.

If he's 80 or 100 years old, so much the better. No limit is put upon his fancy or his salty lingo. He will have to work only three hours a day. The rest of the time his mind will be fallow, or recharging itself like a storage battery, when he does work it will be with the companions of his choice. He will sing, O Muse of sea serpents and mermaids, of treasure ships and pirates, castaways and cannibals, of parrots and bacons, and 357 packages of tinned meats.

Cure for Leprosy Now Discovered

LONDON, May 2.—At last there is a prospect of permanent cure for leprosy, which means that thousands of outcasts may look forward with hope to the future. After 27 years in the Indian Medical Service, Lieut-Colonel Sir Leonard Rogers has announced that his efforts in medical research work have resulted in the discovery of treatment which destroys the leprosy bacilli in the human tissue.

Sir Leonard says that, while he does not claim to have discovered an infallible permanent cure, this achievement is nearer at hand now than it has ever been before. "In the case of one leper," he said, "slight was restored after treatment. Others have regained the sense of touch, and in the case of a man who could not walk two or three hundred yards before treatment, he can now walk ten miles."

Sir Leonard explained that for a long time the only drug known to be of value in leprosy was chaulmoogra oil, which is obtained from the seed of a tree that grows in the wilds of India. But this oil was so nauseating that it was impossible to administer it in doses large enough to be effective. "The first step in advance" said he, "was made by Dr. Heiser, the American doctor in the Philippine Islands, who injected the oil intramuscularly, and obtained an apparent cure in 11 per cent. of his cases as the result of a prolonged course of painful injections."

"It was at this point that I took up the work in 1915. I obtained a soluble sodium salt of the unsaturated fatty acids which form the bulk of the oil, and I found that I could inject this underneath the skin."

The Big New Annan Race August 17th

The big annual event on New Annan Race track is to be held on August 17th. The fame of New Annan Races has spread over a considerable amount of territory, it is always the aim of the management to uphold the good name—and "then some."

Racing classes will be announced later, which will include the fleetest horses on P. E. I., and perhaps some from the Mainland. Extensive grading and "trimming" has been done on the race course it is aimed to make it rank with the best.

Music, dancing, gymnastics, and special unique performances with all accessories which have helped to make New Annan famous are expected to be more in evidence than ever. The entrance for automobiles will be made larger and more convenient. The system of parking autos will be slightly changed also.

Horse racing is becoming more popular in P. E. I. every year. The "Sport of Kings" is loved by practically every red blooded person. Since "Bill Sharon" was sold for twenty five thousand dollars the "eyes of America" are turned our way, and it would not be surprising to see many foreigners, on the lookout for "another Bill Sharon," attend our races this summer.

Quite a number of fast and beautiful horses have been purchased at Madison Square Garden, N.Y., by some of our Island "racing Kings." Our people, (from the Western portion particularly) will have a chance to see those fine specimens of equine beauty in action at New Annan on August 17. That's the date. As many thrills to the minute comparatively as at Coney Island on a day in June.
