South Africa
Pins Hope On Spin Bowling

(By The Canadian Press)
LONDON, May 10.—Aiming to treat cricketing laurels from the Mother Country this summer a band of youthful South Africans has embarked on a tour of England which will last the entire season. Elevation to the same standing in test play as England and Australia, South Africa this year will play a series of five test matches with the best England can muster.
One of the greatest handicaps to South Africa's progress in international cricket for many years has been inexperience but while the average age of the 15 players who represent the union here this year is only 26, seven have played in test matches.
Herbert F. Wade, sterling Natal player, is captain of the South Africans. The other players are K. J. Viljoen, Orange Free State; H. B. Cameron, E. A. B. Rowan, B. Mitchell, C. L. Vincent, A. B. C. Langton, Transvaal; I. J. Stedie, E. L. Dalton, R. J. Williams, Natal; A. D. Nourse, A. J. Bell, R. J. Crisp, Western Province; K. Balakras, Border and D. Tomlinson, Rhodesia.
Not since the days of Volger, Faulker and Schwarz has a team been chosen to leave South Africa with such an array of spin bowlers. Indeed in the bowling ability of the team lies its greatest strength in the opinion of English critics. Out of an attack of eight, no less than five bowlers are experts in the art of twisting the ball.
It appears as if the selectors of the visiting side had in mind the success achieved by C. V. Grimmett and W. J. O'Reilly, Australian masters of the slow ball, in England last summer.
While the bowling strength of the team is remarkable there are enough well known batsmen included to inspire the hope that the side will not go short of runs. Wade, Nourse, Mitchell, Cameron, Rowan, Dalton and Viljoen are highly thought of in this respect in their own country.
In the field an equally imposing array of talent is available. Cameron is highly regarded as a wicket-keeper. Mitchell is a fine slip and Wade has a flair for unusual fielding feats near the wicket. Dalton and Balakras are brilliant at cover point. Viljoen, Langton, Rowan and Stedie are all first class fielders.

Balakras is a Greek and he may become the first of his nationality to play in an English test match. In 1931-32 he accompanied the South Africans to Australia but was not chosen on the test match team. But he did not waste time. He sought the advice of Charlie Grimmett and today he is believed to be the best slow bowler in the Dominion.
Mitchell and Dalton are the all-rounders of the team. The former who walked out to the wicket at Edgbaston, Warwickshire, in the first 1929 test match a shy school-boy is today a confident batsman and a good slow bowler. He still retains some of the restraint that earned for him a reputation for caution.
"We are quite a young side," C. L. Vincent, 32 year old veteran of the side, said on the team's arrival in England. "I think you will like our fielding. That should not let us down," he added modestly.
Four members of the team determined to keep fit, worked in the stockhold of the Armadale Castle on the voyage to England. They were Dalton, Crisp, Cameron and Williams.
Jack Newman, former Hampshire cricketer who has been coaching the team in South Africa, commenting on the tour declared, "England will have to look to her laurels."
Since 1889 England has opposed South Africa in 54 matches and of these the Mother Country has won 28, lost 11 and drawn 15.

Halifax Player
Showed Talent
At Early Age

HALIFAX, May 11.—(CP)—When a young child in the Fiji Islands she showed talent as a dancer. At 17 she played in musical productions in New Zealand. Later she was chosen to represent the Maritime Provinces of Canada in an international motion picture contest. And now dark-haired Thora Adames, of Halifax, has captured a special award for her performance at the 1935 Dominion Drama Festival in Ottawa.
In the Halifax Theatre Arts Guild for the greater part of the three years she has spent here since her family moved to this city from New Zealand, she played Ada Mason in "Vindication," offered by the Guild at Ottawa. In the judging she ranked close to Brenda Ferguson, who played Jeanne d'Arc in the trial scene from "Saint John," presented by the embassy players of Vancouver, and won a memento presented by the Countess of Bessborough for the best woman's performance. A special memento given by the Countess for an outstanding performance was awarded to Miss Adames.
Now in her early 20's, Miss Adames was chosen from thousands of international girls who competed in the international "Panther Woman" contest sponsored by the Hollywood motion picture company producing the film of that character. The photograph she submitted before audition was taken when she had a part in a play produced in New Zealand. She came sixth in the final ranking decided at Hollywood.
Miss Adames, daughter of Wilfrid G. Adames, manager of the Cable and Wireless Ltd., at Halifax, was born in the Fiji Islands, where her father was with the Pacific Cable Board.
"She's been an actress ever since she was born. It seems to be second nature with her," Mr. Adames said smilingly when asked about her career.
Having displayed an early talent for dancing, she became prominent in musical productions when she and her family moved to Auckland, New Zealand.

