NATIONAL TEMPERANCE

"It would seem," said Miss Brown, "that some can't say 'no' because they don't want to say 'no'."

"Still, there are some, who would like to say 'no' but just can't seem to do it. Do any of you know why that might be?"

"Alcohol may have affected their brain and weakened their will power," said Jim. "It might affect one more than another."

"Yes," said Miss Brown, "since no two people are alike. What is good for one is harmful for another. But, is alcohol ever good, Jean?"

"Only this way," laughed Jean. "Dump him in the vat. Pop him in the dye. Who wants alcohol in drinks?"

"Not if Not II Not II!" said the lass.

"Good," said Miss Brown. "To add it all up. People start to drink because drinks are served to them first—in homes, in clubs, in beer parlours, or in some place where people meet together."

"But I do think there are some nice people who drink a little wine or beer. They do not get drunk. So, maybe a little is all right."

"Now, Jim," said John, "how do they know they can stop at 'just a little' and then, if it is a poison, why take even a little? It affects the brain, and if the body is not well controlled it is like a car with a poor driver."

"One thing about alcoholic drinks," said Jean. "is that they seem to make people feel happy. They talk and laugh and forget their troubles."

"Now I read something on that," said Miss Brown. "Some friends insisted that they were brighter, had a better time at a party or dinner, if they had a little wine. One of their number had a record made of their conversation on such an occasion."

"The next night they met to listen to it. They were amazed how silly their talk had really been."

"I think even a little, Jim, is foolish. And that brings us to a word that is used for that. It is 'moderation' meaning, not too much."

"Do you still think moderation in alcohol is a good thing, Jim?"

"No Miss Brown," said Jim. "I didn't really think so, anyway. I just wanted to see what you would all say."

"Habit is a strange thing," said Miss Brown.

"Like me!" said Bill. "I still make nines upside down, because I started to make them that way when I was a little dodger. Now it's a habit I'm trying to change. Wow!"

"You'll never kill anyone with it," said Mary.

"I think many people do drink because it has become a habit."

In Memoriam

MR. JOHN SCOTT GARRICK

The death of John Scott Garrick at the Staff's Residence, Provincial Infirmary on October 21st, came as a great shock to his relatives and friends for although confined to bed with a heart ailment for almost three weeks his condition appeared to be greatly improved and he was eagerly looking forward to being up in a few days but God willed otherwise for on Sunday evening he suffered another heart attack and despite all that medical and nursing care could do he passed away Monday morning.

He was a veteran of the First Great War having served under Col. Ralston in the 8th Nova Scotia Highlanders and was wounded in France shortly before the Armistice was signed.

"Bus" as he was familiarly known was a lover of sports and in his earlier life was an outstanding baseball player but these later years the rod and gun and horse racing were his chief delight, through these activities he made numerous friends not only on the Island but throughout the Maritimes.

Although Bus has passed on, his blood still flows through the veins of many who are left behind, being a universal blood donor the requests or transfusions were many these he never refused until advised to do so by his physician.

He was Engineer at the Institution from where he passed away, for over twenty years, first when it was known as the Prince Edward Island Hospital and later as the Infirmary and many frivolous moments will be remembered by the Staff of these Institutions. No truer words could explain his character than those printed in the paper on October 26th which said: "Bus had a big heart and a lavish hand and endeared himself to children and older people by always extending his sympathy and help."

These kindnesses he especially showed to the children at the Infirmary to whom he was greatly attached.

He was a son of the late John Scott Garrick and Annie Watson. Left to cherish his memory are his wife, nee Sadie MacEachern, a brother William of Montague, and two sisters Myrtle, Mrs. Max Currie, MacLennan, Alberta and Bert, Mrs. Clifford Rose, New Glasgow, N. S. One sister Pauline passed away some years ago.

The funeral service which was very impressive and largely attended was conducted by his Pastor, Rev. G. C. Webster. Hymns sung were: The Lord's My Shepherd and Abide With Me, while the solo Christian's Goodnight was very touchingly rendered by Mr. Wendell Phillips. Interment was in the People's Cemetery.

The Canadian Legion of which he was a member attended in a body. The pall bearers, all friends of the deceased were: Milton Bell, Dr. Chas. Douglass, Frank Acorn, Garfield Taylor, P. A. Murrighan and Perc MacInnis.

Many beautiful floral tributes and messages of sympathy testifying to his popularity were received from the following:—

W. C. T. U. NOTES

THE MAKING OF THE SOUL OF MAN

I am grown haggard and forlorn from dreams That haunt me, of the time that is to be. When man shall cease from wantonness and strife, And lay his law upon the course of things.

Then shall he live no more on sufferance. An accident, the prey of powers blind; The untamed giants of nature shall bow down— The tides, the tempest and the lightning cease From mockery and destruction, and be turned Unto the making of the soul of man.

—Upton Sinclair.

THE MOST DESIRED THING ON EARTH

Peace—permanent peace—is today the most desired thing on earth. To bring about such a peace, we have fought two world wars with staggering loss of human lives. To establish such a peace, we have tried every device known to and planned by man.

Nevertheless, permanent peace is still but a vague dream. Nations, victorious or crushed, remain suspicious of each other. What is wrong? Why has man failed? What is needed?

On the battlefield, in the fox-hole, on the sea and in the air, it has been proved that the greatest force in the world is prayer—a faith in God. We cannot attain peace through plans made by man alone; we can realize it only by working for peace, fortified and strengthened through prayer, made powerful through an undying faith in the Universal and Omnipotent God. When everyone of every nation, of every race of every creed—each in his own language—prays daily for strength and guidance in doing his share for that desired goal, universal and permanent will become a reality.

"Whatever ye shall ask, believing, ye shall receive." Together with the other millions of the earth, let us pray!

—From a Prayer Card given to visitors to the Washington Chapel at Valley Forge.
