Flying In 1937 Grades British Second To None

RECORDS OF EMPIRE PILOTS AND ALL-ROUND INCREASE IN AIR DEFENCE RESULT IN REMARKABLE YEAR.

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Dec. 21 —(CP)— Without fanfare and in the midst of pressing and unprecedented defence preparations, British airmen have written another chapter of glorious achievement in aviation's march of progress during the past 12 months.

Most outstanding has been Britain's rise from a second-class air rating to a position where her air force is regarded as second to none among the powers of the world.

Little has been disclosed about the actual might of the nation's air wing, although latest reports estimate 1,750 first-line machines will be available for home defence by April, 1939. This figure is materially increased by craft attached to the fleet air arm.

Factories throughout the land are working overtime supplying the needs of the stepped-up construction program and during the past two years the total strength of all ratings in the R.A.F. has more than doubled.

Since April 1, 1935, applications from 16,800 candidates for short-service commissions have been considered and 3,850 pilots enrolled. The number who have already completed flight training or in the course of training, exceeds 3,500. During the same period 25,200 airmen have entered the special trades such as flight mechanics, armourers, fitters, photographers and wireless operators.

Meanwhile technicians and engineers have contrived to produce machines which from the standpoint of speed, range and general performance would have defied belief only a few years ago.

Much Achieved

Fortified with his equipment, Britons contributed the following exploits to the year's record of achievements:

Flight-Lieut. M. J. Adam recovered the world's altitude record, reaching a ceiling of 53,937 feet in a Bristol monoplane last June.

Ten crossings of the North Atlantic [illegible] flying boats—[illegible] as forerunners of a regular passenger and airmail service.

Extension of the all-Red Empire service to India, Egyt and South Africa.

Jean Batten's solo flight from Darwin, Australia, to England, late in October, in five days, 18 hours, 15 minutes. This clipped 14 hours, 10 minutes from the record previously held by Jim Broadbent.

England to Cape Town and back in five days, 17 hour, 28 minutes, in November, by Flying Officer A. E. Clouston and Mrs. Betty Kirby-Green. They bettered the previous shutt'e record by 33 1-2 hours.

These are some of the best past performances. The future program calls for further attempts at conquest.

A special unit under Wing-Commander C. R. Gayford has been formed to make an attack on the long-distance flight record of 6,650 miles at present held by Russian airmen.

According to present plans three specially-fitted planes will take off from England sometime next spring on an attempted non-stop flight to Sydney, Australia —a distance of approximately 7,300 miles.

Until the Russians established the new record last summer, non-stop flying honors were jointly held by Gayford and his companion, Squadron-Leader G. E. Nicholetts. In February, 1933, they flew from Cranwell, England to Walvis Bay, Southwest Africa, a distance of 5,341 miles.

Will Attack Record

The Vickers Wellesley, a type of plane which has been going into the R. A. F. squadrons during the past year, has been selected to tackle the non-stop record.

Commenting on this project the London Times said editorially: The Wellesley represents only one of the contributions to the cause of wider radius of action. If it should be successful in the spring voyages, it will have served a most useful purpose as a sample of progress, and especially as a reassurance to British territories overseas which might need in emergency to look to Great Britain for help.

The land speed record is also being considered. But the task set has been more formidable since Capt. Wurster of the Bavarian Aviation Works, recently attained a speed of 379 miles an hour.

It has been suggested by aviation authorities that the air ministry might select the new Spitfire fighter plane, should decision be reached to go after the German mark.

The present world record speed for any type of aircraft is 440.6 miles an hour, established by the Italian airman Agel'o in a seaplane. Since the Schneider Cup races for seaplanes were abandoned, Britain has made no attempt to regain the record.

LEGENDS AND CAROLS

Long to be remembered, are the stories of Christmas. Every child should be able to look back in later years, when the dolls and sleds are forgotten, to Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, when the family sang carols and listened to the immortal tales of the ages.

There should be time, amidst all the bustle and hurry, for the family to sit down quietly and reverently, and in the hush of candle light, sing some of the beloved tunes we know so well. It does not matter about ages, as the spirit of Christmas knows no age. "Little Star of Bethlehem" is as appropriate for grandfathers as for Baby Kay.

No melody is sweeter than "Silent Night." "There's a Song in the Air", "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," "God Rest You Merry Gentlemen" "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear," and "Noel" all are old friends.

BELOVED STORIES

There are lovely stories to read, but none can compare with the Bible Story of the journey from Nazareth, and the tired Mary and Joseph finding shelter in overcrowded Bethlehem. In a stable with the cows and the sheep keeping watch, the Baby Jesus was born. And read of the Star that stood in the sky to guide the Wise Men of the East, coming to present their gifts. This is the real story of Christmas.

"The Other Wise Man," by Henry van Dyke, is one of the finest of Christmas stories. Older children will love it. The "other wise man" was the one who started with his companions, but lost his way. He spent years trying to reach the Master, to present his priceless gifts. But there were so many poor people to help on his wanderings that he spent his store little by little lightening the burdens of others.

Dickens' "Christmas Carol" we all know, Yet Tiny Tim is new each year. We cannot seem to let him go splendid little Tim.

"The Christmas Apple" by Ruth Sawyer; "Christmas in the Woods," by Beatrix Potter; "The Coming of the Prince," by Eugene Field, are other suggestions.

MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

All these things bring the meaning of Christmas closer to children's hearts. The candle in the window, the voices of wandering minstrels singing their carols under the stars, beneath the windows of the sick and lonely; the quiet pause, after the hurry of preparation, in the mysterious afterdark of Christmas Eve, bring each of us rest, and spiritual peace.

Children have a long road to travel. What things will they experience in distant years? No one knows. But one memory will cling when all others are forgotten. The family at home on Christmas, the soft lights on Christmas Eve, the songs lights on Christmas Eve, the songs above all else, as music and memory are almost interchangable. And the stories that mother or dad read when the world had halted to take breath, and Christ and the Little Child had seemed so near.
