IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Agastine P. Chaisson died May 16th, 1919: One year has passed since that sad day.

When the one we loved was called away God took him home, it was his will. But in our hearts he liveth still.

By the family. 9236.

MR. JOSEPH CARTER.

The death of Mr. Joseph Carter, formerly of the Charlottetown police force removes a citizen who was highly esteemed by all for his amiable disposition and many fine traits of character. The late Mr. Carter had been a sufferer in recent years from a very trying malady which greatly reduced his bodily vigor. Lately he showed wonderful improvement but the trouble returned and his death following a series of painful operations is deeply regretted.

He was 68 years of age. The funeral takes place this morning from his late residence Highland Avenue at 9 o'clock to St. Dunstan's Cathedral. To his sorrowing widow and other bereaved relatives sincere sympathy goes out.

JUST A GIRL BY VNE PHELPS

A PROPOSAL A DAY

Chapter 23 Kenneth Lawrence had told me when talking of his ranch that he never left it without someone knowing where to reach him. I had asked him who had authority when he was away. He had a sort of superintendent, but nothing of any moment was done without consulting him.

It seemed perfectly wonderful to me that a young man could be so smart. The boys I knew just played around most of the time, even those who were pretending to work. I knew Tony D'and went into his father's office when he left college. He told us once that his salary wouldn't pay for his smokes. I don't suppose he meant it literally, but I guess it was all he earned if he had.

Then there was Jack Pryor. Jack was bright and quick. Dad once said that he would have made a success as a business man if he had been poor so he would have had to exert himself. But I am sure Jack couldn't earn a postage stamp. He didn't even attend to his own investments—he had some money from his grandmother that had been turned over to him when he was twenty, and he let a lawyer manage that for him. I said once—it was after I knew Kenneth: "I should think it would be fun looking after your legacy yourself. It would give you something to do."

"Oh, I manage to keep pretty busy!" "Busy! What do you do?" I answered my own question: "Play polo and tennis, dance and eat. Oh yes, you must be overworked."

"It would be a shame to work when I don't need to, Zena. You must have read how wrong it is for men with money to take jobs, and so take the food out of the mouths of the wives and children of the working men."

"Nonsense! What you would earn wouldn't buy their salt, let alone my food."

"Do you really mean you think a fellow ought to work when he doesn't need to, Zena?" "Yes, Jack, I do! It makes a man stronger, more manly. Someway he rubs it into a fellow who works whether he has to or not. Then, Jack, your father has worked all his life. So has mine. Why shouldn't you work, too, instead of living upon my brains as well as his money? For isn't that what it amounts to?"

"I believe you are really serious, Zena. I hope you aren't going to develop into one of those women with advanced ideas we hear so much about."

"I think women are awfully smart now-a-days. Why, they are doing everything men do—almost."

"That's all right for women who have to. But what an awful thing it would be if all the women wanted to wear pants!"

"Don't be horrid, Jack!" "I knew, in spite of my talk, that I never could do anything outside of my home. I also knew I couldn't marry a poor man or one with his wits to make. It would be perfectly ridiculous for me, brought up as I had been, to think of such a thing."

"Still I was reassured in myself, a good deal of the time. Mother had hired a personal maid for me; she said I took up too much of Heleine's time—her maid. So I had even less to do. Dad had given me a car, and a chauffeur of my own. How could a girl who never had known what it was to go without all the luxuries of life, be hardy after the way she had become accustomed to them."

I heard Mother say once that it was harder for people who had had money, to lose it, than it was for those who had always been poor.

Jack Pryor now proposed to me about once a week. I simply laughed at him, and treated his proposals as a joke. It pained him terribly.

I was very careful not to tell Mother every time Jack asked me to marry him. I knew she favored him, and so I kept it from her that I refused to become Mrs. Jack Pryor about once every seven days. But I had was on to be silly. He hardly missed a day that he didn't ask:

"Well, did Jack propose again to-day?" "To-morrow—A "Regular Fellow!"

SPRY AT 85 AND WANTS TO BE OLDEST SHERIFF IN THE UNITED STATES

Jerry Runkle.

Jerry Runkle wants to be the oldest sheriff in the United States. So he is a candidate in Darke County, Ohio. Runkle, who is eighty-five years old, cast his first vote for Buchanan in 1856. Runkle is known in Greenville, the county seat, for his "spryness." He is confident that he can attend personally to all the duties, if elected, and says he will make it hot for another mobile thieve even if the boundaries of Darke County enclose 604 square miles.