Reveals Spirit
Of Noted Folks

LONDON, May 11.—(CP)—Rajah Brooke of Sarawak in his correspondence with the late Baroness Burdett Coutts is revealed by Owen Rutter. The Times Literary Supplement reviewer says:
"In the decade preceding his death in 1888, Brooke, often in need of money, was in the habit of borrowing, arranged to keep his government going. Throughout this period the Baroness Burdett Coutts, in addition to being his known friend, corresponded with him almost every three days, interceding with the Cabinet on his behalf, and financed him at critical moments; indeed, when at a temporary loss for a successor, he bequeathed his sovereignty to her.
"Had she belonged to another church, she would be on her way to canonization by now, that mild exterior, his health and brains, indeed every moment of her life, as a trust for humanity. Throned in her bird-sanctuary at Highgate, now the Holy Lodge Estate (800 houses where once hers stood alone), she founded a doctress, adored by the poor, and trained impoverished youngsters by the hundred for their profession; but never, till Owen Rutter unearthed his box of faded letters, was it suspected that she was an Empire-builder as well."
The sum advanced was not large, among the largest being $5,000 for a gunboat to prevent the recrudescence of piracy, and they were repaid; but they were crucial amounts to Brooke had sunk his entire capital in the country and never recovered a penny. She was, in addition, the confidante to whom he could unburden himself, the second opinion of which he stood in need, an experienced opinion too, for she moved in a world where he was a stranger.
Both of them were strong characters; she, however, had a heart and once there was an estrangement, but their friendship stood the test.
"Was there any tender emotion between them? Brooke was a handsome man of magnificent presence, and it is a singularly lovely face that looks out at times from the Baroness' youthful portrait; the innumerable proposals she received (and rejected) were not only due to her wealth. An heiress' lot was doubly difficult before the days of the Married Woman's Property Act, but she cannot have doubted Brooke, and indeed there is a tradition that she proposed to him by letter. The absence of that letter means nothing, as he would not have left it for other eyes to read, but the general trend of the evidence is against it. If ever she had a daydream, she forgot it amid the absorbing interest of her responsibilities, and tied to her office in England as any Minister of the Crown is to his, she could hardly have migrated to Sarawak."

Freighter Grounds
Trying To Avoid
Ice Field

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
CABARUS, N.S., May 11.—Latest victim of North Atlantic ice, the British freighter Langleridge was added tonight to this season's long list of shipping casualties.
She lay hard and fast on Bull Rock, a mile from Guyon Island, off the east coast of Cape Breton Island. Stranded while trying to avoid a field of ice, the coal-laden ship was surrounded by closely packed floes this evening while the government icebreaker N. B. McLean was rushing toward the scene.
Water was creeping into the freighter's forehold, but last reports from the shoreline were that the crew of 28, commanded by Captain J. R. Davies, were still aboard and would have little difficulty in reaching land if the ship had to be abandoned.
The Langleridge, 2,341 tons, left Louisbourg this morning with a large cargo of coal for Montreal, but the voyage soon ended, at least temporarily, when ice forced her farther and farther inland. Swept by a strong wind, the field hemmed the freighter on all sides after the stranding.
Earlier today the N. B. McLean reported heavy, close-packed ice from Cape North to Scatarie Island. The shipping route via the Strait of Canso and Northumberland Straits was not recommended.
Registered at Newcastle, Eng., the Langleridge is owned by the Medomsley Steam Shipping Co., Ltd. She was built in England in 1924.

