Regarding mail orders, we did intend to discontinue mail orders altogether, but have concluded to accept orders amounting to $2.00 and over. Many orders have come in as small as 20 cents and the postage takes it all if the plants are large. Have a neighbor join making up the amount necessary.

The Experts Say...

By The Canadian Press.

OTTAWA, June 14 — (CP) — Items of interest to Canada's busy house-wives, straight from the experts in home economics:

CANNING TIPS

Women who have canned for years, as well as those who have never canned before, will find it interesting and profitable to attend demonstrations in all parts of the Dominion to learn how to adapt canning methods to wartime conditions, says Laura O. Pepper, chief of the consumer section, Department of Agriculture...Home canning has never been as important at it is this year, and demonstrations have been arranged by trained home economists who are experts on all the modern procedures...'Watch for announcements of demonstrations being given in your locality," Miss Pepper advises. "Make a date with your friends to attend one of them--you won't regret it."

LUNCH IS IMPORTANT

The feeling of not being able to "get going" upon household tasks in the afternoon may have something to do with "tea and toast" lunches, and Marion Harlow, of nutrition services suggests that housewives try the experiment of a crisp, fresh salad, brown bread and butter and milk for lunch - - and then see how much easier their afternoon's work will seem...Canada's official food rules supply the yardstick by which to rate the nutritional value of meals.

STRETCHING SUGAR

Intending canners should not let the fact that they probably won't have as much sugar as they had hoped for deter them, the experts say...All fruit can be successfully canned without the use of sugar, if necessary; sterilization and an air-tight seal are the facts which keep fruit from spoiling. The canning sugar ration may be stretched through the use of thinner syrups than usual...A syrup of one cup of sugar to three cups of water is sufficient for most fruits. Housewives may obtain a bulletin entitled "Wartime Canning" by writing to the publicity and extension division of the Agriculture Department at Ottawa.

THOSE PIPE CLEANERS

Women whose husbands are smokers can find a use for pipe-cleaners - - other than cleaning pipes - - by employing them to hold the stems of vines and plants in inside window boxes firm and close to trellis without harm.

SENSIBLE SHOPPING

Housewives in urban areas can perform a useful service by doing their week-end shopping on Thursdays and Fridays, since there are many people who, by reason of their businesses, must shop on Saturdays, particularly those in rural districts and many business women who work all week...By making week-end purchases on Thursdays and Fridays, housewives in towns and cities can help overcome congested conditions and assist retailers in meeting their staff shortage problems.

HOSE ASSUMES IMPORTANT PLACE IN WARTIME

When Victory Gardens are the smart and patriotic garden project to undertake this year, special care should be observed to see to it that there is plenty of wear available

In this the lowly garden hose assumes new importance. Made of rubber, it cannot be replaced easily, and therefore it should be pampered and coddled just a bit.

The hose should always be stored on a reel or coiled on a flat, dry surface, away from sunlight and oil.

The greatest wear comes near the faucet. If the rubber becomes worn, the worn section of the hose should be cut off and a new coupling put on the cut end.

During the course of the garden season, if the hose wears out anywhere else, the damaged part should be cut out. Couplings will have to be placed on both cut ends to join them. Cut ends can also be joined by putting a short pipe, if available, inside the hose. The hose should then be clamped firmly to this pipe.

Four times as many pairs of spectacles are being used in Britain in this war compared with the last war. But this does not mean that the people's eyesight is poorer. The more scientific and detailed work of the present time requires a much higher standard of vision, and many people who in peacetime did not wear glasses are now compelled to do so. In spite of the shortage of labour and direct arms production Britain's optical industry is meeting 100 per cent. of this all time high demand, states the London Evening Standard. In order to meet the demand, makers are concentrating on 'austerity" types. There are no more tortoise-shell frames, no fancy rims and few coloured spectacles. They are now made og synthetic shell and nickel alloy.

With the manufacture of electrical appliances prohibited, very shortly there will be no more electric mixers on the market. Now is the time to give the electric mixer the care and attention it deserves. There are certain rules which should be followed closely if it is to last for the duration. The motor should be oiled at least once a month. For this the manufacturer's directions should be followed carefully. If the mixer starts to heat, the motor should be allowed to cool for a short while. When removing beaters from the mixer, take hold of the stem to prevent bending. Do likewise when putting them in. After each use, the parts should be washed thoroughly in hot soapy water and then rinsed well.

Labor Upholds 'Go Slow' Social Security Policy

LONDON, June 15— (CP) — The annual conference of the British Labor Party today in effect upheld the Government's "go slow" attitude towards the Beveridge plan for universal social security by rejecting a resolution which would have condemned the "timidity, delay and evasion" of the administration in respect to the plan.

The rejected resolution was in the form of an amendment to a motion accepting the executive committee's report which reaffirmed the party's support of the plan's "main features" without condemning the government's attitude. The vote against the amendment was 1,715,000 to 955,000.

At the same session the party elected Arthur Greenwood, former Minister without portfolio in the Churchill Government, to be its treasurer in place of home secretary Herbert Morrison who sided with the Government in its attitude of "endorsing" the Beveridge plan but postponing action on it during the war. Morrison, one of three labor members of the cabinet, thus was left without office in his own party.

Greenwood, who defended the government attitude after having urged in the House speedy and sympathetic consideration of the Beveridge report, was credited with a personal victory over Morrison.

The balloting for the office of treasurer, considered a stepping stone to the party leadership, gave Greenwood 1,253,000 votes, a majority of 327,000 over Morrison, while the only other candidate, Glenville Hall of the mine workers federation, received 519,000.

The heavy vote for Greenwood came largely from the powerful trade unions. Greenwood acted as liaison between the unions and the political wing of the party when Ramsay MacDonald was Prime Minister.