On the Subject:

"Their Majesties, King George V. and Queen Mary—25 Years of Their Reign"

ESSAYS WILL BE ACCEPTED FROM NOW UNTIL JULY 31st, 1935

THOUSANDS of boys and girls all over Canada are now planning to go to University next Fall. Inspired by the fact that this is the Silver Jubilee in the reign of King George V., Simpson's has planned a special scholarship contest, believing that on this unique occasion, it is fitting that the discussions of the accomplishments of the Royal Family and the British Nation now taking place in every Canadian home, will have an outlet in the form of essays from the younger generation.

This is not the first time Simpson's has sponsored a scholarship contest for the benefit of those who planned to continue their studies at a university. The results of a previous contest proved so gratifying and the promising young people who were awarded the scholarships on that occasion showed such marked development in the years following graduation, that Simpson's was encouraged to provide this more extensive educational opportunity to young people, some of whom, perhaps, because of the financial stress of these difficult times, would be unable to get started on a college career. The twenty-five $100 scholarships, in the form of tuition fees at any university in Canada, will provide the contest winners with substantial financial assistance at the beginning of their college careers.

Read the rules carefully—you will find that there are practically no restrictions. You may send in your essay as soon as you like — but it must be received at one of the places specified in the rules by July 31st, 1935.

Women Enlist
In New Party

CALGARY, May 11.—(C.P.)—Women of Alberta have a new political party soliciting their support—the Social Credit League with its motto "Banish Poverty from Alberta."
Rural and city wives and mothers have been asked to rally to the banner of William Aberhart, founder of the movement, which is supported by Mrs. Aberhart, and her women lieutenants at the Prophetic Bible Institute.
A former school teacher and bank teller in rural Alberta, Mrs. W. W. Rogers of Calgary, is one of the prominent organizers for the League. She has travelled hundreds of miles through rural districts, and has addressed 300 meetings during her Social Credit campaigning.
Born at Steviack, Nova Scotia, Mrs. Rogers came west in 1915. After teaching for several years, she entered upon a banking career which ended, she tells interviewers, "when I quit to get married."
Confident of success in the new movement, Mrs. Rogers explains Social Credit as a plan to "put purchasing power in the hands of the people, and take Alberta forever out of the range of poverty."
Under the official title as "organizer for Northern Alberta," Mrs.

Rogers, a fluent speaker, addresses on an average of 12 meetings a week, travelling from town to town by automobile.
At the first convention of the Alberta Social Credit League, held here early in April, women delegates were active in the platform-building discussion. They took part in lengthy debates and final solution of the problems presented on the convention floor.

Medical World Study
Outstanding Cases

TORONTO, May 11.—(CP)—Expressing the hope that Dr. A. F. Laird of Owen Sound will contribute to the Canadian Medical Association concerning his revival of a girl, supposedly dead for five minutes, Dr. T. C. Routley, Secretary of the Association, said today medical men all over Canada were keenly interested in the feat.
I don't recall any case in Canadian medical history which sounds so dramatic," said Dr. Routley. "Adrenalin is kept close at hand by surgeons for its stimulating effect but I know of no previous case in which people have been revived after apparent death has set in for five minutes."
Dr. Laird is to be congratulated on his presence of mind and determination to exhaust every effort to save the child, even after physical signs of death had set in, said Dr. Routley.
Medical files show that in 1921 Dr. Cranston Walker, of Birmingham, England, brought back to life a child of 11 months after the heart stopped beating for four minutes.
John Puckerton, 55, an English gardener, was "dead" four and a half minutes in 1934 before injection of Adrenalin started his heart again.

A few months ago a 74-year-old man of Tyler, Texas, was revived after his heart had stopped for five minutes. Nurses had already called the undertaker when physicians decided to try adrenalin.
Adrenalin, a powerful astringent, was discovered 35 years ago by a Japanese and has been in constant use as a heart stimulant since. It is used as a heart stimulant derived from the glands of sheep.
Dr. Laird injected nine drops of Adrenalin into the heart of five-year-old Audrey Brown yesterday after a nurse told him the child had died after an operation for double mastoid. The child's condition today was improved.
